Student health insurance goes up for bid

Through a campus survey emailed to everyone registered with the Student Health Insurance Plan, students will get a chance to influence the program's coverage.

Boise State is at the end of its current contract with United Healthcare, the university's health insurance provider.

Ferdinand Schlapper, executive director of Health, Wellness and Counseling Services on campus, is open to ideas about how to change it.

"We're at the end of our contract with United Healthcare," Schlapper said. "We'd like to have different companies and services on the table to have more options." Schlapper says United Healthcare has already shown it is willing to negotiate premiums.

"Two years ago, we were able to negotiate a better deal," Schlapper said. "We're asking United Healthcare to negotiate with us again on pricing for the students." Schlapper says United Healthcare has already shown it is willing to negotiate premiums.

"It's a big deal to students and faculty," Schlapper said. "It is important to have more choices, because faculty and students need it." Schlapper says United Healthcare has already shown it is willing to negotiate premiums.

"If United Healthcare wants to continue to offer the plan, we're going to negotiate with them," Schlapper said. "If they don't want to continue to offer the plan, we're going to negotiate with another company." Schlapper says United Healthcare has already shown it is willing to negotiate premiums.

"I'm not sure if United Healthcare is going to continue to offer the plan," Schlapper said. "But we're going to negotiate with them." Schlapper says United Healthcare has already shown it is willing to negotiate premiums.

Getting colleges to pass the test

By James M. O'Neil
The Dallas Morning News

College students who still have flimsy memories of their way through the SAT testing process and the overly complex college application ritual might not have mastered the essentials when they begin to use their brains. They should take advantage of the time they have before they graduate from high school to develop a sense of curiosity and a love of learning.

We are told that for young people who are going to college, the SAT is a requirement. The test is a metric that is supposed to help students pass the test. It is not. The SAT is a measure of how well a student can perform in a certain subject, not a measure of how well a student can learn something.

Many believe that the SAT is a measure of how well a student can learn something. It is not. The SAT is a measure of how well a student can perform in a certain subject, not a measure of how well a student can learn something.

While students bullied and beat up through the Boise State University Quad last week, they may have noticed a collection of hand-printed T-shirts dangling on a clothesline.

On Oct. 5 and 6, the Women's Center and the Women's and Children's Alliance of Idaho hosted the Clothesline Project on the Quad from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The event, which took place at the Student Union, was a part of the Boise State University Go Gold Week, a campaign that promotes awareness of the importance of www.cancer.org.

The Clothesline Project takes place everywhere to raise awareness for domestic violence.

According to Bev La Chance, director of social services at the WCA, the project originated in Massachusetts before it spread to Idaho. The WCA opened the project alone for several years before joining with the Women's Center.

"We collaborate quite a bit on a variety of things," said La Chance. "I am pleased with our partnership." The Clothesline Project displayed T-shirts strong on a clothesline. There weren't just cotton-white T-shirts, survivors of physical, sexual and emotional violence passed their individual stories on them.

"It allows those individuals who have been victimized by violence to have a canvas," said La Chance. "It creates awareness. However, the display was not limited to victims. The Clothesline Project invited anyone to come down to the Quad and decorate a T-shirt.

There weren't any charge to participate, art supplies were provided and every T-shirt received a spot on the clothesline display.

"It's very much a public art exhibit," said Women's Center Coordinator Wendi Viento. An art exhibit proved to be a definite focus of the exhibits. Each T-shirt had its own message concerning abuse.

Several of the shirts displayed straightforward phrases like "There is hope after abuse." And "It takes years to earn trust and seconds to lose it."

Others contained complex images and personal poetry. The shirts also ranged from child to adult to portray that domestic violence can affect anyone.

Viento said that the decorated T-shirts gave a new outlook on domestic violence.

"When situations are presented in a different way, people pay more attention to it," Viento said. "La Chance agreed with this.

"I think the T-shirts are very effective," La Chance said. "People stop and they ask questions about the dialogue. We need to keep that dialogue going."

Viento and La Chance also supported the project's role in the Uncovering Secrets Program on Saturday. Volunteers wore the T-shirts and mirrored the parade under the motto "make coming home safe."

"I think it's a very powerful event," Viento said.

Going into this event, I thought what to expect was a standard slam poetry night. This is going to be bad.

The pronounced wavering was due to the lack of poetry and verse that was needed to be written in order to be effective. Instead of reciting the poems, I was met with a group of people who were very active and passionate about their poetry.

Poetry Slam exhilarates audiences

Last Thursday night, local poets and featured professional poet Taylor Mallard recited their verses in a poetry slam held at the Student Union.

While winners of the event won prizes, the audience enjoyed a night of poetry involving diverse subjects and witty humor.

