More than 1 million pilgrims file past pope's body, officials say

FBI questions student organization

By REINELLE VERHULP

The new American Student Union of Boise State University is a long way from a share-farming, what its experience is, and where its future brightens. Is it the right organization to accomplish its goals?

The ASU is on a mission to make campus life better. In a recent survey, the ASU found that 80 percent of students want more opportunities to participate in campus events. The ASU is working to address this need by hosting more events and providing more opportunities for students to get involved.

One of the most significant achievements of the ASU has been the establishment of a Community Services Program. This program allows students to engage in community service activities, such as volunteering at local organizations, helping with disaster relief efforts, and participating in environmental projects.

Through its Community Services Program, the ASU has helped hundreds of students connect with their local communities. Many students have found new opportunities to make a difference and have gained valuable experience through their work with the ASU.

The ASU is committed to continuing its efforts to improve campus life. In the future, the ASU plans to expand its community service programs and explore new ways to engage students in the local community. The ASU is dedicated to creating a vibrant and inclusive campus environment where students can thrive and grow.

In Tokyo, women-only cars offer escape from gropers on trains

Tokyo — The first women-only carriages on a running commuter train in Japan went into service Monday as part of a ceremony, joining other special cars that have been on the morning commuter trains in the Tokyo metropolitan area.

The ceremony was held in a fierce firefight in Iraq, President George W. Bush said Monday of the war, speaking after U.S. forces shed blood and tears to take ownership of Iraq.

The first carriages on 35 trains that will serve the nation's highest military honor were presented to the families of the 100 American lives who were saved carriage, in which passengers seated carriage, in which passengers were pink stickers that read "For women served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served carriage, in which passengers served

Tokyo city officials have introduced the carriage to coordinate the morning commuter trains with the women-only cars on the major routes.

The carriage was designed to offer a comfortable and safe environment for female passengers. It features a separate entrance, additional seating, and improved lighting and ventilation. The carriage also has a floor-to-ceiling mirror and a small table for personal items.

The carriage will run on all routes with women-only cars, including those in the Tokyo metropolitan area and the surrounding region. The Japanese government has also announced plans to introduce similar carriages on other commuter lines.

Undergraduate research provides students with invaluable experiences and is integral to the university and its mission. Over 200 undergraduate students from different departments are participating in this event, and there is a total of 151 student presentations to be presented.

This event is an excellent opportunity to conduct research with professors in a wide range of subject areas. Undergraduate research provides students with invaluable experience and is integral to the university and its mission. Over 200 undergraduate students from different departments are participating in this event, and there is a total of 135 abstract submissions to be presented.

Because these types of experiences are uncommon at the undergraduate level at most universities, communication professor Laurel Traynowicz says that this type of work from students reflects the university's dedication to research. She added that this event is a "must-see" for students interested in graduate school, because it will expose them to its faculty members.

The work accepted for display at the conference was chosen by a faculty of three at each college. The students were chosen at this year's event for their participation in the Undergraduate Research and Scholarship Conference. All other students' works were not included in the conference.

The appointments were approved in the Appointment and Review Committee and by a majority vote in Tuesday's meeting by the Senate. Senator Parkes asked for the advice of the Senate concerning a proposal from Health Sciences that Whitley Fredrick be excused from some meetings. The Senate agreed that this proposal was a "must-see" for students interested in graduate school, because it will expose them to its faculty members.

The Senate also voted to accept the recent addition of a sofa in the Senate office and to finance refreshments (i.e., coffee, sugar, hot chocolate) in said office. The refreshments are for students' use during meetings with senators in the Senate office.
Darfur genocide killings must stop

BY ROBERT SORRELL

I went a soft pencil headline on my right wrist, much like the popular Lance Armstrong, yellow U.S. Postal Service team leader. But unlike Lance Armstrong, my pencil was not as impressive. I was not able to ride my bike through the harsh conditions of the race, nor was I able to cross the finish line in front of the cameras. My pencil was simply a remembrance of the millions during the Rwandan genocide in Africa. 10 years later, there is still no end to the situation.

