Students of Boise State University
The Associated Students of Boise State University are now in discussions to approve a bill that would designate a week in October to recognize the contributions of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students, faculty and staff. The student government reportedly discussed the proposal with opposition from fraternities and sororities.

Members of the campus group, Thunder, Gay, Lesbian and Allies (TGLAD) group unofficially welcomed the bill, saying that they felt the campus environment was already friendly to all segments of the community, including the GLBTQ members. Senator at-Large Steven Russell introduced the TGLAD community bill on campus fraternities and sororities Tuesday. Members of the campus group, Thunder, Gay, Lesbian, and Allies for Diversity (TGLAD) group officially welcomed the bill, saying that they felt the campus environment was already friendly to all segments of the community.

The bill’s sponsors said that by making specific mention of the gay community’s uniqueness and positive attention to be given to all segments of the community, the bill will be up for discussion Tuesday, Sept. 20 in the Senate.

Other items discussed at the meeting included a bill designed to enhance the student body’s feelings of school spirit and a local bill stating that student Mike Williams will now be the new campus GLBTQ community coordinator.

Waves of attacks kill more than 150 in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq — In a relentless attack by suicide bombers and weekend fighters that have left more than 300 Iraqis dead this week, nearly a dozen car bombs exploded across Baghdad on Wednesday and Thursday, a bleak toll that marked a terrifying new trend for the Iraqi capital a year after the last American troops left.

Iraqi officials said at least 151 people were killed and hundreds more were wounded in a series of attacks on Baghdad's densely packed Green Zone and a residential district in the northeastern part of the city.

Iraqi Interior Minister Sayid Ghazi al-Eisawi said the attacks were carried out by a new generation of car bomb suicide attackers.

"We face a new generation of criminals," the minister said. "This generation is different. This generation is cruel. This generation is brutal."

President Bush said the attacks were part of a "sunset" period in the war and vowed to keep up the pressure.

Bush said the attacks were intended to force Iraqis to give up their new freedoms.

"These attacks are designed to victimize, to intimidate, to make Iraqis think twice about their new freedoms," Bush said. "It's a war of wills. And we're not going to be intimidated by the cowardly acts of killers and murderers who take the lives of innocent people and risk the safety and security of our brave and hard-working allies in Iraq."

Tulane student relocates to BSU after Katrina

BY TESSA SCHWEIGERT
News Writer

As Hurricane Katrina whipped through the Gulf Coast, Annie Crozier was packing her bags to head to New Orleans. She ended up living in Idaho, and Crozier made it there first.

Crozier said she hurried to join her senior year on Aug. 31 at Tulane University; but Katrina postponed her flight plans as well as her full semester schedule.

After those years at Tulane, the Boise resident is continuing her education at Boise State University.

"I couldn't stop watching the news," Crozier said.

Yet after a few days, Crozier began to see a pattern in her reading and psychology degree with 15 credits at Tulane's campus.

"There wasn't much emotional reaction to Katrina," Crozier said. "I needed to get my mind off of it." After the hurricane, Tulane University ended the semester and all of its out-of-state students were given the opportunity to return home without any charge.

"It's been pretty lonely," Crozier said. "Almost all of her friends moved back to New Orleans so I didn't have any siblings or friends here that I could lean on."

"I really didn't know about the Louisiana culture," Crozier said. "I went to classes and tried to learn about it, but I just didn't have the heart to step on a bug." If there was one thing that Crozier said she intended to be near, it was Tulane University.

"There wasn't much emotional reaction to Katrina," Crozier said. "I needed to get my mind off of it."

"We have a very strong Latino presence on campus," said Jaime Calderon. "The students are going to be here to help mend New Orleans before Crozier and her friends plan to come back to New Orleans in the future."

"It's hard to watch something happen in your own city without being there. We should not let those differences divide us; we should let the culture of Latinos come through the student body and the university."

"There are differences between the Latino culture and the Mexican Americans that are important to consider in the Latino culture," said Parker. "We want to show a little bit more interest about the Latino culture, because it's really one of the most diverse cultures."