The event was put on by the Women's and Children's Alliance of Idaho and brought Boise State "The Clothesline Project" and "Domestic Violence Awareness Month."

The event also featured a T-shirt decorating session for those wanting to get involved.

Participants were permitted to dress in different ways by different performers. Some of the poets were read to victory traditional poetry, which were recited and all poems were given the writers' voices while performing.

Although attendance of the event was only about 30 people, the energy was high and people were engrossed by the experience.

The middle three spots ended up to the final two spots. Mallard won first place and "It takes years to earn trust and seconds to lose it."

The type of poems that each performer presented new different. One poet was in his low thirties, performed a poem about the effecting up of the come-up with a light body of a certain tribe.

Another young poet performed a long poem that was actually quite simple and made use of a word that he was a result of the community's lack of awareness. His poem was about how he became involved in drugs. There were a few poets who performed amateurly because I was not that experienced in writing poetry. Some other poems概况 as fast as I could finish them.

The second part of the poetry slam was performed by the professional poet Taylor Mallard. He was astonishing. I changed my view of poetry that I had guided to the house in years past. His poetry was interesting, the performing poets' poems were both very good and quick and he was a definite winner of the competition. Many others were about their experiences as an eighteen grade house..."

The Poetry Slam won much applause from the audience and the audience was very enthusiastic about the event from the beginning. Boisterous applause came in response to a new poem and a new song, and you get a Poem Slam.

There was another Poetry Slam coming up on Monday, Oct. 7 at 7 p.m. in the Fitness Room Community Club.

Although there is a change in the name, it is still in the same place and same time. We look forward to you coming in and getting involved in what we believe is a great cause.

BOISE STATE students and faculty met Sept. 3 for the monthly Ethnic Luncheon, which provided international and minority students with a forum for cultural discussion and a variety of foods.

By JULIA C. ARREDONDO

Every month, Boise State University students and faculty meet for the monthly Ethnic Luncheon, which is held at the Center for Construction Technology and provides a platform for cultural discussion and a variety of foods. This month, the theme was "Employee of the Month," and the attendees were treated to a variety of dishes from around the world.

The luncheon began with a brief introduction by Dr. Michael Laliberte, executive vice president for Administration. Laliberte spoke about the importance of recognizing employees for their hard work and contributions to the university.

The main event of the luncheon was a presentation by Dane Martinson, an employee of the month at the Center for Construction Technology. Martinson shared his experiences with the attendees, discussing his work and the various cultural experiences he has had during his time at the university.

The luncheon ended with a closing address by Dr. Michael Laliberte, who thanked everyone for attending and for their contributions to the success of the university.

The Ethnic Luncheon is a wonderful opportunity for students and faculty to come together and learn about different cultures and traditions. It is a reminder of the importance of diversity and inclusion in our society.

For more information about the Ethnic Luncheon, please visit the Center for Construction Technology's website or contact Dr. Michael Laliberte.
In the last decade, as a society we have evolved immensely in the technology of our world. We've gone from cassette tapes to digital music and now to streaming. This evolution extends to cell phones, with a vast array of capabilities. Sadly, our manners haven't evolved alongside our technological advances.

Cell phones are becoming to us even more an integral part of our lives. In a previous article, we mentioned that we need to be more conscious of how we use our phones. The problem with phone rudeness is that they are life-long friends, and you have no room for sanction in your personal, your gray, and black areas. If you don't like something, you can just stop looking at it.

The Broncos started strong, dominating the Bulldogs early on. The Broncos scored a touchdown on their opening drive, giving them a 7-0 lead early in the first quarter. Louisiana Tech managed to score a touchdown late in the first quarter, but the Broncos took over from there.

In the second quarter, the Broncos scored again,扩大ing their lead to 14-7 at halftime. Despite a strong showing from Louisiana Tech in the second half, the Broncos held on to secure the win, 19-13.

Boise State's defense was the key to their victory, holding Louisiana Tech to just 13 points. The Broncos' offense also performed well, scoring 19 points on the strength of a strong running game and sharp passing.

With the win, the Broncos move to 3-0 on the season and remain tied for first place in the Mountain West Conference. Louisiana Tech falls to 2-1 on the year.

This victory is significant for Boise State as they look to continue their strong start to the season. The Broncos will look to continue their winning streak as they prepare to face their next opponent.
The tournament always turns in its memory competition as the games go on with big band rights on the field. The year's champions were the Penguins. The Penguins managed to score by running the ball past the line. The final game ended with 12,000 fans cheering for Team Money.

Success is one of the biggest factors in determining how far a team can go in the tournament. The end of season round where there must be four girls out of eight players on the field at all times. A girl is also required to touch the ball as every other play from scrimmage whether it is by throwing or running a pass. The other tournament rules make all other players important in the teams' success.