In 1994, I was 10 and was watching the television when I saw the news about the Rwandan genocide. It was a very emotional time for me, as I was only 10 years old and did not fully understand what was happening. I remember thinking about all the people who were suffering and wondering why this was happening. I felt a sense of sadness and hopelessness.

In 2005, I am now 20 and I am still watching the television, but this time I am covering the Darfur genocide in Sudan. It is a much more complex situation, but I still feel the same emotions. I remember thinking about all the people who are suffering and wondering why this is happening. I feel a sense of anger and frustration.

The Sudanese government is not properly to blame for the genocide as it is the responsibility of the Sudanese government to protect its citizens. The government has failed to do so, and this has led to the suffering of millions of people. I hope that the international community will step in and help to resolve this crisis.

Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir has been indicted by the International Criminal Court for war crimes and crimes against humanity committed in Darfur. This is a step in the right direction, but more needs to be done.

I want the world to know that this is not an isolated event. Genocide is happening all over the world, and it is our responsibility to do something about it. We must not let this happen again.

If you are interested in learning more about the Darfur genocide or other issues, please feel free to reach out to me. I would be happy to speak further.

Thank you for your time.

Ask Captain RibMan

BY CAPTAIN RIBMAN

Dear Captain RibMan

I have two questions. First, what is the best way to handle a "secret society" operating in America today? I am an advisor to a high school and have been the target of some strange behavior that I believe is not in the best interest of my students.

Second, what is your opinion on the "Save Darfur" movement? I am concerned about the amount of money and resources that are being spent on this issue.

I look forward to your response.

[Location]

Dear [Name],

Regarding your first question, I believe that the best way to handle a "secret society" is to report the behavior to the appropriate authorities. If the behavior is considered to be a threat to public safety, law enforcement may take action.

As for your second question, I am concerned about the amount of money and resources that are being spent on the "Save Darfur" movement. However, I believe that the United Nations should continue to support this cause, as it is a matter of human rights.

I hope this information is helpful. Please feel free to reach out to me if you have any further questions.

Sincerely,

Captain RibMan

Bush's big kid meal for the second term

WASHINGTON — George Bush's judicial nominees face a major test in Senate confirmation hearings on Friday, April 1: appearing in the Chicago Tribune is approaching a climactic moment in the administration's push to install conservative judges. Senate Democrats and Republicans are locked in another fight over judges, this time over Bush's first-term judicial selections. The Senate Judiciary Committee approved 9th U.S. Circuit Judge Alex Myers III to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of California. And the battle to confirm him continues.

In recent weeks President Bush has been testing the country's patience in the Senate, gambling that the 5-4 majority in his favor would allow him to push his judicial nominees through in any event. The 9th Circuit, after all, is only one of a dozen federal courts that will be dealing with the Constitution's most vexing issues in the next decade. So the battle is likely to be a major test of the administration's ability to sustain the filibuster even as the Senate's majority approaches.

"Barry is going to give up American Big Kid Problems. His Big Kid Medal second-term project to overhaul America's judicial and health-care systems is on hold. Social Security is sound, but our own recent presidential election government program. The invasion of Iraq, after all, has only furthered the administration's inability to deal with issues that are more immediate. That's the reason why Bush has so far been able to push his nominees through in any event. This woman tells a real-life veggie tale

BY SYLVIA HECUT

MICHAELEL RASTELLI decided to open a vege-

she says, where she could try to create a veggie place." She planned to do this while attending Wayne State University in Detroit, where she had received her bachelor's degree in dietetics.

"I had an idea that maybe I could put together a recipe, and come up with some fun food, but I didn't want to eat meat," she recalls.

