Spring break: Booze, sex, and sun all rolled into one week

Tips on surviving those seven days ofislamatic freedom

BY MIKHAIL BECKER

The time has come for Boise State University students to once again put away their textbooks and focus on the real demands of life: drinking, dancing, and dating. This week has traditionally been reserved for students to enjoy all the beer and booze before returning to school for another year of endless studying and exams. Now, everyone is ready to enjoy life to the fullest, and the best way to ensure a good time is to take a crack at drinking and dating responsibly.

According to Boise State's Health and Wellness Center, many college students put pressure on themselves because of this period. Unfortunately, many have been under the misconception that college dating and drinking are a step to the right direction of sex and romance. In fact, many college students believe that alcohol lowers inhibitions and makes them feel more open to dating and sex. It's important for students to realize that alcohol interferes with decision-making and raises sexual risks for individuals.

The ASBSU Judiciary has ruled that online voting by the Boise State University student body is illegal due to the current online voting process not meeting the requirements for a valid election. The ruling was made on Tuesday, February 1st, in response to a write-in vote for ASBSU president. The decision was made after the Judiciary had the opportunity to review the evidence and determine whether the vote was legitimate or not.

The ruling states that online voting is not an acceptable method for electing ASBSU officers and that the current online voting process does not meet the requirements set forth by the Idaho State legislature.

The ruling also highlights the importance of ensuring that elections are conducted in a fair and transparent manner. The ASBSU Judiciary has emphasized the need to ensure that all votes are counted accurately and that the results are presented in a clear and concise manner.

The decision also serves as a reminder that ASBSU elections must comply with the Idaho State legislature's requirements for elections. The legislature has established specific rules and guidelines for conducting elections, and the ASBSU Judiciary has a responsibility to ensure that these rules are followed.

The ruling is a clear indication that the ASBSU Judiciary is committed to upholding the integrity of the election process and ensuring that votes are counted accurately. The decision is a welcome reminder that the ASBSU Judiciary is committed to upholding the integrity of the election process and ensuring that votes are counted accurately.

Hundreds of thousands of anti-Syrian protesters throng Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon—Lebanon’s anti-Syrian sentiment, expressed by the shutdown of the country, spread to the streets of the capital for the first time in nearly a week. The protest was one of the largest demonstrations in response to the arrest of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, who was killed in a Feb. 14 suicide bombing.

In downtown Beirut for the largest demonstration yet, anti-Syrian protesters that erupted after a rally that was intended to counter the anti-Syrian protests that have gripped the country for a week.

Among them were Sunnis, Christians and Zionists, among those who had turned out across the country to add their voices to the calls for a complete withdrawal of Syrian forces and to demand a full investigation into the Hariri assassination.

Waving the cedar-emblazoned Lebanese flag, the crowd turned victorious, chanting "Syria out!"

As a policeman was setting up a radar speed trap in Jessen, Germany, an officer in a nearby police car called out over the radio: "We have a new radar speed trap in Jessen, Germany."

Dog owners in Finland, anxious to keep their pets at bay of wolves, will soon be outfitting their canine companions with electrified dog coats.

"That’s a lot of money," said one pet owner. "But it’s worth it to keep my dog safe."
Wolves are once again a hot topic.

Wolves are once again a hot topic. On Sunday, March 7, a rancher near Mackay legally killed a wolf he claimed was harassing his livestock. The new wolf management plan, which took effect in February, allows ranchers to shoot wolves that are "harassing" livestock. The Nez Perce Tribe has long had a biological program to protect the wolves through their connection with the Wolf Education and Research Center (WERC) in Winchester.

The staff at WERC makes this a valuable experience. Take a chance and visit the Sawtooth Pack: Wolves of the Nez Perce. It's a howling good time!

The Nez Perce Tribe has long been advocates of the wolf cause. They were the first managers of the reintroduction process, and their role has been some-what reduced, they will always retain a voice in the affairs of the Nez Perce. The Wolf Education and Research Center is home to the Sawtooth Pack: Wolves of the Nez Perce. WERC is located in the Nez Perce, who created the docu- mentary "Wolves of the Nez Perce." WERC is involved in the Nez Perce Tribe's long-standing affiliation with the wolves through their connection with WERC. WERC is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing for those wolf programs and promoting the public regarding wolf be- havior and other environmental issues.

The center begins its focus from the Pine Tree Tribe and is com- prised of a status center, permanent housing for the biologists, temporary housing for the biologists' interns, and a 20 acre enclosure.

The staff at WERC have protected the wolves since the center opened in 1985. The center has been the focus of many studies, and is home to the Sawtooth Pack: Wolves of the Nez Perce. There are five remaining wolves in the Sawtooth Pack: Amant Piyip, Motoki, Motorno, and Ayet. All five animals are magnificent creatures. Social welfare is just as important as education

BY LUKE ALLEN McPherson

Finding more money for state colleges is one way to ensure the best is done to educate them. Currently, the largest growing segment of federal grants are for state welfare. It is just as important to support the welfare and education system.

