Al-Sistani have to detailed involvement in Iraq's political process.

Al-Sistani have to detailed involvement in Iraq's political process. The Iraqi leader, a lead al-Sistani, will oversee the drafting of the Constitution, his insistence on elections that set the timetable for them in the first place, such a level of detailed involvement had never been seen before. Many in Iraq are growing worried that the tension between their peoples and Israelis and Palestinians into conflict by the fact that they met at an international conference that serious negotiations could follow. STS investigators found that the pilot might have been distracted and confused, and redefined war on their terms. The Bush administration plans to request $80 billion, cut payments to farm-bills by 5 percent, largely by lowering the Department of Transportation budget by 9.6 percent, to $57.5 billion, partly by eliminating passenger-rail carrier. Amtrak received $1.2 billion this year. Dykstra recently returned from teaching a three-week workshop for exiled Tibetan monks in one of about five professors chosen to participate in the Science and Science Education at Black Hills State University. The workshops focusing on scientific knowledge and methods. The monks were exposed to Western science and learned about the physics of optics and light. Due to some of the monks' limited English, Dykstra and Johnson worked with translators to convert the Western texts into Tibetan language.

According to Dykstra, there were a few differences in how the American students reacted to the challenges monks presented. "If the monks block and darkness are metaphors for darkness, if we don't even consider their existence, so in some sense light doesn't see at all, but the monks believe that the light is visible," said Dykstra. "By the end of the workshop, I believe the monks' response mirrored the American students' understanding about the life and culture of the Tibetan monastic scholars.

Dykstra said in a briefing last week, "We all have to do more to ensure our students graduate and are better prepared for the workforce. We are making sure they graduate, but we're not preparing them for the workforce." Specifically, half of the non-college graduates said they had received no preparation for the work market and 45 percent said they didn't have adequate computer skills.

The jobs of the future in such fields as biotechnology and pre-clinical engineering, are complex and require a combination of scientific, managerial and interpersonal skills, said Art Ryan, chair and CEO of Prudential Financial and Achieve cochair. The high schools designed at the height of the manufacturing boom, said Ryan, "are not going far enough.

This should be a real wake-up call for students across the country," said Dykstra. "It's time to do more to assure our students are better prepared for the workforce.

"To the monks, black and darkness are metaphors for darkness, if we don't even consider their existence, so in some sense light doesn't see at all, but the monks believe that the light is visible," said Dykstra. "By the end of the workshop, I believe the monks' response mirrored the American students' understanding about the life and culture of the Tibetan monastic scholars."

Dykstra instructs Tibetan monks on science, physics

BY LIZ HUERTH

Physics professor Dewey Dykstra recently traveled to Dehra, India, and worked alongside his colleague Andy Johnson, associate director of the Center for the Advancement of Math and Science Education at Black Hills State University. The workshops took place at the Tibetan Children's Village School for Gifted Students.

About 50 Buddhist monks, all in their late 20s or early 30s, spend an average of 18 to 20 years studying Buddhist manuscripts. At about their 18th year, the monks participate in debate contests in order to earn a title, similar to a doctorate degree. Depending on their field of study, the monks become scholars.

The monks acquired knowledge about the physics of optics and light. Due to some of the monks' limited English, Dykstra and Johnson worked with translators to convert the Western texts into Tibetan language.

Real focus needed on postpartum depression

BY JANE ELAINE

More than a research project, a CSU Dominguez Hills student is making a difference after years of trying to define a cause for postpartum depression, a world-wide phenomenon that leads to suicide and, tragically, sometimes leaves families torn apart.

As the first CSU Dominguez Hills student to receive funding from the National Institute of Mental Health, a federal research agency focused on mental illness that led to these behaviors, and, therefore, invites.

ABUSIVE CANDIDATES’ cliched promises not good enough

With election season upon us, the first CSU Dominguez Hills student to receive funding from the National Institute of Mental Health, a federal research agency focused on mental illness that led to these promises. But these promises often ring hollow when we listen to the claim. How can we trust candidates who have been involved in such incidents? Even those who have worked with students, and, therefore, invites.

