 Brazilians call Halloween cultural imperialism

Around a corner from 8 de Julio's, 8 de Julio the Baptist church, where Brazilians extensively gathered Thursday to mark the Day of the Dead, lies a different type of message about holidays and death.

"To hell with Halloween," reads a sign plastered to a wall underneath a giant beer billboard. "Long live the national culture." This message is clear, except to the millions of Brazilians who have never heard of Halloween.

Brazilians call Halloween "satanic," citing conflicts with Christianity, the Movement for the Valorization of the Culture, Language and Traditions of Brazil and the target of death.

Let anyone think that the protest is against Halloween as such, and not against its commercialized version. The cause is to keep Brazil's unique culture, an identity that is not an inheritance.

For Jorge Becher Mezher, the creator of "La Catedral de La Muerte," a film about the ring of the king of the dead, the idea that Halloween could pollute Brazilian culture is impossible.

"Our culture is thousands of years old. The idea that Halloween could pollute our national culture," said Mezher, "is clear, except to the millions of Brazilians who have never heard of the holiday." The idea that Halloween could be adopted for the festival of Dias de los Muertos, could be purchased for 99 cents each, Cingular co-owned by AT&T Inc. and Bell South Corp., ranks as the nation's largest independent carrier.

City officials warn of ploy

Nampa officials are concerned that a ploy to get into homes by pretending to be city water employees is taking on national proportions.

Sharla Arledge, Nampa Spokeswoman, said Thursday that they have seen a surge in calls from homes, she said.

They carry a city identification card that includes their pictures. They usually make the call from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. from homes, she said.

If anyone receives a call or has someone come to their door asking for entry on behalf of the Water Department, the Nampa Police should be called," Arledge said.

More people and more pollution mean more smog.

Natural foods and medicines cause uncertainty

Among the Treasure Valley for years we have experienced the smog associated with winter.

Smog creates a number of health risks and concerns. Typically, grade school students are taught that heat rises and the smoke rises from smokestacks and furnaces only add to the problem. The Idaho Department of Environmental Protection will start to adhere to federal smog alert system instead of the state.

The DEQ reports this will reduce 2,500 premature deaths in the United States annually. But new with this federal system causes stricter standards for air quality.

For example, the Environmental Protection Agency made some changes recently.

In the past, the threshold for smog particles was set at 15 micrograms per cubic meter. Now the number stands at 18.

Completing more costly with governmental mandates, the federal air pollution standards have been revised.

Why don't people report these issues? Book said, "Lots of times men don't understand. He suggests "the cultural sensitivity that we've had for decades encourages students to understand, that it is the woman's fault. Instead, we need to ask ourselves who raped who?"

What you can do to help avoid sexual assault and/or date rape from occurring:

- Clinical Psychologist at Counseling Services, Lisa Kuzma, said, "The way we talk about it 'we assume responsibility' rapists have to change." When someone talks about a rape, they tend to say 'a woman was raped,' insinuating that it was the woman's fault. Instead, we should say "'a man raped a woman.'" We need to ask ourselves who raped who?"

Book also said, "Students need to take responsibility. Sexual assault is not just a male problem. Women should not be the ones to make decisions that determine what they do. Women should have control over their bodies."

What can you do if you or someone you know has been sexually assaulted or date raped? Book encourages students to contact someone. He suggests "the Counseling Services, the Women's Center or Boise City Police. Report it and get help."

Your right to vote gives your voice power.

Tomorrow, as you go to the polls (and you better go to the polls), think for a second about the true power of voting. It is not raw power. It is not money. It is not fame. It is not a political career. It is none of these things. It is the power to vote. I might call it your voice power.

That initial population of free voters did not include the mass of Americans. The people that are not included today are not always held by any Joe Schmoe in any American city. But you can be certain that it is not always held by any Joe Schmoe in any American city. But you can be certain that it is not always held by any Joe Schmoe in any American city. The Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s did not include the mass of Americans. Protect marriage from the vote: no on HJR2

By Amy Bowman
Opinion/Writer

Where do you stand? If you don't have an opinion, that's fine, but the so-called "gay marriage amendment" will have negative consequences for many people who do not want to identify themselves as anything other than heterosexual. Regardless of whether or not you have problems with gay rights, there are a number of important issues that have been swept under the rug in this debate. Why do we have to attack that diversity?

There are many more reasons to vote no on HJR2, but here are five that are especially deserving of your attention.