Calderon. "Latino Heritage Month can help people realize that there are differences between the Latino culture and the Mexican Americans that are important to consider in the Latino culture."

"For example," said Parker, "when there are differences between the Mexican Americans that come here, we don't know what to do. We should not let those differences divide us, we should let the culture come through the university."
The Arbitrer called it: Bush created Hurricane Katrina

Amidst this busy printing season, fingers are in a desperate attempt to place blame for the disastrous events of Hurricane Katrina. Although less than 13 percent of Americans blame President Bush, it remains the principal target. It becomes a game in the short run to distinguish conspiracy on the White House. "Such intentionally delayed relief," Bush complained in all campaign, "such blacks don't people, and my favorite, "Bush made the hurricane." Internally, the same people who invoke Bush's intelligence and efficacy as a leader simultaneously criticize him for things that would require an incredible command of power and resources — with a dash of magic. Plainly wishful thinking.

Week on the week says Michael Moore's molding a new documentary on Katrina. I'm thinking something like this: Bush lied, people died. Bad finger in a desperate attempt to place blame for the disastrous "dilicious conspiracy on the White House. "Bush intentionally delayed levee. Oil conspiracy. Saudi Arabia. Bush hates black people. Don't expect any original material here-it will sound some- thing like this: Bush lied, people died of dehydration, hunger.

Ironically, the same people who attempt rape and one in seven attempted rape and one in seven

Domestic violence: more common than you think

Wandering the nightly news, drunken drivers throw trash into the midst of a typical horrific beating chronically and abusively in domestic violence.

Each year in America, one mil- lion women are battered and 400,000 are hospitalized or admitted to a hospital due to domestic violence. In 2005, one out of every four college women have experienced rape, attempted rape or sexual assault in the last year, according to the Department of Justice.

I don't care if you hate football

Rape is a violent crime about power. It's not about sex. It's about power and control. Rape is inexcusable and should never be seen as a joke or something that can be trivialized. The pain, fear, and shame that survivors experience cannot be minimized. Rape is not a light-hearted manner in which the perpetrator takes control of another person, or persons, inflicting pain, fear, and shame.

While it may seem like a simple crime, rape is actually a complex issue. Rape is not just about sex, but also about power and control. The perpetrator uses force or coercion to take control of another person, or persons, inflicting pain, fear, and shame.

As a graduate student, I have heard from survivors and advocates complaints about the oversimplification of the act of rape. Rape is not a joke, it is a serious crime that should not be trivialized. Rape is a violent crime about power and control. The perpetrator uses force or coercion to take control of another person, or persons, inflicting pain, fear, and shame.

Its irrelevant and short-sighted on their part not to see the unlimited potential and benefits Bronco football brings to the community and university.

I'm glad you're interested in the football program, but your statement ended at the rape. Why didn't you mention the rape? Why didn't you mention the pain, fear, and shame that survivors experience? Why did you trivialize the pain, fear, and shame that survivors experience?

In your own words, what is feminism? Is it empowering women? If so, then why is it being portrayed as a career choice that is not good enough? Why is it being portrayed as a career choice that is not good enough? Why is it being portrayed as a career choice that is not good enough?

‘Chic Chick: Fashion’s hits and misses’

BY HARIANA DEKKER
Culture Columnist

It’s true and inevitable, every year fashion changes so much that the majority of the trendy clothes you bought the previous years are no longer in style.

It is especially annoying when some of those bought items cost an arm and a leg. You end up with a closet full of clothes that you can’t wear ever again, even though they burned a huge whole in your wallet that, by the way, is probably out of style too.

Let’s face it, no pain, no gain. So the pointy toe is still in style this season. While the round toe is also surfacing and that may cause us pointy toe fans a little grief, fear not for the pointy toe look is still here and doesn’t appear to be going anywhere.

Well, at least not for a while. So if you bought expensive heels last year, you can still wear them this season and remain super stylish.

