Some students who have participated in the concrete canoe challenge have helped the university gain recognition in this area. The concrete canoe challenge is a great opportunity for students to apply their engineering knowledge and teamwork skills to a real-world problem.

A cheaper energy bill should be sign of prudence.

One of the biggest reasons our economy is performing like a white elephant in the 100 meter dash: high gasoline prices. We start off at $3.18 in the 100 meter dash.

Lights won't go on, transportation won't work. More money can't go to any cause you want.

What prompted this to write about the energy legislation? That we focus on a new country, China.

In the House of Representatives, the energy bill will be discussed and approved by the House and then sent to the Senate. If the Senate approves it then the president will sign it.

Energy conservation includes reusing energy. Over the years, the world has seen the need.

The bill will provide a potential revenue for the government programs that will help in reducing and updating the current energy bill and help the most sensitive people.

There will be a lot of changes that will be made in this bill. The changes can be anything from housing, health care, transportation, and even the schools.

The bill proposed was less of a change than expected. In this bill, changes are proposed to three times by the money. With the bill, we have to ask ourselves: do we really need this change?

The main reason is to help the economy. We should not brush off. Did you happen to see these girls off the court. Do we have them back at home when they and we play again?

This is a money bill for us. It is a money bill for us.

We'd also like to thank everyone who has helped us in the last month. Without the support of the players, the coaching staff, the parents, the fans, and the media, we wouldn't be here. We are grateful for your support and we appreciate you.

We hope that you will continue to support us in the future. We will always strive to be the best.

Thank you.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

You might as well go for it. The world has no alternative. If we want to prevent the next generation from living the way we did, we have to start now. If we don't, we will be faced with the consequences of our actions.

A cheaper energy bill should be sign of prudence.

We hope that you will continue to support us in the future. We will always strive to be the best.

Thank you.

The Boise State women’s golf team will host its annual tourney this week in its WAC home game. The WAC has decided to rotate the event on a four-year cycle, making it a once every eight years opportunity. With this opportunity, the team is excited to have another chance to compete in their home tournament.

The tournament will be held at the Boise State University Golf Course and will feature teams from around the country. The tournament will begin on Wednesday at 10:00 a.m. with a practice round, and the official tournament will start on Thursday at 8:00 a.m. The Green is expected to be in excellent condition for the tournament, and the Boise State women’s golf team is looking forward to hosting this event.

The team has already qualified for the NCAA Championships, and with this tournament, they hope to improve their ranking and qualify for the National Championship. The Girls’ Golf Tourney will be held at the Boise State Golf Course on April 19, and the team is excited to have this opportunity to compete in their home tournament.

The girls are excited about this opportunity to compete on their home course and are looking forward to a great tournament. The Boise State women’s golf team is one of the top teams in the country, and they are looking forward to showing their skills on their home course.

Spring was a "launching pad" for the 2005 football season

By Thomas Constantino

With just 10 weeks until kickoff the 2005 football season has begun with spring practices officially over, the Broncos began to focus on the upcoming season. The next question is how to be competitive. One thing that is for certain is that the Broncos will have to have a strong offense and defense to be competitive.

The $500,000 offensive line and zone blocking unit has both the blocking strengths and the receiving strengths that the Broncos have lacked at receiver in past years. The junior college transfer receiver who has done twice as much as his teammates has not let him down.

The short-yardage end zone block worked in both of the last two scrimmages. Despite a tackle Daryn Colledge during the first two scrimmages, Stringer has not been a kicker since high school, and Davis is new on the scene. The coaches need to do more work on the kicking game. Though no one has really been able to kick well this spring and Stringer has not...
Hooters can make it hard sometimes to read

BY DON WILKES

Grandma, it’s not true to paint Hooters as the restaurant. Like all good snake charmers, anything that brings fools into its tent requires a certain amount of manipulation, and it’s no challenge to make the fact that 1service at Hooters is a joke. On top of that, the few women who perform there are being made to look dumb, to do peacock-like, elf-like things, just to make the men laugh. Grandma, at Hooters, the restaurant.

Fun at Hooters (the restaurant).

A disinterested waitress (the kind who answers questions, not makes arrangements) pointed to her group’s table, where four women were seated. One woman was making a joke that only made sense to her writing partner. Having a group of a dozen girls and an oddball group of what appeared to be the latest in basement readings and subculture, a fair number of people were sitting at the table. I went to the grand opening (or something like that) of the Boise Zoo, which had few wild animals. Grandma, at Hooters, the restaurant.

I don’t know what I was doing there. It would have been better to go with my ever-expanding book collection and set of stellar photos of nature, which I had brought with me. 'Imaginary Heroes': A jumbled tale of family coping

BY ERIC RUENSCROFT Culture Editor

After the split, Tim experiments with Ecstasy and feels even more neglected by his father. Ben does ironically offer, however, to get tickets for Tim to see Nirvana in concert.

While the devastated characters attempt to handle their emotions after the suicide, that same devastation seems to hold the development of the film as well. At times, the random appearances of the grocery store cashier are more entertaining and interesting, if only as a way to escape the somberness of the other characters. The cashier meets Tim in the hospital after a car accident, gives his phone number to Sandy, and shows up at the neighborhood Christmas party, where he hooks up with the daughter of the family (Michelle Williams).

"Imaginary Heroes" has its memorable moments and doesn't strive to develop a happy ending for the lives of a family still searching for understanding. But the underdeveloped story prevents the lasting impact that could have been made with such an imposing subject as a family dealing with a suicide.

BY TRRUIS ESTUOLO Culture Editor

"Imaginary Heroes" is like a roll of exposed camera film. When the pictures come back, there's a jumble of great moments captured, but nothing looks quite right. The result can be a little disorienting, because none of the pictures could be developed as hoped.

Ben (Jeff Daniels) heads the Travis family, trying to cope with the loss of the oldest son, who killed himself during the opening minutes of the film. Ben, his wife Sandy (Sigourney Weaver), and their other two children deal with how the death of their eldest son has impacted them.

While Sandy takes up smoking pot, Ben demands that his dead son be given a plate of food at every dinner. Ben pushed his talented son to the verge of the Olympic swim team, but now he can't see how to move on from the loss of what seemed to be both of their dreams.

The youngest son, Tim (Emile Hirsch), not only found his brother dead, but breaks up with his girlfriend when she finds mysterious bruises all over Tim's body.

Writer/director/producer/star Matt VanderBoegh's rock opera "The Erinys" went on sale on the Morrison Center's Stage II this weekend to three amazing sold out crowds.

"It was unbelievable the amount of support the local community gives to local artists," VanderBoegh said. "The Erinys," whose underlying theme was revenge, was actually a follow up project for VanderBoegh and company, as it was produced off the CD that he compiled for his Masters degree in communication. The album itself is a little under ten minutes.

VanderBoegh, who seemingly had a hand in everything about the show, said everyone from young kids to seventy-year-olds wanted to shake his hand afterward. As if selling out every show on the weekend wasn't enough of a sign of a quality community reception, the line of ticket holders waiting to get in their seats prior to the rock opera's final show on Saturday evening was so long that it stretched around the corner of 14th and E.

Though normally he is nothing further scheduled, VanderBoegh said there could be other performances in the future, especially since the first three went off as well. After such a huge undertaking, though, he said his first priority will be "catch up on some sleep first."
