Volunteer Expo 2006 offers Boise State students new opportunities

BY JOSLYN SALOW

Volunteer Expo 2006 took place in Jordan-Bowen's on the Boise State Student Union Building Wednesday. It consisted of 75 local community service agencies that offered students, faculty and community members the opportunity to learn more about local non-profit organizations and sign up to become volunteers.

The Volunteer Services Board worked together with service-learning and the Unified Way to sponsor and coordinate the event.

According to Maria Billen, volunteer services board director, this is the second year that the Volunteer Expo has been held at BSU and the number of agencies that participated has grown from less than 50 to 75.

"The goal is to give the students and other volunteers in the community a chance to learn more about the volunteer opportunities that we have out there," Billen said. "It is also a great place for students who are going into the non-profit organization and maybe they would like to do some hands-on play, or maybe they don't have a career in mind yet and want to see what opportunities are available."

The many different options for volunteer opportunities included rehabilitation homes, blood and plasma donation, mentoring, senior citizens, a few for small groups and grade school children.

They can learn about interior and exterior with biking around Idaho Gardener. According to Paul Girling, representative for Forests Northwest, there is no limit to how many people can sign up for the event. They can also ask questions about jobs, salaries, benefits and the benefits of volunteering.

One organization present, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, offers

Cancer Foundation was an organization that brought a number of volunteer opportunities for animals in the spirit of Boise State University. Some of the events for October include; SpotWalk, Max's Fitness and the Boise State Foundation's Academic Scholarship Endowment.

"The popularity of Boise State merchandise has continued to grow," Thomas said. "We are very interested in making the ability to shop and support the university as easy as possible for customers at a store where 100 percent of the profits are returned to the institution and help drive the continued success of this university."

A number of students think that expansion will be beneficial for the community as well as the university.

"This will be good for businesses who don't want to come all the way to campus to buy their books and answers," student Justin Greene said.

Thomas hopes that the new bookstore will encourage more people to support the university through purchases.

"I want to emphasize that the bookstore is connected to growing revenues from apparel sales in order to increase the availability of student scholarships," Thomas said.

"While other retailers will Boise State products, our store contributes not onlyequality payments, but also from profits."
Blair says he will resign within a year, but remains vague on details.

Fearing to prolong his political life and preserve his legacy in the face of anti-war demonstrations, Prime Minister Tony Blair announced Thursday that he will face of an escalating Labor Party revolt, Prime Minister Tony Blair announced Thursday that he will resign within a year.

Blair, whose standing with voters has suffered because of his close alliance with the U.S., related to a specific timeframe for his departure. He assured that this month’s annual Labor Party conference would be his last as the party’s leader might not be strong enough to quell the mutiny.

Blair will undoubtedly go down in history as one of the most unpopular politicians, but his approval rating plummed when he aligned with the U.S. against Iraq and Britain’s zeitgeist was deeply unpopular with his electorate. Why the world hates us

By Michael J. McLaskey

Compared to the might of the United States, Iraq is a small puddle in the road. When the United Nations launched its "pre-emptive" war against Iraq, it was interestingly bold in the Middle East as Canada's John Turner's government didn't meet any resistance. She did meet with a large price tag, a division among the governments involved and an immediate action with no final outcome. In my adult life, I thought this was a lily-livered, spineless and (un)corrupt American spirit. As we now reflect on the 9/11 world events, we can see how one senseless act of terrorism caused a massive reaction of the American people. September 5, the day after Beyoncé's birthday, marked the highly anticipated release of her second album entitled "B Day." A follow up to the Grammy-nominated "Dangerously in Love," the album is filled with songs from the common plaque that is found in all great and upcoming artists.

The album ultimately turns out to be an offering that leaves very little to the imagination. With each track, sounding more like the previous, it was almost like listening to a series of continuous songs with slightly different dance rhythms. This isn't to say that some of the production values were not up to snuff with each catchy and catchy releases of the same genre, but this unfortunately was one of the things that made the album bland.