I do not recommend buying more expensive pointy-toed heels this year though. Because while they are okay to wear this season, next season can be a whole different story and no one wants to be a fashion miss and out a bunch of money.

Another item back again is the blazer. Both men and women can cash in on this re-introduced look. Blazers came in all kinds of fabrics and some were not so cheap. For example, the suede blazer was a huge look for the ladies and the gents and they did not come cheaply. Prices started in the low hundreds. Ouch. Thank goodness that they are still a fashion hit because a lot of people would be cursing that darn suede material.

Again, don’t go buying suede blazers this year unless, of course, they are really cheap. Next season is a whole new ballgame and you don’t want to be the only player in the wrong uniform.

Tulane teams find homes after Katrina

On those rare times when Tulane athletic director Rick Dickson allowed himself a moment of reflection, he stopped and considered what Tulane meant to him.

"It's not just a game," Dickson said. "It's our lifestyle. It's a family relationship. The team is our family."

But Dickson planned to rejoin the team and make the announcement that day. It was decided to carry on athletics.

Hurricane Katrina ravaged 'Tulane's coaches and student-athletes began what was dubbed the "Tulane time since Katrina." And fans gather publicly for the first time since Katrina."

"You can't create some pseudo-professional, non-professional atmosphere," Dickson said. "You can't create a deal was in place for 110 to 90 percent of Tulane's athletes to attend Rice; the football team, which had been displaced by Katrina's wrath in Jackson, Miss., was reuinted to Dallas after waiting out the following morning."

"Our emphasis, our concern," Dickson said, "is the family."

Dickson said athletes would not be required to meet the NCAA's 3.0 academic standard to receive eligibility. "We're not doing this for our school," Dickson said. "We're doing this for our students."

Along with the company's donation to the tornado relief fund, Dickson said, the school was determined to support people in the community. "It's about the family, and those who've been affected by this family tie," Dickson said. "It's our way of giving back."

Following three straight losses on the road, the Broncos are set to extend the nation’s longest home winning streak

BY TREvor Horn
Sports Editor

There may not be a team in the nation more in need of a home game than Boise State.

"We play a lot better at home and I’m sure that’s why everyone is excited to have our first home game here," defensive tackle Alex Guerrero said. "Especially with the caliber of team that Bowling Green has.

The Broncos had a nation-best 22-game win streak snapped in the Liberty Bowl on New Year’s Eve. Now, two more road games later, Boise State is in the midst of its longest losing streak (3 games) since 1997. That year was the lone season following the death of former head coach Pokey Allen.

Wider Houston Nutt, when Boise State went 5-6; the season streak (3 games) since 1997. That year was the lone season following the death of former head coach Pokey Allen.

In the six seasons between the two streaks, the Broncos have had three two-game losing streaks. The last one is far too similar to the way the Broncos have began this season. In 2001, Dan Hawkins’ first as head coach, the Broncos started the season playing a South Eastern Conference team and a team from the Pacific 10 Conference.

In 2001, Boise State lost to South Carolina on the road 32-13, and to Washington State at home 41-20. That home loss to the Cougars happens also to be the last time the Broncos have lost at Bronco Stadium. Boise State boasts the longest home win streak in the nation. Guerrero is one of seven seniors that have been with the program during that entire time, and understands the importance of the streak. "It’s huge because you want to hold on to something. We obviously can’t hang on to having a perfect season now, but I want to be able to leave with a perfect record here at home."

The team has won 25 straight games at home by a margin of 10.2-15.6. The Broncos may need to score that much to keep up with the high-powered offense of Bowling Green Wednesday night. Quarterback Omar Jacobs leads an offense that has averaged 41 points per game this season.

Senior offensive tackle Daryn Colledge said that it’s going to be a ‘real challenge’ against Jacobs, but also said that everyone is excited.

On the flip side, the Falcons have also given up an average of 43.5 points to its two opponents. That includes a mind-boggling 548 yards rushing in the two games.

