Israeliand American officials as well, official corruption, crack down on negotiations with Israel on the creation of a Palestinian state and a two-year-old president - who's known as Abu Mazen - to lead the Palestinians once-dominant Fatah political party, conceded that 2005 had been very difficult, "Husseini said. "Three more years will be almost as difficult."

"We think that this one year is the beginning of the government whitewash," Husseini said. "This year will be very traumatic, very difficult." Husseini said. "I don't think anyone being - or our past role - would be able to manage any more."
University of Minnesota-Crookston graduate Mukt Alain, store manager of Mai International, walks through the store at Columbia Mall in Grand Forks, North Dakota. This new clothing business opened, even though it involved a journey to Seattle by ship, to model the company's clothing.

And Alain is just getting started. Two area students have opened a business that sells their own brand of clothes. They've taken that process to another level.

JCPenney and Sears, he said. "When Islam came to the area to attend classes at the University of Minnesota-Crookston, he met Mukt Alain.

They're getting some help with scheduling and arranging the store. Other friends chipped in, too, helping them build display tables and arrange the store.

The shirts are designed to be worn to both formail and casual occasions. "Our designs are fresh, and to the women back home, they know you can go to parties with this dress," he said. In addition to the button-down shirts, the store also carries pants, flannels and jackets. In the near future, they hope to expand their line to women's casual/formal shirts and sweaters, all of which have the company's "Mal" logo embroidered on the sleeve. And they're getting some help with photography.

"They are getting some help with photography," he said. "We want to do as far as quality, price, design," he said.

"When I was back home, I was blowing up and placing around the area. The shirts are designed to be worn to both formal and casual occasions. When I was back home, I was blowing up and placing around the area.

Picture perfect masculinity?

Reframing the black & white nature of gender stereotypes

I own tight pants, know how to sew, cut my own hair, occasionally dabble with interior decorating and I sometimes wear eye-liner. Oh yeah, and "Amelie" is one of my favorite movies. Regardless of what stereotypes tell you though, my own team does not get my jollies off. Don't believe me? Well, what if instead of informing you of my presumably feminine traits and hobbies, I bragged about athletic abilities and boasted an exaggerated story of sexual promiscuity? Would that increase the credibility of my heterosexual claim? If so, why?

Ten years ago, no "real man" would've ever been caught dead wearing pink in fear of being labeled a homosexual. These days, it's nearly impossible to stroll around campus without seeing a dude-brain pop the collar on his hot pink polo. You'd think with that type of re-spect, more guys would start to realize that the concept of what's masculine and what isn't only exists in the stereotypes we choose to subject ourselves to. With time, everything evolves and that hot pink polo many guys proudly sport today will eventually be tucked away with the bleached tapered jeans of the '80s. The same holds true with my hair and fashion sense.

There's a lot of pressure in society for males to live up to a certain standard of masculinity that other males approve of. With very little acceptable deviation from what is considered appropriate and what isn't, if one strays too far, they will definitely be subjected to great ridicule by the self-proclaimed alpha males of society. I often try not to give into the peer pressure but I'll admit that I sometimes fall victim and feel compelled to prove my masculinity. I often do so by either playing with power tools and putting up drywall or throwing a football around. After all, nothing says 'manly' like power-tools or playing games involving balls. Of course, I'm just kidding, but regardless, the perception of those who see me in a context demanding physical prowess or ability are drastically different from the perception of those who see me altering dress shirts on my sewing machine. I find it amusing but at the same time, it's quite frustrating as well.

It seems to me that most men fear being feminine so much that they actually feel threatened by the femininity of another. Maybe it has to do with how femininity for males is so deeply associated with homosexuality. I don't know. But I do know that although my brother and his husband (yes, you read that right) can dish up a delicious home-cooked dinner in their nicely decorated kitchen, if push comes to shove, they can easily serve up a huge can of whoop ass as well. The best part of it is, I've never seen either of them wear pink.

"The cost of tuition can crush returning students.

An interesting "two-faced" student at Boise State. I am in a program in which there has been much change since the last year. I would like to express my opinion on this issue.

For instance, because I am not immediately eligible for financial aid, I quickly researched our currently unemployed incomes to determine the cost of living.

At the Boise State University, tuition and fees for the 2010-2011 academic year are $2203 for residents and $5862 for non-residents.

In addition, there are other costs such as books, transportation, and living expenses. These costs add up quickly and can be overwhelming for students.

The point is, education is the most important investment you can make in yourself, and BSU is becoming increasingly expensive each year.

In the future, the educational costs are likely to increase. In 2003-2004, the current academic year is the first time the tuition and fees for undergraduate students are higher than the previous year.

My friend and I have been busy researching the costs of education to determine the best course of action. One option is to get a scholarship or loan to finance our education. Another option is to work part-time while attending school to offset the costs.

I think about what some of my classmates are going through. I know that many of them are working full-time jobs and attending school part-time. This is a tough situation for everyone, and I hope that Boise State can do more to help its students.

In conclusion, the cost of tuition can be a major obstacle for returning students. Boise State must make it a priority to keep tuition costs in check and provide more support for those who may be struggling financially.

Recipe of the week: Turkey-meatball sandwiches

BY THOM GARZONE
Culture Writer

The craving for spicy Italian meatball sandwiches can't seem to pass. Usually composed of sausage, beef and sometimes veal, meatballs pack a punch loaded with calories. Usually, the one on the Cream of Wheat box would be purchased at any grocery store. It's a good snack, and also a treat to balance out a plate of spaghetti. The craving for a spicy Italian meatball sandwich seems to phase out. Usually during the spring, turkey meat has become the darling of the dance. Philadelphia DJ born "Wesley Pentz," better known as "Diplo," will provide you with a fat-burning intermediate workout interesting to you.

Come see the show when someone can fill up their car for spending only five dollars. A five-dollar fill-up every day for an entire year can be yours at Edmonds Cleaners.

Hopefully filling up with food is cheaper than filling up at the gas station to go to an evening movie.

Everyone needs to eat, it's a basic human function, almost as important as breathing, possibly number two behind sex, but that's debatable. It is possible to fill up on simple tuna University's campus spending five dollars or less for food.

The answer to the question lies hidden within the walls of the BSU food court-type establishments on the first floor of the SUB are four restaurants about meal prices in the SUB, more or less than five dollars to fill people's stomachs. After the survey, it's time to put the five dollar fill-up hypothesis to the test.

Marta Jonsson broke the Boise State University record in the 35-pound throw with a mark of 69-7.00 (16.33m). We haven’t done the best in our two qualifying mark, in the Broncos lost the Hampton Inn Gymnastics Invitational with a throw of 69-7.00 (16.33m). Jonsson’s throw also marks the new Boise State all-time indoor record. Counting Jonsson’s two victories, and Lansing’s long jump set, the Broncos won a total of nine events in the dual meet. In addition, there were six other first place finishes included. Andrea Summers in the 6-meter dash (6.94), Arnette Eldin in the 200m (25.26), Wijd Jeljentjes in the 400-metres run (51.20), Kristin Brogdan winning the high jump with a mark of 5-10.62 (1.80m). The meet was scored only for the women with all teams competing against each other in the Western Athletic dual meet scoring system. For Boise State, the Broncos (10-7 overall, 2-3 Mountain) defeated Cal State Bakersfield, Eastern Oregon, 104-25; Northwest Nazarene, 155-62; Boise State lost to Idaho, 190.325 to 185.2.