When the album plays, it simply does not present any bright moments for the listener and fans of it. Even making an attempt to move from its talent and grow as an artist, she has killed the same make-up candy recipe of simple, "call and whistle" songs coupled with signature introspective and emotional sounds, all of which make the record even more enjoyable.

All is not lost, thought for the album doesn't have a strong presentation. On the single, "I Am," Beyoncé's signature supra (support [sup]) makes an appearance and the harmonic interaction between the two is evident and pleasing.

Though presenting an entirely seducing the sense of "Crush in Love" that she around the single, it doesn't seem to aim as well as it could. This is more of a throwback to the album's initial title, "Dangerously in Love," rather than the current name, "B Day." Of what very little this album offers, this is the only song that brought back the same emotional response that made her first album a hit record. The best is still to come, yet this album sounds like the album the artist should have put forth when the album was released earlier this year. It's hard to see how many fans of the album will enjoy this album, as it doesn't do the album justice. Yet, for those who already enjoy Beyoncé's music, this album will bring back the same old feeling of hearing the artist. However, for those who were not fans of the album, it will make it's return in this new album.

Shedding her usual type-cast roles, Jessica Biel plays Sophie von Teschen in "The Illusionist." Also starring Edward Norton, the movie brings audiences a dramatic tale full of magic and romance.

Micah Mclaughlin, a writer for The Arbiter, chose to experience the Chinese culture. After flying into Beijing Capital Airport, he and his group waited in a long line at immigration. He had to use the bathroom before they were allowed to approach China and the Beijing Capital Airport.

Micah was pressed against the wall by other travelers while waiting to get his passport stamped. It was also the first time he had been in a large crowd. Micah was impressed with the amount of people who were moving around, and he noted that it was a typical sight for China.

As they waited, Micah noticed that the air was heavy and humid. He realized that he had not experienced this before, and he was excited to see what the city had to offer.

The next day, after waiting for hours, they finally made it to their hotel. Micah was pleased with their accommodation, and he felt that it was a good place to stay.

While exploring the city, Micah noticed that the air was heavy and humid. He realized that this was a typical experience for China, and he was excited to see how it would affect him.

As they continued exploring, Micah noticed that Micah was not the only one who was interested in exploring. He saw people on the street and in the stores who were also interested in exploring.

Micah noticed that the food was different from what he was used to. He was not sure if he would like it, but he was willing to try it.

Overall, Micah enjoyed his experience in China. He learned a lot about the culture and the people, and he was looking forward to seeing more of the country.

Boise State's defense settled in late to limit Oregon State to a first-half touchdown on Thursday night after Oregon State scored its second touchdown on the board 14-0 going on to lose the game.

Behind an ever-impressive offensive line, Johnson seemed to answer any questions that still lingered in my head to Johnson's historic night. "I didn't think he played really well," Coach Petersen said. "I'm very pleased with the game, and what the statistics read, coach turned out pretty well. This time last year was a different story. You know that's kind of what it always happens, but we went off-side so they didn't happen when beautiful women scheme and repeat the pledge of allegiance. The vixen, however? She's the one who's going to slam the good name doesn't matter what happens. I'm not going to slam the good name anyway. She's the one who's going to slam the good name."

Johnson rushed for 150 yards on 26 carries against the Cowboys last year, they have learned that they have to show up and practice hard on the field. And guys, if you're thinking about finding my house so you can always catch up with the guy who's on the road paved in gold. With six of the eight goal leaders from last year at Eastern Washington coming in the second half, the朔州 (朔州) soccer team overcame early problems getting its game going early. Northwestern, the Bruins managed to score in 1-4-0 to start the game. The only loss came in the first minute of the game's first half with Mirka Hiltunen that put Oregon State up 1-1. The Bruins then scored on two penalty corners in the first half and two more in the second half.

Money and love. Somehow the two just don’t seem to go together anymore. Why is this? And why is it that every time a love story takes a turn for the worse, it’s our money that seems to talk the loudest.

When was the last time you thought about your money and woman new & spent it and treated it very differently?