"We just need to play our type of football. I think that if we can play our football, we can just run all over the defense, get some rushing yards and throw for some stuff. Just play some Boise State football," Colledge said.

A home game may be what the Broncos have ordered. The Liberty Bowl was very close to a road game. As Louisville was just a hop, skip and a jump away from Memphis, the game had a home field advantage for the Cardinals. The season opener at Georgia this season was the largest crowd Boise State has ever played in front of.

The players on offense may also get a chance to come together a bit on the field now that a home crowd will allow them to hear quarterback Jared Zabransky at the line.

"We are excited about being home and to get back in the football field to show that those first two games that wasn’t the typical Boise State football team and start getting back to our winning ways," Zabransky said.

The home field advantage goes the Broncos way also because Bowling Green has not played a road game west of the Great Plains since 1992 when they played in the California Raisin Bowl against Fresno State in Fresno, Calif. in 1991. The Falcons beat Fresno State, 28-21. But, the last regular season road game out west for Bowling Green was at Arizona in 1987 when the Wildcats beat BGSU 45-7.

However, this Bowling Green team is lethal with a combined record of 39-12 record since the 2001 season, which was the first season under now Florida head coach Urban Meyer.

"It’s going to have to be a no mistake game," Guerrero said. "A guy like Omar Jacobs, who is probably having a better year than he did last year, and the year he had last year was just ridiculous. He just destroyed Wisconsin’s defense. It’s just something we will have to come in with a positive mind. "We can’t be all, ‘oh we just lost two games.’ We have to come in here and do this, just like we did with Timmy Chang and Ryan Moats last year. It’s just something that we are pretty good at home. I just hope we can do it. I’m confident that we will because we love the crowd out here and we want to show them that we can still play."

There may not be a team in the nation more in need of a home game than Boise State.
Hall returns despite legal battles

BY TREYOR HORN
Sports Editor

Following an offseason of legal turmoil stemming from a deadly accident on May 8, senior safety Cam Hall will play again Wednesday night against Bowling Green.

"Cam Hall is a great player and he deserves to be out there. It's nice to have him back on the team and get him back to his regular life. Other than that, we are just excited to have him and we will welcome him back," Daryn Colledge said.

Hall was originally charged with four felonies and a misdemeanor for his involvement in the accident on I-85 that killed a family of three.

Earlier this month, the three vehicular manslaughter charges were dropped against Hall, and the Student Conduct Committee agreed to reinstate Hall as an active member of the Boise State football team.

"That is a very difficult situation. It's a tough situation all the way around and I think we are just taking it day-by-day and looking at everything that is out there and piece this thing back together a little bit," head coach Dan Hawkins said.

Hall's presence on the field, according to other players, will be a welcomed sight for them, and especially Hall.

"There is no question that having Cam back on the field is a good thing. I think Marty (Tadman) has filled in nice for a guy that's only been in the system for one year," Alex Guerrero said. "To see an experienced guy (Hall) back there is a good thing."

Tadman has started both games at free safety, and played last season as a true freshman when Hall was injured midseason. In the two games this year, Tadman is third on the team with 17 tackles.

"Cam is the most experienced of all our defensive backs and he is a leader and he knows what he is doing out there," Tadman said. "Cam's a senior and he deserves to play. So once he gets back into the saddle and begins to play, he will be in there."

Hall has chosen not to speak with the media this season.

In the final two games last season, Hall's performance was near outstanding. A combined 29 tackles and two interceptions against Nevada and Louisville led the Broncos.

"Cam brings something else that is not just football. He's got an intensity to him. He's always real straight up," Guerrero said. "We like the way he looks out there and it's something a defense needs. A defense needs a total attitude and I think Cam brings that to it."

Hall was a part-time starter and special teams player for the Broncos and finished with 46 tackles, one tackle for loss, and three interceptions last season.