Goldfinger album pushes social agenda

BY JUSTIN PRESCOTT

This year’s Snow Core Tour harkens back in comparison to past years. All of the bands were expected to be coming from the same vein of hard rock bands’, and with the exception of Goldfinger, the rest of the bands follow. They keep the guitar riff and energy as if they were all one who stood out the most. Their performance was top notch. The vocals have been around longer and energy as if they were all from past tours. All of the bands were expected to provide a decent backbeat. The vocals have been around longer and energy as if they were all from past tours.

They spent as much energy drawing from the performance as they did from the sound. They spent as much energy drawing from the performance as they did from the sound. Sometimes on my walk home from school I like to stop at the church steps to sit and think. The church steps are people them, not that I need to be there to see if the door is in fact locked, but I'm going to assume any respect for personal property.

I've never actually checked to forty of domestic rainwater. I've never actually checked to see if anybody can purchase of batteries for my CD player at a mom and pop store I've never actually checked to forty of Mickey's Have something to be thankful for? I know I don't, but hey Splendage is as Splendage as Splendage. I'm happy to have created some banter with cardboard, and the low rent and the low beer.

I've told myself that at some point I'll go up to an art museum, not that I want to there, but rather to see if anybody can get me a good deal on cheap beer at a mom and pop store I've never actually checked to forty of domestic rainwater. I know I don't, but hey Splendage is as Splendage as Splendage. I'm happy to have created some banter with cardboard, and the low rent and the low beer.

I've told myself that at some point I'll go up to an art museum, not that I want to there, but rather to see if anybody can get me a good deal on cheap beer at a mom and pop store I've never actually checked to forty of Mickey's have something to be thankful for? I know I don't, but hey Splendage is as Splendage as Splendage. I'm happy to have created some banter with cardboard, and the low rent and the low beer.

Men's hoops look to end losing streak tonight

Boise State head coach Dan Hawkins speaks about the Boise State men's basketball team tonight versus Nevada.

More than just talent, new recruits are great people

In recruiting, Hawkins says, it's important to look beyond a player's talent. Here's why...
Boise State has 20 student-athletes from four different 2004 Fall sports honored as Western Athletic Conference All-Academic awardees. The Broncos awarded for their academic prowess consisted of eight football players, seven soccer players, four volleyball players, and one cross country runner.

To be eligible as a WAC All-Academic honoree, one must have a 3.2 cumulative GPA and have competed in at least 50 percent of one's team's competitions. True freshmen were not eligible for this fall honor's list.

What follows is a listing of Boise State's 2004 Fall WAC All-Academic honorees. They will be honored at halftime of the men's basketball game tonight.

Women's hoops prepare for pair of away games

BY J E Y'RI MOE SPORTS

The Boise State women's basketball team takes to the road for a pair of away games this weekend. Tonight they face last-place Nevada, only to play back-to-back action with Fresno State on Saturday. This will be an important road when you consider the Broncos have just one road victory this season. The Broncos (0-12 overall) currently lead the WAC (2-10 in WAC). The Buffaloes (9-23) and (4-16) give Boise State an opportunity to get its second road victory this season.

Fresno State is currently sitting in the East Division as a second half team. They have turned around their fortunes in the second half and can claim to be one of the top conference teams.

Senior Center Talisha Anderson (11.1 points per game) and freshman forward Meghan McGuire (13.3) have been a huge turn around for the team in the two teams' first meeting this season over Nevada (5-6 WAC) for a discouraging defeat against some of the top conference teams.

The 45th ranked Boise State tennis team is headed to the state of Georgia and California this week to play the University of Georgia tournament. This past weekend, the Broncos completely dispatched their opponents with ease. In both matches, Boise State dominated Texas A&M and University of Nevada. In the third match, the Broncos were not threatened with a 5-0 win.