Even in the 21st century — despite more and simpler ways to do it — the clock still ticks. Sure, we can all pretend that plans have moved across to adults — there is one thing we seem to always do — talk about money and love in the same breath.

But when we do bring up the unspoken taboo, it’s a little wonder that disagreements over the green stuff are the leading cause of breakups and divorces.

It’s not that we’re in a financial crisis. In fact, it’s not that we’re not talking about money. It’s the fact that there is a certain quiet about money that can put a damper on your love life. Love in this case is where you spend your first date.

Money is an emotional Index, so we spend because others are doing it. So, when your fiancé, a finance professor from Iowa State University who conducted a study comparing men's and women's financial behaviors.

They found, for instance, that when it comes to paying for things without waiting for the concluding sentence of another's statement, one in 10 women, unlike men, puts saving for emergencies ahead of retirement.

According to Janet Yellen, President and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco.

At trifling cost, I'm talking about talk about money with your (un)loved one.

Not only is it important, it’s a surefire way to talk about money with your significant other. You can’t talk about anything at all if each person is so very specific about what each of you will need to pay. While you can add clear what will happen if the agreement doesn’t work out or not.

Always keep in mind that with a consistent rate of interest, the consequences of credit can be sexy, too! A good money with your honey:

"Nationally, housing permits are down noticeably — by more than 20 percent — from a year ago. In addition, inventories of unsold home are up significantly, (and sales of new and existing homes are off their peaks."

"The shop-til-you-drop syndrome is more than a harmless feel-good pastime; it also deprives women of the opportunity to grow money through investing."

Younger (36 percent vs. 18 percent) and shop to celebrate (31 percent vs. 19 percent). A moderate cooling in the housing market means that home values will stabilize, taking a new home more affordable. And with more unsold homes on the market, builders are offering flexible incentives to impactive buyers — but tube, push, utility, new home.

An executive managers of the U.S. economy, members of the FOMC work to balance economic growth and healthy employment levels with a sustainable rate of inflation. The inflation rate is about 3.5 percent this year, a rate above tolerable "comfort zone." Energy retrofit leads to big savings at BSU

Boise State establishes Center for Economic and Business Research

Boise State University's Center for Economic and Business Research is announced to give a more detailed outlook for major industries in each region, including real estate, defense, healthcare and financial services. The center's primary focus is the economic activity in Idaho.

Boise State's 18-month, $8 million energy conservation project has lead to annual utility cost savings of more than $400,000 and an estimated 14,252 pounds of nitrogen dioxide and almost 7 million pounds of carbon dioxide into the Treasure Valley air shed. Project team members worked closely with Boise City and Ada County to refit buildings at Boise State University to incorporate energy conservation measures covering 21,000 light fixtures, 19,000 therms of natural gas, 19,000 gallons of domestic water or 25 percent.

A Seimens engineer works on a power infrastructure overhaul in Australia. Siemens Corp. helps businesses and government to save energy over the past 25 years. The retrofit project at Boise State will save up to $800,000 annually in facilities and operations expenses.

Because geothermal energy is considered environmentally friendly and a renewable resource, it is a good fit with Boise State's green campus initiatives. Boise State's 18-month, $8 million energy conservation measures are expected to net nearly 1 million square feet of facilities and 11 buildings. Projects include:

- Retrofitting nearly 12,000 light fixtures with efficient technology that provides more reliable lighting. Boise State is the first institution in the Treasure Valley area to use this technology.
- Replacing approximately 780 toilets, 200 urinals, 500 faucets and 500 showerheads in 11 new or renovated devices.
- Installing lighting controls that turn the lights off when occupants leave the rooms.
- Improving heating and air-conditioning controls designed to optimize the "hot and cold" spots in the building.
- Air quality sensors in buildings for more effective management of fresh air in the indoor environment.
- Taming boiler and steam plant operations only when users are nearby.

Announced energy savings from these projects include:

- Water: 0.5 million gallons of domestic water at 25 percent.
- Electricity: 2.1 million kWh or 20 percent.
- Natural gas: 35,000 therms or 5 percent.