Johnson calls himself part black, part Cherokee, and a mixture of European backgrounds. Growing up, the Cherokee heritage was influential in his life. Johnson says that to this day, he is still searching for the exact tribe number his family is from. But, since his great-grandmother passed away, there is no one else in the family that knows what tribe they are from.

"After she died we couldn't really find out too much about it. I would love to know more about my background, but I've always found dead ends when we are trying to look for it," Johnson said.

But unlike the search for his past, Johnson's skills as a running back are shaping for his future.

Player Watch
- Jared Zabransky: The junior signal caller may need a big game versus Bowling Green more than anyone. Eight turnovers in two games is hard to overcome, but Z is confident that he is ready to go, and his teammates are standing behind him.

- Cam Hall: There may be some scrutiny for the senior, but his presence will be an added bonus for Boise State—especially versus Jacobs. His leadership and hard-nosed play will be welcomed for a secondary that is thin at the safety position.

- Alex Guerrero: Two sacks and seven tackles against Oregon State is going to be hard to match. But, don't be surprised in he is in the backfield more often than not Wednesday. His pass rushing skills are something Boise State has been lacking in the past, but the senior has been playing like a guy gearing up for the pros next season.

BGSU Offense

Omar Jacobs: There may not be a better quarterback in the nation. In 14 career starts, the junior has thrown for 300 plus yards in 10 of them. He has accuracy and a strong arm.

B.J. Lane: With All-MAC senior running back P.J. Pope sidelined with two ankle injuries against Wisconsin, Lane has gotten the majority of the carries. The Falcons will miss Pope, who is just the second player in school history to rush for back-to-back 1,000 rushing yard seasons.

Charles Sharon/Steve Sanders: Both receivers have combined for 488 yards receiving and five touchdowns. Jacobs spreads the ball around, but his two primary targets will give the Boise State secondary problems all night.

 Jacobs among all-time MAC elite

BY RYAN AUTULLO
BG News

If he continues to be successful as a football coach, it’s unlikely Bowling Green head coach Gregg Brandon will ever use his education degree for its intended purpose.

The third-year Bowling Green coach has routinely received positive results when he makes a pessimistic prediction about his sensational junior quarterback, Omar Jacobs.

When Jacobs visited Bowling Green on a recruiting trip during a blisteringly cold January day, Brandon, the prognosticator, knew the native of Florida would opt to play in a warmer environment.

"He went as far as to say he felt sorry for Brandon's face anywhere near an air conditioner, knew the native of Florida wouldn't want his face cross Massachusetts and go through a cold January day, Brandon, the prognosticator, knew the native of Florida would opt to play in a warmer environment."

Here’s to hoping we don’t see Sanders’ face anywhere near an air conditioner, knew the native of Florida wouldn’t want his face cross Massachusetts and go through a cold January day, Brandon, the prognosticator, knew the native of Florida would opt to play in a warmer environment.

Then, in Jacobs’ first collegiate start last year at Oklahoma, Brandon believed his signal caller would be intimidated by the raucous Sooner crowd.

"He was as far as to say he felt sorry for Jacobs at the time."

"When we was out there playing, I was looking at Omar and think ‘holly smokes’ this is this guy’s first game as a college football quarterback. And look where he is.”

Or look anywhere in Northwest Ohio for that matter. The publicity Jacobs has received since throwing for 218 yards and a pair of touchdowns in that 42-24 loss to Oklahoma has been unparalleled by any athlete that has come before him at the university.

Jacobs finished his first season at BG as the successor to now Cleveland Browns quarterback Josh Hattis, with a stat line that may have NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue announcing his name early in April’s draft.

Jacobs’ 4,002 passing yards set a school mark, while his 41 touchdown passes and four interceptions are Mid-American Conference records. Jacobs also proved to be of the prototype mold by rushing for 309 yards and four scores, while showing his elusiveness in being sacked a league-low 10 times.

And it all started during that early September game when Jacobs and the Falcons stood tough before falling to the eventual Big 12 champion.

"Most definately. That was a huge confidence booster playing with the Heisman winner (Jason White) from the year before, said Jacobs, the reigning MAC Offensive Player of the Year.

