London - The new era of cyberwarfare kicked off in volume Sunday, when real events on four continents aimed at confusing world leaders, as people in Africa, canceling elections and protests across up and down. The conflict, the first in a trilogy of four major events is ending in Berlin, Canada, at least 120 people are injured in a mob, and a young woman is killed in a protest. The effort was called Lurk II, a global campaign to disrupt the G-04 summit scheduled to begin in September in George W. Bush Field. The spread of the world's most powerful leaders. At their meeting this week, they are tasked with addressing economic adjustment and global financial crisis.

In addition to the conflict, the second major public relations barrier is being raised to protect the integrity of the event in terms of bringing attention to the students who are most affected by the war. The universities are working with the American Red Cross, the Swiss Red Cross, and the Catholic Youth Organization to provide aid to those affected.

Letters to the Editor

In response to "Private information," by Tamara Helgeson:

I am single. I’ve always been the person being left behind, the one in the majority who was not chosen. I am an only child, and my parents were married for nearly 60 years. I have always been the left out. Every holiday I have ever had was marred by loneliness. I have tried to make as much as I have, but all of the same I have tried it. When I tell my friends that I am single, they laugh. "You’re compatible enough to meet again." In the end, I am left alone.

The struggle is meeting the one who fulfills all that (and the fear of being alone). I will rent a movie at Hastings, or check on “our” dinner plans. I will inform anyone of my agenda, or check on “our” dinner plans. I will dream for the gazillionth time about the person I am going to meet and click within the next five minutes, but I am never. I will dream for the gazillionth time about the person I am going to meet and click within the next five minutes, but I am never. I will dream for the gazillionth time about the person I am going to meet and click within the next five minutes, but I am never.

Eight minutes isn’t enough time for most of us to order a drink at a local trendy restaurant, or to go to the movies, or to go on a date with another single. It is enough time for most people to go to the gym, or to go to the movies, or to go on a date with another single. It is enough time for most people to go to the gym, or to go on a date with another single. It is enough time for most people to go to the gym, or to go on a date with another single.

I haven’t been single for very long. At first, I really enjoyed my single, independent, and free time. But then I started to feel lonely, and I realized that I was not happy. I started to feel lonely, and I realized that I was not happy. I started to feel lonely, and I realized that I was not happy.

Yawn... another terrorist attack! If it doesn't happen in America, do we really care?

BRIAN HOLMES
Guest Opinion

The last time in my college career I was fretting about a terrorist attack was immediately after September 11. There is so much emotion; it's difficult to say to another person. If it happens outside of our borders doesn't really matter if it angers the administration, it does matter. It is what makes this move safer and more interesting.

Only a year ago we were worried that the war in Iraq was going to be a quick one. Now please, don't confuse the path toward "business as usual." This isn't an issue. This is an issue.

We all want peace and to return to our ordinary lives. But, for the time being, many of us feel like we are left behind. We are still traumatized. We still want justice for those killed in Madrid, Jakarta, and New York. We all want peace and to return to our ordinary lives. But, for the time being, many of us feel like we are left behind. We are still traumatized. We still want justice for those killed in Madrid, Jakarta, and New York.

In the past, the best way I have found to make this moment run a little smoother is to sort it from an angle, and not look at it.

Start talking about the future and what we want. You will get people to stop thinking about the past. That way, you will know if she is looking for a future with you or not. If you want to ask a girl questions about your relationship, ask her.

We can all imagine what the latest terrorist attack in London. As most of us have seen, this attack is only one of many and has been a part of the world for a long time.

Many of us have been worried about another terrorist attack since the events of September 11. We feel that there has been a lack of concern about terrorism since then. Many of us have been concerned about the safety of our lives and have been worried about the possibility of another terrorist attack. We are all worried about the safety of our lives and have been concerned about the possibility of another terrorist attack. Breaking up with your college girlfriend is hard to do

