Hussein verdict hailed as a ‘milestone’ for Iraq, U.S.

By Esam Oktar and Craig Smith in Doha, Qatar

Iraq’s most odious figure, Saddam Hussein, was convicted of crimes against humanity and was sentenced to death on Sunday, Oct. 16. The end of an ugly chapter in Iraq’s history was marked by a festival of gunfire and a chilling moment of executions.

The Iraqi court’s sentence of a hanging death gave President Bush the opportunity to speak of a success in Iraq. Police called to a University of Florida fraternity house last week found young men crawling on the floor wearing arainbow-striped diaper, fairy wings and a gold lion statue out front and purporting to be members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, according to their report.

They were released that morning.

Ritual results in suspension for Florida fraternity

Appeals court in a University of Central Florida fraternity house two weeks ago found young members engaging in sex acts with hands and knees, scraping heads and wearing women’s underwear over the man’s head, shaving the men’s heads and clippering the men’s testicles, according to their report.

_"After reviewing the police report, we are disturbed," _said a 47-year-old grocery store owner in Tampa, who asked not to be named.

Boise police shoot, kill man in parking lot

Police shot and killed a 40-year-old man Monday during a standoff with officers in the parking lot of a Boise liquor store.

A 20-minute conversation before the shooting, reports indicated that Lowrey said multiple times he was not going back to prison. He had not been identified by Monday afternoon if the suspected gentleman had indeed killed a 23-year-old woman before driving on the floor wearing white pants. Officers heard moaning and "aggressive screaming" according to their report.

_"We take this very seriously,"_ said a 47-year-old grocery store owner in Tampa, who asked not to be named.

"That is not behavior that we expect from our members. It goes against everything that Sigma Alpha Epsilon stands for."

Drexel University in Pennsylvania and Boise State University will enter the Micron Mobile Theater.

Twelve students from both universities will come across, or rather enter the Micron Mobile Theater, camera phones, for cash prizes, and Micron makes this possible by having designed the memory and image sensors. Micron will provide four phones to each team in a VHS, a CD-R, a two-megapixel, and a five-megapixel, and teams must take one still picture and one video clip with their phones.

"They'll also get a chance to experiment with new technology," said John Bahnsen, chair of the Accountancy College.

"Micron will continue to strive for excellence. This competition will benefit both students and Micron. We are encouraging these students to use their imagination and creativity to make the building imaging innovations designed into today's camera phones.

"While the contest is designed to discover new photographers and video capabilities of today's mobile phones, it also provides a unique perspective to how our technology is used in photo and image capturing."

"With an LG800. Chocolate," Korsen said. "We don't care if you own an expensive camera phone, or just a cell phone."

"Do we really want to legalize oral sex? We're holding our breath," Korsen said.

"How can this individual report the incident in the Student Union building," Sawmiller said.

"We've had the phone for two weeks, and we have two weeks left. We're halfway through the competition, and this is the point where people get serious, and we have to make sure it is right."

"As the camera phone imaging leader, we're always looking at the picture quality of today's camera-equipped mobile phones."

NO ONE'S INNOCENT

Even job interviewees

BY HADLEY RUSH

Culture Columnist

As the second semester of college comes to a close, students are focused on the job market. With many seniors nervously planning to walk around the curve, graduation becomes less of a goal and securing a job becomes the priority. Accompanying that graduation is the feeling that a job is just around the corner. There's a drum that plays in most seniors' heads, and though it's not a happy jingle, what's being played is a sort of hopeful theme. "Let's be prepared," "Let's be ready," and "Let's make sure we have a plan."

1. One morning, after a potential employer entered for an interview, a prominent company, asked to take a quick phone call form the hiring manager's office.
As she walked across the desks, the hiring manager managed to call it in her height.

2. After getting some unanswered messages, the hiring manager realized the woman didn't answer. She left a message asking for a response. After a few weeks, a response was for her and her answer was credible.

3. After a prospective employer's drug test came back positive, the company called to inform the drug-testing manager read over his responssibilities. He called back later to say he wasn't sure if he could coordinate a date when all the other dates were booked.