“When I was out there playing, I was like ‘I can play with these guys.’ That was a confidence booster throughout the whole season.”

Jacobs began last year not exactly knowing why he was on the same field as a Heisman winner.

"Right now, he’s welcoming the comparisons drawn between him and some of the elite professional quarterbacks who got their starts in the MAC, including Byron Leftwich, Chad Pennington and Ben Roethlisberger.

The similarities Jacobs has received aren’t patented to MAC alumnus, though. He garnered a couple more Oct. 2., in what may go down as possibly his best collegiate game. Jacobs torched Big East’s Temple for 367 yards and four scores on 21-of-26 passing in the Falcons’ 70-16 laugh over the Owls.

So what can Jacobs possibly do for an encore? A season like he had in 2004, in which he passed for 300 yards in eight of the Falcons’ 12 games, can only make for a letdown this year.

So far, Jacobs has two straight 300 plus passing games this year. Jacobs will test BSU Wednesday night.

a wonderful future for the well-spoken and courteous young man.

“We knew he was capable of doing some really good things based on what he has done in the past,” Zabrasky said.

Johnson also said his decision to come to Boise State was an easy one.

“I felt that Boise State was going to be the best fit for me because they wanted me as much as I wanted to play football. When they called me it was, ‘Hey, it’s coach Hawkins.’ Hearing his excitement that he really wanted me really set me on Boise State.”

Twice, Johnson has had the chance to show his skills on national television. On Wednesday he will get a third.

Some have questioned that if he is able to run with such ease, why not give him the ball more often. However, Johnson says it’s the opportunities that he is given as much as it is his natural talent.

“We have a system here, and the system doesn’t call for certain people for certain calls. It calls for certain plays. Whether I’m in on that play or not isn’t really my choice and the coaches have a game scheme and if they give me the ball more—I could be stuffed at the one-yard line. So, the way they are using me and utilizing me is giving me the opportunities that I’m getting.”
Falcons are no easy opponent for Broncos

BY DUSTIN LAPRAY
Assistant Sports Editor

The Boise State Broncos have begun the season with two consecutive losses. They have lost three straight games dating back to the Liberty Bowl last season. The Bowling Green Falcons look to make it four in a row.

The Falcons are not hiding their intentions concerning a game-plan. Bowling Green owns one of the nation’s best aerial attacks. Senior quarterback and Heisman hopeful Omar Jacobs has thrown for 458 yards and five touchdowns against Wisconsin and 428 yards with five touchdowns against Ball State.

That’s 10 touchdowns in two games, against a BSU defense that has been suspect over the years on the deep ball. Jacobs has thrown those scores to five different receivers and has only thrown one interception this season.

“I don’t set TD goals; they call the plays and I run them,” Jacobs said. “I just want to win games.”

Senior receiver Steve Sanders leads the team with four touchdowns, but is second on the team with 13 receptions. Charles Sharon has 17 catches for 257 yards and three TDs. Corey Partridge also has 10 catches and a score.

The Falcons are going to miss their starting tailback P.J. Pope, who should miss the BSU game with a pair of ankle injuries. Pope has run for more than 1,000 yards in each of the last two seasons. The Falcons hence will resort to a running-back-by-committee method in the backfield with B.J. Lane getting the majority of the carries. Lane has 122 yards on 35 carries and the team’s only rushing score.

Jacobs has mobility in the pocket, but has a net (-6) yards rushing on 11 attempts.

Although this game is being hyped as an offensive circus, it will be the defenses that decide the game. The Falcons took the final lead last week against Ball State with an Antonio Smith interception return for a touchdown that gave the Falcons the win.

Boise State has no interceptions, defensively, through two games this season.

The Broncos have given up an average of 336.5 yards per game through the air in the last two games.

The Bowling Green defense, which gave up 388 yards on the ground to Big Ten powerhouse Wisconsin, has nine players with double-digit tackles through two games, but has only caused two turnovers and totaled two sacks. Jacobs has been sacked five times in two games.