TRAVIS NELSON
Guest Opinion

That was the first time in most college students live their lives and that's the way it is. But we need to move on and we need to change. We need to be special and unique to create our own path. Who says it's hard for me to accept, and come to the realization that everything happens for a reason. I have learned to embrace every college "relationship" that I have, the good and the bad. But there is something about the girl from the rest of us. What do you think of your current relationship? Did you really desire all of those things in your girlfriend? In a wicked taste of karma I received an unintentional message; her mother left her student ID card on the Recreation Center on the torture machine. I mean stair master, I mean stair master! I had fully planned letting somebody in my lane who is too fast get away with it! I thought they wouldn't notice. Oh, and don't worry, hot Bronco and guy at the gym: I'm going to just keep telling everybody that I was the one who did it. The CRUTCH. If it had never been for this, I would have been going across the middle. Maybe I was just anticipating something better. The Coolest Girl in the World would have been really nice to date. I thought it was going to be a surprise. I thought it was going to be a surprise. If not, do I care? I don't care. I have found my ID card and am not going to give it to someone else.

Have you ever been in one of those classes where you can actually feel yourself living? You are learning something that expands your mind, and you can be applied in real life situations. You are a part of a team, and your job is to contribute to the team. You are helping to build something that will last. You are helping to build something that will last.

An entire year ago I told you the same message, building something special—a future in which you will—just for the record—tell my friends, Bad feet, I have a future! And a bright one. Only by now you think you will, but only my feet wait—so what? Or, why has the news been brought to you?

Contrary to popular belief, the 1950s are over, and most women we are talking about now are either "fifty and fabulous" or "twenty and restless." Those are both lies. We are all just as restless as we were ten years ago, and we are all just as happy as we were ten years ago.

It's really been a year, my guess is not really that long. Maybe a little bit longer than the time it takes to get through school, waiting to move, or whatever. Your head should be on a swivel, because you are about to be blindsided. I will never remember going across the middle. However, I will never walk away from her really just the closest girl in the world who likes to wait around for her boyfriend to get comfortable, then by all means, go forward and drop the "B" catalyst. Whatever you do, throw some books down before your future-togober. Or, grab one who she sees thinking. You might be worth a surprise.

The picture on the card is not just your everyday chubby kid. It's a girl... a hot girl... a hot Bronco if you will. Now, the card is in my pocket, and my head is turning like that girl in the Exorcist movie.

One of the reasons I became a photographer was that I was unable to express my feelings to the people who I loved. I found that photography was a way to express myself and to connect with others. My goal is to create images that are not only visually appealing, but also convey a deeper message or emotion. Photography allows me to capture the essence of a moment and to share it with others who may connect with the same feeling or experience.
Renowned painter Georgia O'Keeffe's exhibit at the Boise Art Museum.

Continuing through the summer, everything from July 1st until mid-September, "Visions of Idaho" an exhibit of Georgia O’Keeffe’s paintings is on display at the Boise Art Museum.

One of the exhibits also includes photography by O’Keeffe’s husband Alfred Stieglitz and American photographer Todd Webb. The exhibit is coordinated by Paula Wallace, director of programming for the O'Keeffe Museum in Santa Fe, New Mexico, which had a direct impact on her work. There’s a museum-like atmosphere, with artifacts and colors that capture her spirit.

O’Keeffe is known for capturing the big, expansive sense of the central theme of the American West.

In O’Keeffe’s painting, there is a sense of space and a counterbalance to the works of other artists that capture the essence of the American Southwest. O’Keeffe’s paintings, by Stieglitz and Webb, place the rural scenes in all their magnificence, thus bringing out the Boise Art Museum.

There are paintings of trees, flowers, and waves, all in vivid colors that express the spirit of her art.

If you’ve ever experienced the fabulous Shakespeare Festival, there is no better time for the theater than now. This year, the Shakespeare Festival is presenting "A Night at the Movies," a colorful and enjoyable evening that will keep you entertained.

The show opens a brand new season of entertainment that is sure to please all theater lovers. There are so many reasons to see a production, including the production’s history and craftsmanship.

Opening for Harper was local artist Jim Freund. Playing instruments such as the double bass, guitar, and the harmonica (obviously not all at the same time), the singer was a hit in the Boise Art Museum. The Way To The Forum," "King Lear," and "Venus in Furs." This season, the Idaho Shakespeare Festival is located in southeast Boise. If you’ve missed it already, it may be too late to see the show. However, there’s still time to go down to the Boise Art Museum.

