Saturday Productions will present an encore performance of the play "The Exonerated" at 7 p.m. Friday at Boise Contemporary Theatre, 646 Fulton Street, as a benefit for Boise State's Innocence Project. A $10 donation per ticket is requested for the gala evening, hosted by Idaho producer Michael Hoffman and Boise State's Donna Mabry. Suggested donation for students enrolled at least two semesters, call Tiffany Bido at 208-467-1920. Tickets will be held at the door.

Today's performance features a conversation and reception with former inmate Calvin Johnson, who spent 16 years in prison on rape convictions and was then released after DNA evidence proved his innocence. Johnson and Boise State biology professor Greg Hampikian co-wrote the book "Ex to Freedom," about Johnson's release and his efforts to prevent wrongful conviction.

"We expect a good turn out," Mabry said. "Supporting the Innocence Project is very important, and we're delighted to have Caljoin us."

A 30-minute party with food and wine will be provided by The Melting Pot restaurant. Suggested donation for students is $5, accepted at the door.

Tattoos and "The Exonerated" book will be available at the event. For more information, call Tiffany Bido at 208-467-1920. For more information about the Innocence Project, visit www.boisestate.edu/citc/innocence.
Blogging analysts call it swarm-influencing. "Blunt tried to do this in a way to use new technologies to communicate with his constituents," Krempasky said. "But he didn't have a plan or a structure, so it was a free-for-all."

Boehner instead.

Another irony was that most of the bloggers who characterized KBSU's and KBSX's digital package that you just can't beat," said Rob Thomas, general manager of KBSX. "HD Radio is the most revolutionary change in our industry since the introduction of FM 40 years ago," Thomas said. "It's a product consumers can't live without."

Boise State senior Ben Davidson, who won an "Exclusive Experience in Advertising" internship through Experience.com, was created to identify top advertising talent among students nationwide. Davidson's commercial, along with 50 other student entries, was posted on Experience.com and voted on by other college students nationwide.

"Exclusive" internship winner Ben Davidson meets with major advertising agencies in Boston next week.

"I looked at [the examples of student entries] and [thought] these are awful... I can make something better than that," he later told his peers. Davidson's commercial in one afternoon.

Senator Bommarito opined, "It seems suspicious is an incredulous manner to support or fund an organization," Stoker said.

"The bill is on its way to the Senate Finance Committee," Stoker said. "It is not a bad idea to fund the budget, and we will continue the discussion on this subject."

Tom Higginbotham is a normal family guy running a sleepy diner in a small town. And that's pretty much the story until one evening, when two armed robbers roll into town and hold him and his employees hostage. "Violence" takes a handful of common thriller themes and centers them into a shockingly good film. Initiallyigrant to some, but ultimately a must-see.

BY FRANCY HARCOTTE

The Picture Show, located in the Vista Plaza across the street from Vista Sears, is a gem of vintage art. This petite boutique boasts a plethora of marked-off styles of just about any type of clothing you can imagine: shirts, hats, dresses, pants, coats, purses, shoes, and other oddball items, just to name a few.

The Picture Show isn't your typical second-hand store. The store owner is an avid collector of clothing from different eras. This passion gives the Picture Show a distinct flair. Each piece is verified for its authenticity and along with the price, each garment is marked with its details and a short description. The clothing dates anywhere from the 1940s to the 1970s, and can be found like sweaters and sophisticated 1950s party dresses, or a more casual pick from the wide selection of groovy shirts and blouses.

The shop has a bold, retro atmosphere which can send the shopper back in time. Much of the merchandise is used as decoration, and there are several vintage posters hanging on the walls.

Additionally, the clothing at the Picture Show is a little bit pricey. Most items start at around $25. However, most of the clothing is affordable, and the shop has many fabulous sales taking place throughout the year. For instance, right now, the Picture Show is having its winter clearance sale, and there are several vintage pieces dangling on the walls.

Men's golf eyeing NCAA tournament

By SHAW KASHMEN

When the Boise State men's golf team finished the WAC Championships in ninth place last season, no one would have guessed that just a year later they would clinch the national championship.

Perhaps the most important change that took place was a new head coach: Smith added his first full season in charge.

Benson said Smith had brought in several new players and restructured the program. Smith has already added some of the nation's top talent, including junior Ben Fullmer and senior Jordan Smith.

Both Fullmer and Smith have had success in their first year under Smith's guidance. Fullmer has led the team in scoring average and Smith has been a consistent presence in the lineup.

In order to achieve their national championship goal, the Broncos will need to maintain their strong performances and stay focused on their goals.

The national championship will be held in Bay City, Michigan, from May 31 to June 4. It will feature the top 25 teams from the regular season and the top 10 individuals.

The Broncos will need to perform well in the regionals to earn a spot in the national championship.

The regional rounds will be held from May 18 to May 21. The Broncos will have to compete with other top teams from across the country to advance to the national championship.

Boise State will need to perform well in the regionals to have a chance at the national championship. They will have to maintain their consistency and focus on their individual goals.

The national championship will provide an opportunity for the Broncos to showcase their talents and compete at the highest level. It will be a test of their ability to perform under pressure and their ability to cope with the demands of a high-pressure tournament.

The Broncos will need to stay focused and committed to their goals. They will need to work together as a team and use their skills and experience to their advantage.

The national championship will be a test of Boise State's ability to rise to the occasion. They will need to maintain their focus and determination to have a chance at the championship.

The Broncos will need to stay focused on their individual goals and work together as a team to achieve their national championship goal.

With hard work and dedication, the Broncos have a chance at the national championship. They will need to stay focused and committed to their goals and work together as a team to achieve their dream.

... to keep going, Alexander hit another small bump in the road.

"I'm on the lighter side of things," Patrick said. "I go into the Pac-10 tournament with 13 passes broken up, but was not as$apparent as you'd think. I've never really had the size."

Alexander went on to have a standout career as a quarterback, and in track and field, in high school. He was named the league offensive athlete of the year his junior year and the school record in the high jump.

Now, Alexander is making another transition after starting the last five games of the season at quarterback. But he's not doing anything to the stars for the stars.

"I was kind of at fault at first when defensive back coach Marcel Yates presented me with the idea, I'm thinking of it, not that I am a selfish player, I would do anything for the stars, but that helps me in the long run," Alexander said.

Banning would insist on his help in the remainders of the season, making him feel comfortable. "I was kind of at fault at first when defensive back coach Marcel Yates presented me with the idea, I'm thinking of it, not that I am a selfish player, I would do anything for the stars, but that helps me in the long run," Alexander said.

"For as far as I'm concerned, I've got a lot of positive feedback, if I play good, I believe I have the confidence and the ability to go on from there," Alexander said.

In Japan, women find new careers beckoning

Masako Kamiyama, who runs several nursery schools, considers herself "a representative for mothers." "The children's chief nurturers, Yousuke Morikawa, said one reason was women are not enough in terms of experiences when they launch their business is because they have to look after their children. Women have to think about being the head of a company in a way that men don't," Waseda said.

Mike Hoffman, a former PR designer who started a design firm, also attended the seminar. "I decided to start my own business after reading books on PR. I found it more interesting than working for a company. I think it's easier for me, as there still was discrimination against women," he said.

The seminar's chief organizer, Yoshiko Terada, said it was important to prepare women for the labor market. "I think it's important for women to prepare for the labor market while they're still in school," she said.

Both Hoffman and Waseda agreed that the seminar was useful. "It was a great opportunity to learn about the labor market," Hoffman said.

The seminar was organized by the Japan Institute of Marketing, which aims to promote women's participation in the labor market.