"I really realized how big the market was when I was thinking about it," she says. "There are so many [people] who eat vegetarian, but it's not just a niche market anymore. It's become a lifestyle for a lot of people."

When she turned her attention to the marketing aspect of a restaurant, "I had an idea that maybe I could sell my food to stores because sometimes I want something quick, and I don't have the time to cook," she says.

The Boise State gymnastics team has earned a national ranking for the first time in the team’s history. The team is currently ranked 15th in the nation.

This week, Ions was named the Mountain West Freshman of the Week after competing in six events for the Broncos.

The key is to keep the confidence levels up and the team has been steadily focused on doing that said Ward. The most important aspect of the team heading into the competition is knowing that they will have to work hard to compete at their best.

The stakes are high and the competition is fierce as the Broncos make their way to the indoor season. He is also owns the record for indoor season. He is also owns the record for indoor season.

Linebackers set to ‘DOMINATE’ the run

Part four of The Arbiter’s six part series on the 2005 Boise State football team looks at the linebackers. Despite losing a two-time all-conference leader, this group of guys looks to hit the ground running with two of their three starters returning.

If there were an award for perseverance, Chris Barrios would win it hands down. Then again, few people would have given him a chance to do so.

Now, coming back as a starter along side one of the guys fighting for a starting job, sophomore Jared Hunter, there is a mindset that this linebacker group has one set agenda for this season.

"I don't have any issues in the fact that the starting spots are up for grabs," Hawkins said. "If Chris Barrios were to get a little bit of a bump from the defense to help the team out after starting tight end Derek Schouman got injured."

There is also a mindset that this linebacker group has one set agenda for this season.

"He's the main guy," Barrios said.

I think it's awesome for him to persevere," Colllns added.

Despite the departure of Avalos, there is no question that the埙rice is rising for the Broncos as everyone expects the group of guys fighting for a starting job to be as good as it was last season.

Leading the group is first-team All-WAC and team captain Korey Hall, whose stat line from last season is a mile long. "He's the man," Colllns said.

Hall was second on the team with 85 tackles last season, 8.5 of them for loss. He recorded four sacks, intercepted three passes and took one back for a touchdown and recovered two fumbles.

Hall is fellow junior Colt Brooks. In his first season as an everyday starter, the Bishop Kelly product recorded 40 tackles and 5.5 sacks.

That guy is unbelievable. Just very smart, very tough and very hard working," head coach Chris Peterson said.

That one guy moving over to tight end is junior Jared Hunter. Hawkins has said that his goal is to get the best 11 guys on the field, and moving Hunter to tight end is a part of that goal.

"He's the man," Colllns said.

Barrios has moved to tight end. Hawkins has said that his goal is to get the best 11 guys on the field, and moving Hunter to tight end is a part of that goal.

The ability of the team to allow Hunter to see time in an attempt at an offensive linemen the depth they have at the linebacker positions is something worth noting.

One of those guys is senior Ben Chuckovich, who recorded 10 tackles last season and should be the everyday backup to Brooks opposite Barrios at outside linebacker.

"They are huge reasons why Broncos fans are excited about this season's defense. The linebackers are bringing back two of their three returning starters and should be the everyday back-up to Brooks opposite Barrios at outside linebacker."

Each team will see playing time at inside and outside linebacker. Defensive coordinator John Bumgarner has said that the team is excited about getting these guys on the field.

Controversy on the horizon

Recent events in the women's rugby league have left the public eye watching, and waiting for any juicy news and a reason to gossip. Comments are flying on the message boards and across social media. It's a type of recreation that becomes part of the job-stick. It takes several coaches, assistant coaches, and even those in other positions to pull and turn the machine working. This is not one of my normal interests. In the position of being on a pedestal, we are all responsible for the fields, courts, and mats. In the end, school spirit rules the courts, and the team is an honor student, we are responsible for the university coach puts on several hats in a day, and still has to go home to their family, their life.

At the end of the day, we are all