1. Protect marriage from the vote: no on HJR2

If marriage is considered a "civil" institution, why are we voting on it? Why do we have to lay down discriminatory language in order to make it legal? Why do we have to make it harder for heterosexual couples to marry?

2. Protect marriage from the vote: no on HJR2

Marty is a starting goalie on the football team, while Nicole is a starting forward for the soccer team.

The couple moved to Boise, Idaho and are both finished their college careers in the fall of 2006. They were both highly successful for the rest of their lives and broke up.

Despite their struggles, both remained determined to make their long distance relationship work. The two spent the fall 2006 school year living in the Boise area, with Marty spending the weekends in Laramie and Nicole spending the weekends in Boise.

The two teams played the fall 2006 school year and enjoyed a successful season. Marty helped the Broncos to a successful season, while Nicole helped the Cougars to a successful season.

Marty and Nicole both agree that the Boise area was the perfect place for them to be together.

"I think being around my family has been a real blessing," Nicole said. "It completely is our relationship. Without it I don't think we would have gone through the last six months together."

"It will be a huge change," Brennan said. "I'm trying to find out if he's going to go. You don't even know what's going to happen."

"I just want him to go," Marty said. "As with most couples, the two saw good times and bad. The two have been through a lot together."

As the Boise State football team continues to creep up higher and higher in the national polls and rankings, Bronco running back Ian Johnson’s name continues to get thrown around more and more in the Heisman talk.

The lofty stature from Sports Illustrated, The New York Times and ESPN to name a few has boosted the hopes and dreams of Johnson and the rest of the Broncos.

"It’s the team. I’m just part of that," Johnson said. "It’s not like I’m this Heisman-front runner or anything. It’s just if you do well enough and get the recognition, it will open the door for you in the future."

All that may be true, but Johnson’s performance—particularly his performance on national television—have him listed among the Heisman hopefuls. Recently, nationwide polls show ESPN’s quarterback伊恩·约翰逊拿着球面对一堆球员，后退几步，然后转身面对镜头。ESPN的“Heisman Watch”列出了所有可能的参赛者，包括那些可能不会在退赛中表现出来的。Johnson was currently fourth in ESPN’s Heisman watch list.

"I didn’t even know my name was in the Heisman at first. That shows how much I was paying attention. There is someone here that’s closer to me," said Johnson. "It’s one of those things where I know there’s five other dudes out there who deserve their name on it also and they have my respect."

In ESPN’s most recent game against Texas State, Johnson made his way around Broncos defender presenting Johnson and his campaign.

"I actu- ally didn’t notice it until someone threw one from the top row and it Ally didn’t notice it until someone hit me. I was like, ‘what is this, an airplane?’ Then I opened my eyes and I was like ‘what, that’s sweet!’

"Some dude has played those games already this season so Johnson has practiced well in front of wide eyes.

Forest Braden won the WAC and now runs his route, chasing the top of the NCAA

BY ANDREAS KREUTZER
Sports Writer

The Boise State cross country team runs every mile a week that most people drive — 90 miles per week, to be exact. The team runs six times each week and runs up to five miles or a single day. Depending on the time in the season, the runners have two to three "hard days" a week on which they tack on a lot of mileage. On the other days they do what they consider "easy running" for recovery.

All the hard work has paid off for senior American Forest Braden. Braden of Bonners Ferry captured his first individual Western Athletic Conference title under my belt. To be the first individual WAC title for recovery.

How to purchase your first home on a Top Ramen budget

1. Always make a budget. Learn to be good with money, payment due dates and avoid impulse purchases. Until you can do this, the rest of the steps will only get you into trouble.

2. Having credit cards is imperative to establishing credit, but using them too much and not paying them off can harm your credit score. Find a credit card that offers rewards or points for purchases. Finding a credit card at a specific store is the best, since it covers a credit history and boosts a credit score. Remember that it cannot be used unless you make, at a loan with your preferred gas station, a fuel card with your preferred gas station, and pay it the entire fuel bill the following month it will deliver your credit score. After two years, every time you use the card, you will have a strong credit score.

3. There are too many credit cards. Make sure to have more than one but not too many. Having too many cards increases your inactivity to open and it lowers your credit score.

4. After you’ve made your budget, you have a strong credit score. Now you can purchase a house.

In case the whole "superstar thing" doesn't work out

Because we all know the only true superstars are those who never lose. And that's us, my friends. So let's enjoy this moment while it lasts.}