Alain Rodrigue, of the BSU Recreation Department, is in charge of running the tournament every year. Rodrigue said the Toilet Bowl production wouldn't be possible without the help of Boise State students. In fact, it takes approximately 15 students to put on the tournament on an even larger stage than the blue turf in Bronco Stadium. The Utah Jazz held its training camp at Boise State University's Taco Bell Arena last week (Oct. 3-7) to kick off the basketball season, beginning on Friday, Oct. 6 with an open practice for fans and media. The team was scheduled to play against the Utah Jazz this year. The practice featured two days of inter-squad scrimmages to showcase the team to fans and media with an open practice on Friday night. The Utah Jazz opened the season with an open practice including an open scrimmage in front of a sold-out crowd. The team is set to play against the Los Angeles Lakers on November 1. Derek Fisher, a 10-year NBA veteran, made his first trip to Boise. Fisher, who had seven points (14pts, 2reb, 1ass) and CJ Miles (18pts, 3reb, 2ass) and Deron Williams, who had 10 points, two assists and four rebounds, made the biggest standouts in Friday's scrimmage. Chase had 13 points, two assists and three rebounds. Fisher said, "I'm just beautiful, beautiful people and the landscape with the water and the trees, I was born and raised in Little Rock (Arkansas), so these kind of places hit home for me. It's a great campus. I wish that when I was in school, we could have had facilities like this. Everybody loves an open practice to get away from Salt Lake City and we played other guys and it was a second round pick in the 2006 NBA Draft. He averaged 14.2 points in 33 games for the Illinois Fighting Illini in 2005. Brown said he is looking forward to returning to Boise this year. "It's been fun just to come here and be able to play and enjoy the Arena," Brown said. "It allows me to get out there and my teammates are going to do great, too. I've been here before so I'll be good to see a lot of people come out, I'm excited. We're ready to go." The team is set to play against the Los Angeles Lakers on November 1. TIPS FOR A GREAT PODCAST

Start with simple topics and gain confidence over time. Your first shows need not be as polished as your later ones. The key is to add professional flair.

• Less is more. Don't rant about nothing and change the subject when it gets stale.

• Editing: for every ten people who listen to your show, eight won't be truly engaged. Ten is a crowd. Too many people chat, talk over each other, or repeat themselves.

• Scripted shows are boring but bullet points are necessary if, you're intent on making the little audio file come across as engaging.

• Less is more. Don’t rant on about nothing and change the subject when it gets stale.

• Sensitivity: How Couples Can Stay in Jobs They Hate for All of the Wrong Reasons. For those of you who still have questions about money, credit, debt, and other touchy subjects, this is a must-listen show.

•报送: The greatest way to get the dialog going and see how other couples have creatively coped with difficult questions about handling money.

• Money: "If I don’t have any money, how can I get better?"

A. There is a challenge to get you to think small and allow your saving habits to become more of a habit.

B. Comming to all of your local banks and changing your checking habits can be a big help.

C. Savings is not the only habit you need to think about. Think of the money you're saving and where it can go.

D. Money is a marathon, not a sprint. You can always change your habits to make them better.

E. Investing: For those of you who are looking to invest, this is for you.

F. Professionals: This show can help you understand the basics.

G. "What do you think of ASBSU’s decision to remove Student Senator Sam Williams for non-participation?"

H. "Metrics, metrics, metrics! It’s a real problem."

Micron Technology (NYSE:MU) slipped $5.10, or 13 percent trading Friday as it came with fourth quarter earnings report that beat short-term operators expectations.

For Q4 2006, Micron reported net income of $151 million on net sales of $4.15 billion. Analysts, on average, were calling for $1.1 million in revenue of $4.18 billion. First Call expected earnings of 86 cents per share on net sales of $4.45 billion.

For the 2006 fiscal year, Micron posted net income of $486 million on net sales of $14.05 billion. Analysts, on average, were calling for $1.8 million in revenue of $14.18 billion. First Call expected earnings of 14 cents per share on net sales of $14.43 billion.

The company has diversified its portfolio in recent years with the diversification efforts, Micron has reduced its dependency on commodities and is now in a position to get enough profit from its NAND flash memory. Micron also anticipated a DRAM recovery which is due to its less dependence on DRAM and has been to gain profits from its NAND flash and CMOS image sensors. The company also anticipated a 10 percent to 15 percent jump in quarterly sales from its NAND flash memory.

"What concerns us is that everything has gone right for Micron, and the company is still having difficulty generating much marginal improvement," said Stever Appleton, an analyst with TMI Research.
