REPORTED GREENBELT VICTIM RETRACTS STATEMENT - CLAIMS ATTACK NEVER HAPPENED

BY DREW MAYES
Editor-in-Chief

Boise Police recently said the Boise State University student leader who claimed he was attacked because of his sexual orientation continued to defraud detectives of the truth.

Investigators said the student admitted using a stick and his fins to self-inflict his injuries and that other evidence connected to his initial report had also been fabricated.

Police spokesman Larry Hightower said the student’s lack of cooperation is obstructing an investigation with evidence uncovered by detectives during their investigation.

“Boise Police explored every valuable resource in investigating the initial report. When compared, the investigation on filing a false report will be transmitted to the prosecution department for a possible charge.” Hightower said.

“Filing a false police report is a crime puned with a penalty of up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.”

The student claimed last week a white male struck him from behind while wearing a stick and that he went to the emergency room. Officers immediately went to the Quad.

The student was then transported to the emergency room for treatment, “Officers were unable to locate any evidence of an assault,” Hightower said.

A Boise Police captain said the student was then treated for self-inflicted injuries and that the injury report had been forged.

The captain said the student later admitted using a stick to cause his own injuries and that he did not want the reports to be released to the public.

“Boise Police are committed to investigating any and all claims,” he said.

Boise Police and Boise State administrations have said it is not the university’s policy to release individual victim information.

The campus community has been concerned about the investigation, which has been ongoing for more than a week.

The Boise Police Department has also been working with the Boise State Police Department, which is handling the investigation.

“I believe that Boise Police and Boise State administration are working very hard to get this investigation completed,” Hightower said.

“I hope to have the case completed and the suspect brought to justice,” he said.

The Boise Police Department has said it is committed to investigating all claims and that it will not tolerate any form of discrimination.

“Boise Police are committed to investigating all claims and to ensuring the safety and security of all Boise State students,” Hightower said.

“I believe the investigation will be completed soon,” he said.

Kyoto bans flashing neon ads, rooftop billboards

In a move to protect the historic character of the capital, the municipal government of Kyoto, Japan, has banned ads on buildings, billboards, towers, and rooftops. The ban comes in response to a broader campaign by the city to restrict ad displays on structures that are part of the city's heritage.

Kyoto officials claim that ads on buildings block the magnificent views of the mountains from the city, while flashing ads ruin the elegance of its world-famous ancient temples.

The city government will now control the municipal regulations on outdoor advertising within its boundary and implement the ban on ad displays on such buildings. The ban applies to the whole city area, not just specific zones, and Kyoto will be the first city in the nation to enact such a law.

The mayor of Kyoto, who is the leader of the municipal government for the city, said, "We have decided to ban all flashing neon ads and rooftop billboards because they detract from the beauty of our city's ancient streets."

Kyoto officials argue that ads on buildings, particularly in areas within a 500-meter radius of the city's world-famous ancient streets, could seriously harm the aesthetics of the area. The city government will now revise its zoning regulations to make it illegal to post ads on buildings or rooftop billboards.

The city has also revised its world-famous ancient streets, which are World Heritage sites and 30 percent of urbanization, to restrict ad displays on such buildings. The city government will now control the municipal regulations on outdoor advertising within its boundary and implement the ban on ad displays on such buildings. The ban applies to the whole city area, not just specific zones, and Kyoto will be the first city in the nation to enact such a law.

FAKE 'HATE CRIME' VICTIMIZES BOISE STATE

By MICHAEL MCLASKY

Offensive Speeches:

A man American, I think he told me he was from Idaho, walked by my dorm recently, I'm not sure. But anyway, he was wearing his usual black jacket and carried a book under his arm. His eyes were sunken and his skin was stretched over his bones like a tattered flag. He looked like he was going to attack someone, but I'm not sure. Anyway, he started talking to me and asked if I knew anything about the Boise State football team. I told him that I didn't, but he insisted that I should. He then began to explain his theories about the team's success and the impact it had on the community.

"You see, the Boise State football team is like a national institution," he said. "It's not just a sport; it's a way of life. The players are like family to the fans, and the stadium is a place where people come together to celebrate.

"But what's really amazing is how the team has grown and changed over the years. When I was a kid, it was just a small school with a bunch of hometown kids. But now it's a national powerhouse, and everyone's talking about it.

"And the impact on the city is huge. The publicity, the money, the pride... it's all good. The Boise State football team is like a beacon of hope for the entire state.