By first means to educate welfare is to ensure that the largest burden is not on the state, but also on the private sector. A recent study by the National Education Association showed that some of the states' most expensive burdens are placed on the state and local governments. This study showed that a large portion of the states' financial burden is placed on the welfare system. Benefiting from a $9 billion welfare program, the states must deal with the increasing expenses of the welfare benefits.

In the past, freedom and education have been held to a certain status. This has resulted in the states' burden increasing, which in turn leads to the states' burden increasing. As a result, states must be held to a certain level of accountability to ensure the welfare system is being handled correctly.

Last year, tuition and fees were expected to increase slightly below their previous year, and slightly above their previous year. Nearly 10 percent of the state's budget is assisted by state foundations, which are an important part of the funding system. These foundations assist the states with the implementation of their education programs and services.

In Idaho, even if the overcharge rate of 8 percent is not supported by government, it does make a difference in the states' budget. As a result, the state has been able to take on a larger share of the welfare system.

Additionally, many students in both Idaho and the United States are not able to attend classes in buildings donated to support the welfare system. For example, the Boise State University's main campus is a sprawling city, discussing which school district was built starting in the late 1860s. Assuming the same holds true for other state schools, we can see how much students are forced to pay to attend these buildings.

Another burden the state faces is the need to update the Department of Education. While taking up a significantly larger role in state schools, the Department of Education must be properly funded, many students in both Idaho and the United States are not able to attend classes in buildings donated to support the educational system.

Feminists can be Christians as well

BY LESLIE McPherson

In a letter titled “Women’s rights” in the October 11 edition, it was mentioned that Feminists are becoming new Christians. As a Christian, I must disagree with this statement. Feminists who are Christians, are not very Christians. They are using their faith as a way to support their beliefs and ideologies. They are not truly authentically living as Christians.

In this letter, it was mentioned that the majority of Christians are feminists. They believe in their faith. However, they are not in tune with their faith. Many of them are Christians because of their mother’s faith. They do not have their own faith, which is the spirit of God.

The majority of feminists also believe in their faith. They believe in their faith because of the feel-good factor. They believe in their faith because they feel they are doing the right thing. They believe in their faith because they are doing what they believe in. They believe in their faith because they feel they are right in their faith. They believe in their faith because they feel they are right in their faith.

We must apply the conditions in the scripture that states “whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand. The meaning of the scripture in Galatians 5:18-20 is that whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand. The meaning of the scripture in Galatians 5:18-20 is that whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand. The meaning of the scripture in Galatians 5:18-20 is that whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand.

In this case, the only solution to learning to hear, is to learn to understand. The meaning of the scripture in Galatians 5:18-20 is that whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand. The meaning of the scripture in Galatians 5:18-20 is that whoever has learned to hear, let him learn to understand. Seeking guidance, Nero found a Roman philosopher and, valid in their own right, only lead to the coin flip guess; NCAATournament. All expertise flies out the window, that is bracketology. It's the doubled-edged beauty of the eventual outcome of 64 schools when whittled down to one net-cutting champion. All their mental capacity is spent in hopes of one moment when they can predict the outcomes, and suddenly their guess is as good as ours.

But that shows the inevitable sports writers. Absolutely not. You can see, this particular army of cheap science, and media-savvy academics are no more in their research study, than they need to add “statistics” to their title in order to be perfectly in cloistered classes with the title in hand, before coming across the dashboard. This is what I subject them to. And suddenly, I sense the end is near. I'm left with a last attempt to change my college development.

The Boise State gymnasts were edged out by the University of Washington in the No. 28 Huskies finished third at the No. 30 Broncos (195.325 to 193.25). "Whenever you go on the road, you are dealing with different equipment, different officials. In the same way, we need to get used to whatever we did," BSU head coach Sam Sandmire said.

Both teams started a little shaky. Washington with a 48.175 on vault and Boise State with 47.55 on bars. The Broncos were then a 48.45 on floor and 48.525 on beam. The Huskies kept the heat on with a 49.1 on beam and 49.025 on floor.

Carla Chambers led the Broncos on the vault with a 9.875 and a first-place finish. She also was the top finisher for the Broncos on bars with a fourth place 9.775. On the beam, Lindsay Ward was Boise State's leader with a tie for third with a 9.825. Kristin Gaare scored 9.775 on floor to finish third as the Broncos' top placer on that event.

In the all-around, Chambers was second with a 38.95. Ward was third with 38.55.

The Broncos are unofficially ranked 28th in the west region. The top six seeds go on to regional competition. The Broncos are now off until Monday, March 21, for their final home meet of the season against Denver. Fans can come and see the gymnasts Monday night for just $1. "It's buck night, so everyone gets in for a buck," Sandmire said. "We are letting people with military IDs get in for free." Events begin at 7 p.m. in Taco Bell Arena.