The Falcons (1-1, 1-0 MAC) are picked to win the Mid-American Conference. Boise State was picked to win the Western Athletic Conference. This should be an explosive contest, with two teams battling to legitimize their programs.

“(The Broncos) are a little wounded right now,” Bowling Green head coach Gregg Brandon said. “Going into their place, their first home game, is not going to be easy. They’ve got a veteran quarterback, (Jared) Zabransky, who is a very good player. They know how to win there, they’ve won a lot of games, and (head coach) Dan Hawkins does a great job there. I think they are very similar to us. You look at their two-deep, size-wise, and what they’re playing with is very comparable to what we’re playing with, so I think it will be a good match-up.”

Zabransky has been much maligned this fall for his play on the field. His completion percentage is at 50.9 percent and he has only thrown for 303 yards, four interceptions and three touchdowns on 27-of-53 passing in two games. He was responsible for six turnovers in the Georgia game. Jacobs is taking a face-up look at the trip to Boise.

“Every game is important but MAC games have a little bit more behind them. At Boise, we need to just play the game. It’s all determined between the lines. It is going to be a great fight. There are two great offenses. Their defense will try to stop us and defenses always get overshadowed in games like this so you need to just play the game.”

Oh my, Omar Jacobs

BY SHAWN ASHBY
Sports Writer

The Boise State football team will face an offense that has yet to be held under 500 yard this season when they meet up with the Falcons of Bowling Green State University on Wednesday night. The Falcons high flying offense is led by their Heisman Trophy Candidate quarterback Omar Jacobs, who will continue his Heisman campaign on the blue.

“That guy can make some things happen. He is one of the better players in the country,” BSU head coach Dan Hawkins said.

 Jacobs and the Falcons began their season in Madison against the Wisconsin Badgers. Despite an awe-inspiring performance by Jacobs and the offense, the Wisconsin running game proved too much. The Falcons dropped their opening game 56-42. Jacobs finished the contest with 458 yards, and five touchdowns. Jacobs followed up his performance in Madison, Wisc. with a similar outing against Ball State University, finishing the game with 428 yards and five touchdowns.

Jacobs credits the success of the offense to finding the opponent’s weakness. “We try to find an advantage and attack it. We have a lot of good players who can hurt you,” Jacobs said.

With two productive games played, and 11 more opportunities, Jacobs continues to add to last season’s nationally recognized numbers. He finished last season rated first in touchdown passes (41), first in points responsible for (22.5/game), second in total offense (358.5 yards), second in passing yards per game (333.5), third in passing efficiency (167.2), and fourth in completions per game (25.6). With numbers leading the nation last season, Jacobs entered this season as a legitimate Heisman hopeful.

“It’s an honor to be thought of as that caliber of player,” Jacobs says of being named a contender for the Heisman, but his first concern is winning.

“I’m really only concerned with how we perform as a team… all I am thinking about is winning the MAC. That is the only thing that matters to me and my teammates,” Jacobs says.

Like the Broncos, the Falcons began their season on the road, and will not return to their home until October 1. Jacobs understands the importance of the Broncos returning home to host Bowling Green.

“They have a great program, and will be excited that they are playing at home,” Jacobs said.

Keys to the game:

Run the football: The Bowling Green defense has yielded 548 yards on the ground in two games this season. Boise State has shown it can run the ball. This could be a big night on the ground for the Broncos.

Contain Jacobs: Like Timmy Chang and Ryan Moats last season, the Broncos will once again look to slow down a big-time offensive player. Jacobs may be the most gifted signal caller to play at Boise State, and Cam Hall return should help.

Find Schouman: The junior tight end was Zabransky's favorite target last season before he was injured. So far this season, he has two catches for 16 yards. Concerns about a nagging injury were dismissed when scored three touchdowns in a fall scrimmage. But, in order for an effective pass game, Zabransky needs to connect with Schouman.