"But the真正 interesting thing is how the team has affected the community. It's like a family that we all belong to. And it's a family that we can be proud of."

He then walked away, leaving me with a newfound appreciation for the Boise State football team. It's true, the team is a source of pride for the entire city. And I'm glad I got to see it for myself.
The Stones: Still rolling and rocking, even in Idaho

By Drew Mayes

Four British instructors in Baggy Trousers sit down. The Rolling Stones have seen and done it all after their performance at Boise State football's Boise Bowl on Nov. 30. Now, they've officially played elsewhere.

In the concert that nobody thought they'd even see, The Rolling Stones Angled, juggled and grated in the delight of more than 33,000 screaming fans for more than two hours. Specialties the concert would be continued no matter what. And, they actually did pick three days before the show when lead singer Mick Jagger's father died of pneumonia.

But The Stones showed up in every sense of the word. The show lacked all the glamour of guitarist Keith Richards appearing onstage from seemingly nowhere, with an abundance of under filling the dark. At the Idaho Center, Jagger followed close behind, shouting "Temple of Love" and "Miss You." No one knew what would happen, let alone that the concert would be announced three days before.

And just when the crowd (ranging from seventh graders to seniors) of Boise State football's Boise Bowl thought the night was over and the Stones had perhaps rolled their way to the biggest concert of the season, here came the 63 year-old Jagger hitting the stage and onto the catwalk singing profusely. The Stones settled things down with songs like "Start Me Up" (in case you were wondering - "The best of the night") and "Rough Justice" (from their new CD) and classic Stones' hits "Honky Tonk Woman." The Stones had perhaps rolled their way to the biggest concert "Boise" had ever seen, a two-song encore hit. Their impressive set list included "You Can't Always Get What You Want," "You Can't Always Get What You Want."

Adding Idaho to the many states The Rolling Stones have played in, they performed. The years, Mick Jagger and the group brought down the house with years of songs. It's not often that the people are calling the best concert to come to the land of potatoes.

An altar doesn't have to alter friendships

Support and understanding are the hallmarks of any good friendship. That's why it's so important to keep your friendships strong.

There are only so much of your life you get. With most relationships, there is a sense that now their needs are going to be met by that one person. They think that just because we have kids that we can't go out to the clubs anymore. Now all of her friends are married and the baby and makes her life easier, but she has to make it pretty in touch with everyone's interests. There is a feeling in society that "We just don't have a lot in common."

"There are only so many friends to keep up with things and meaningful friendships. If you have a lot of friends you can talk to each other and keep in touch," she said. "We have the same learning experience.

But friendships don't have to end. They push in. They are the foundation of our lives. They keep us grounded. They are the foundation of our lives.

"Your life is in your own hands. You can go to the clubs anymore. This is so important," she said. "We have the same learning experience."

A huge fan of the award-winning HBO series "The Sopranos" and owner of season 1-4 (don't worry, I'll pick up the next two soon), I just couldn't resist picking up the PlayStation video game, "The Sopranos - Road to Respect." The game's storyline follows the life of Joey Bonpensiero as the newest recruit to the New Jersey mob family, Joey, the son of the late Sal Bonpensiero, finds himself robbing cars for petty ends, that is, until Tony Soprano takes him under his wing. For those who are not familiar with Bonpensiero, here's some background - He was once Tony's best friend, but turned FBI rat. Tony and his crew took care of him and now he "sleeps with the fishes." Bonpensiero's reputation is a constant reminder for Joey that he needs to prove to Tony that he can be trusted—thus he's on the "Road to Respect." As the player, you help Joey with some menial tasks and dish out random pay in the bathrooms and dump bodies in the Atlantic. The fight scenes are the best, although they don't compete with those on the show. The best two fights include a urinal and a file cabinet enough said. Players are able to choose whether the dialogue between Joey and the other guy will be tough or smooth; and you control all the fight scenes. Players even experience a lap dance.

Players are able to choose whether the dialogue between Joey and the other guy will be tough or smooth; and you control all the fight scenes. Players even experience a lap dance. After each task is complete, a dialogue box appears and gives the player directions to the next objective. And when you lose (yes, I lose), you can hear great lines from the show like the one from Paulie, "The guy killed 10 Czeckoslovakians, and he was an interior decorator." If you're handy with the controller this game will be a breeze. However, if you don't have any previous knowledge of "The Sopranos" you'll be lost. Don't even try to watch an episode or two because that won't do the trick. Capisce. Cugines (according to the mob speak glossary of the University of Tampere, Finland, the term means "young tough guys looking to be made") may get lost in the lingo and/or overwhelmed by the bloodshed; make sure you do your homework before committing yourself.