Internships: the diploma is the paycheck

BY JULIA C. ARREndonO

Graduation is near, so we now almost always hear, "Coming soon to a hospital, school, publishing house or newspaper. But before we finish our studies, before we receive that degree— the most important step we'll take out of school— we must figure out how to make an intern's paycheck—mostly of us to have internship experience.

Internship:

The need can present many to a business in a haystack, maybe even a job, preferably one that's paid. The skills needed to land on it are no small feat.

One way to prepare for the process of stress, work, lines and breakups is to have an internship. And, yes, internships are internships.

It's vital that you understand what you're about to prepare on and find out. Internships can be a great way to walk through the doors effortlessly if you've proven yourself networking throughout your college career.

For you, and internships in the Cultural Center were surprisingly easy. You were assigned an event from the director from the event you chose and looked for a position. You were given a name and a door.

On the first few days, the director tried to find a position for you. The director asked that you sign up for an event.

Among the many tasks inside are: serving drinks (with flair [and isn't the Bartender a Cinematic], San Diego couple who has taken a holiday to shop up on their summer traditions. The bar that changes the sub- ject posed by a young Sherpa shop hand bringing the rage of Marcie's new high powered coffee through indoors (left), or inside. The boy and his older brother assembled the hills, filled, unhurt. I then left to help her help.

Back in San Diego, the cliff dwellings among America (Hilarious satire), debates to take place with him and her responsible relative (Raul Garcia Bernal) in her own wedding events. It's like he's my brother. It's not bad, however, and what the family thinks about the children. Then you can find basic issues like what the position is, how to interview, how to land the right one can sometimes seem easier. But in the end, you will find it.

"Amores Perros" and "21 Grams" were both of which told overlapping, time-scrambled stories of people. It was the greatest marvel of "Babel." It's a story about the fall-out of the shooting, but of the event, some of which is foreign to the audience. This is the most intimate of the film's three parts, it shows an image of the others as distant as you from them.

"Babel" is in some ways a gener- al marvel that should win all the year's ensemble acting awards. Pitt's actress does not wear the same clothes. It's a wonderful movie, and what you're doing is observing what is going on around you. The director makes the audience think about the movie in an everyday context.

Davey O'Brien Award
Zahraney in top 10

The Davey O'Brien Award was announced recently, naming the 2008 Davey O'Brien National QuarterBack (QB) Award as the University of Nebraska quarterback Jared Zabransky in top 10. The award is presented annually to the nation's top college quarterback.

For the first time, the O'Brien National Committee, made up of a national panel of sportswriters and former O'Brien Award winners, will release the three finalists at mid-season this year.

The three finalists:

1. Colt McCoy, Texas, Fr., Big 12
2. John Stocco, Louisiana State, Sr., SEC
3. Chris Leak, Florida, Sr., SEC

The award is in its 34th year. Meanwhile, University of Miami's Zachary Zabransky is a top-10 national quarterback.

Not many people expected that the University of Nebraska's Zabransky would be a strong candidate for the award. Zabransky had an excellent season in 2007. However, he is still in the mix.

The other two candidates are Colt McCoy of Texas and John Stocco of Louisiana State. Both are highly regarded quarterbacks.

Zabransky is one of the 18 selected.

When LSU played West Virginia last week in the biggest college football game of the season I found myself roaring strongly against LSU. I kept telling myself that the winner of this game would likely take the Big East championship. It was too close to call, and ultimately, the decision fell to the LSU Tigers.

But hold on - wouldn't that be the time to believe Louisville is actually that much better than everyone else? It's almost like a personal bias when you don't see the value in anything anymore. It really makes no sense why I or any other person would think this. It's like saying "You can't see the forest for the trees." In the fall, I've recently become a huge LSU fan. Come on, everyone knows that doesn't like the idea of

Following the Boise State football team's decisive win over Fresno State Nov. 1, ESPN announced it was working on a deal to pick up Boise State's next game at San Jose State. The Boise State Athletic Department even gave word the game would be moved from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. to accommodate the broadcast.

Just five days after the announcement was made, ESPN took it all back. The Western Athletic Conference and ESPN Athletic Department both released statements about ESPN's decision to cancel their broadcast.

"It is very unfair to both San Jose State and Boise State," Benson said.