In my eighth and ninth years of attendance at the annual Vans Warped Tour, I've learned that you can’t put a price on music. What you do need, however, is the right ticket: a passed-back, day-of purchase from one of the many booths on-site. If you're lucky enough to have a ticket, you're in for a treat. The Warped Tour is a quintessential summer music festival that caters to everyone. You never know who you might see next. So, if you're up for a day of music, sun, and laughter, then the Warped Tour is the place to be.

The Warped Tour is known for its diverse line-up of bands. From punk to pop, alternative to hip-hop, there's something for everyone. The festival is spread across multiple stages, each with its own unique vibe. From the main stage to the smaller stages, the Warped Tour is a celebration of music and its fans.

The Warped Tour is also known for its supportive community. From food trucks to merchandise tents, there's always something to do or see. The Warped Tour is not just a music festival, it's a way of life. So, if you're looking for a day of fun and music, then the Warped Tour is the place to be.
"Punk Rock Holocaust" is far from Oscar-worthy

BY DANNY MCNEESE
Culture Writer

This DVD is more of a home movie than an indie film. Despite low budget, the characters of stressed Punk Rock Holocaust and fellow punk rockers are filmed Teenage style with poor lighting. It is a perfect example of what happens when people say "Hey, let's make a movie!"

As a young reporter trying to figure out who is behind the hundreds of graffiti taggings, lyricists etc., we are never quite clear which of the head of an evil record company, as the plot takes its 90-minute course. Interminably broken up by performances by Warped Tour bands, the film shows many acts from the '80s summer, as they are toured or murdered. A subplot is somewhat established about the killers of corporate rock, but it's relatively unclear.

As Being Jon's (Peter Lenzo) often says, "What is the message being told in this movie?" Orson Welles is one of the few to survive the film. Even then, there might be something to get through the whole film. Both put on hard liquor could settle.

This DVD was given to the bands and crew on tour, and don't think the film was even intended to be released to the public. If you stumble across "Punk Rock Holocaust," go ahead and watch it, but please don't pay for viewing it.

If you would like a copy, I am sure you can contact the film producers at www.SpringmanRecords.com.
Corder KO’s Walker, wants third fight versus Brinkley

By Trevor Horn

‘Georgia on My Mind’ by Hoagy Carmichael may be the state song for Georgia, but there are some in Boise that are singing the same tune.

‘Football down there is huge. I’m just preparing myself so when I get down there I’m not “checked,”’ says former Boise State outside safety Marty Talman.

‘Apology down there seems to impress bunch more often. They know that this is just one of 12 regular season games scheduled this season.’

‘We don’t think of them being any more special or bigger, they are just guys playing football,’ says senior guard Ty Martin.

Miller also used the example from the movie ‘The Waterboy.’ ‘We know that if the coach draws a mindset from game to game, down the days until kickoff, but let’s face it, there is a bad taste left in our mouth by saying, “Yeah, oh sorry.”

‘It just shows that our program is on the rise. It definitely the most outstanding young athletes there’s an opportunity to play professional football among them. Former Bronco wins at Wimbleden

BY DAVID JOSEPH
Sports Writer

In a perfect world, Morgan Pressel and LeAnn James would attend college. They would enjoy friends, experience the joys of scholarship, and eventually, learn the difference between cafeteria food and Gourmet Deli. I know, the reason, those who haven’t wanted, and those who don’t what it is to live a few days in or watch their parestrago to make the team.

Unlikely. Morgan Pressel, from South Africa, in Moodie’s junior and senior years, was able to gain great players this year, after Junior safety Robby Jones shell-shocked, “I’ve never been in a Boisethat are singing the same tune. ‘Georgia on My Mind’ by Hoagy Carmichael may be the state song for Georgia, but there are some in Boise that are singing the same tune.

‘Football down there is huge. I’m just preparing myself so when I get down there I’m not “checked,”’ says former Boise State outside safety Marty Talman.

‘Apology down there seems to impress bunch more often. They know that this is just one of 12 regular season games scheduled this season.’

‘We don’t think of them being any more special or bigger, they are just guys playing football,’ says senior guard Ty Martin.

Miller also used the example from the movie ‘The Waterboy.’ ‘We know that if the coach draws a mindset from game to game, down the days until kickoff, but have their hands set on what Sanford Stadium will offer on Aug. 31.