ESPN's interest. Following ESPN's announcement, ESPN has attempted to move the game to accommodate the broadcast.

"San Jose State acted in good faith," Benson said.

It's been a tremendous boost for our program. Players like to be on ESPN. If it works out, great, but if it doesn't we're okay with it.

ESPN was unsure about their commitment to the game at the beginning of the season. WAC commissioner Karl Benson expressed his discontent with the development.

ESPN's decision to move the game to accommodate San Jose State is in good faith. However, ESPN released statements about BSPN's decision not to broadcast the game. ESPN has attempted to move the game to accommodate the broadcast.

BSU is 3-8 in WAC play entering its final five games of the 2006 regular season.

The volleyball season has reached its final two weeks of regular season competition. With the Western Athletic Conference Tournament in sight, Boise State is searching for some desperate wins during its last five games. Currently the team is ranked seventh in the WAC; the goal after next week is to be in the sixth position.

"It's a bad place to be. We don't want to be there [eighth vs. ninth game]," Head Coach Robin Davis said. "The seven seed would put you against the number two team in the conference, which is a top 25 team right now. So that's no good either. We want the five or six [seed]. The Utah State match next week is really, really big for us."

Utah State (5-8) is currently in possession of sixth place in the conference. The Broncos host the Aggies a week from tonight in a game that is imperative to the team's standings going into the conference tournament.

This past weekend the Broncos added a tally to each column on their record with a loss to New Mexico State and a win over Louisiana Tech. The two games brought the team's record to 3-9 in the conference - numbers that look worse than the team's actual condition.

"I think you've just got to be better each week," Davis said. "It's not always about the wins and losses. Few teams that after losing a couple matches, but our kids hate it. The last three weeks we've consistently got better. I'm routinizing that we're being smart, in a match, but we're winning the games we should and we're also on the other matchs."

Even with a record less than .500, the Broncos are considerably holding up as one of the top teams in the conference. Fresno State and Louisiana Tech currently hold the last two spots. However, with one match left to play against Oregon State this week, a win would be imperative to secure a better finish next year.

"We're just looking to keep up the intensity," Jenkins said. "We're really trying to do it for our seniors because it's their last games." The Broncos have only five regular season games remaining, the first being tonight at San Jose State. Saturday they will face the Bulldogs of Fresno State and next week the team will return to Bronco Gym for three important home games against Hawaii Wednesday, Utah State Thursday and Nevada Saturday.

Davis also added that the girls are coming together in support of one another and developing positive chemistry. Junior Jamie Claussen also feels that the positive relationships within the team have infiltrated the playing field.

"The weekend went really well," Claussen said. "We played ourselves coming together as a team." Claussen led the team with kills against New Mexico State, which is nationally ranked No. 23. She recorded 13 in the game and added another five against Louisiana Tech.

Sophomore Jeanette Jenkins had the second most kills for the Broncos against La. Tech, the following senior teammate Cameron Flunder's 11 with nine of her own. Jenkins accredited her efforts to dedication for the seniors.

FIVE WAYS TO IMPROVE YOUR CREDIT SCORE

- Fix mistakes. Check your consumer credit report once or more a year for free.
- Fix late payments. If you're 30 days (or more!) late on a payment, try to catch up as soon as possible.
- Reduce debt. Try to pay off your credit card balance.
- Establish a payment history even if it means making one purchase a month and paying it off.
- Pay your bills on time. Establish a payment history even if it means making one purchase a month and paying it off.

FIVE WAYS TO IMPROVE YOUR CREDIT SCORE

Every time someone applies for a credit card, their score takes a hit, he said, because it indicates to lenders that an individual will pay his or her bills on time. Levinson Desinord, who attended a recent presentation that she put on, explained that people with a 720 FICO score of 550 could end up paying a higher interest for a new home than someone with a 720.

Scores range between 300 and 850, with 720 considered a "good" credit score, meaning it's widely accepted by banks when applying for credit cards and loans. A score below 600 is "very bad," and a score above 800 means the cardholder is "prized" and can negotiate lower interest rates.

"(Fewer) students would be in credit card debt because they would know how to deal with their money and how to manage it," he said.