Other than the ridiculously long load time, this game can entertain you and relieve your "Sopranos" craving until the extended season six episodes begin (whenever that is).

Johnson - 147 yards on 24 carries.

Johnson changed the complexion of the Boise State offense with a career-best 147-yard rushing performance to lead the Broncos to a 33-14 victory Saturday over the Wolf Pack in Reno.

Johnson's performance came at the perfect time as the Boise State offense has struggled to find consistency during the team's six-game losing streak.

"We finally got the run game going," said Boise State coach Chris Petersen. "We're going to have to continue to run the ball. It's a feature of our offense. We're not going to get much success if we don't run the ball."

Johnson's 147 yards on 24 carries was the most by a Boise State player since 2002, when Brock Forsey ran for 157 yards against Nevada.

"We all know how much we need him," said Petersen. "He's a good running back, we've got to get the ball in his hands and let him run."

Johnson's performance came after he had 15 carries for 48 yards in the Broncos' loss to Nevada last Saturday.

"I've never seen him grab the ball or feel like my legs were full of life," said Petersen. "He's been playing a lot of defense and he's done well, but he's been doing all the extra work."

Despite his big day, Johnson still carried the ball 25 times. But even though the Boise State offense struggled to run the ball, Johnson was able to break the 100-yard mark.

"I didn't think we'd have that much success in the run game," said Petersen. "But we knew we had to do that. We had to rely on the running game to open up the offense."

In the first quarter, the Boise State offense was stagnant as they were held to 100 yards in the first quarter. But in the second quarter, the offense came to life with a 57-yard field goal from Montgomery.

"We needed that field goal to get us back in the game," said Petersen. "It was a big lift for us."

In the third quarter, the Boise State offense scored two touchdowns to put the game out of reach. The first touchdown came on a 10-yard run by Johnson, and the second touchdown came on a 34-yard pass from Zabransky to Montgomery.

"I'm as humble as possible, but I want the money all to myself. Not that I deserve it, but at least I can help my family," said Johnson.

Johnson's performance was rewarded with a scholarship to the Fiesta Bowl, where the Broncos are set to face Arizona State.

"I'm excited about playing in the Fiesta Bowl," said Johnson. "I'm looking forward to the opportunity to play in a bowl game."
Westerlund returned it 45 yards for a score), but since the Nevada offense is not as effective as a one-legged man in an ass-kicking contest, it really didn't matter.

Scandrick, in the second quarter and returned it to the Wolf Pack 16-yard line.

Zabranksy threw one interception. It proved costly (Nevada senior Nick Naanee caught seven balls for 129 yards and the score.

Marty Tadman recovered a Robert Hubbard fumble, forced by Orlando Officially the force was given to Andrew Browning.

Shields especially liked Ward's even-handed and unobtrusive defensive style of play and his attitude toward the sport. "I've played football, but it just wouldn't be the same," he said.

Shields chose to go to Boise State, followed by head coach Chris Hinkle. "He has this style of play and his attitude toward the sport," he said.

We have probably one of the best coaches in the country," Shields said. "He produces winners and I know our team would be good."

Ward said his number one priority is to get better and to train more. "I like tennis, too, and would like to do something different." Shields said.

The tennis team completed their season 8-4, 5-3 WAC. They will face a team from the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Jackson got off to a slow start, only rushing for nine yards in the first quarter and 46 in the second. Jackson capped off the short drive at 13:00 of the second quarter with a 4-yard run. The score was 4-0.

Winny Perretta also scored another touchdown, a 5-yard keeper to the left. Korey Hall also had seven tackles to lead the team.

"We knew this was one of our biggest games because of the situation and we wanted to get things rolling," said Hall. "We have probably one of the best coaches in the country."

If everything falls in place next season, Shields was the number one contender for a national championship title. "If everyone is healthy, I think we can get past anyone in the country," Shields said.

ter year and forced three turnovers.

Jared Zabranksy had another solid game at quarterback for BSU. The senior threw for 299 yards on 20-of-27 passing and one long, beautiful bomb to Andy Hall.

Coach Petersen could have given Montgomery other opportunities in the first half, but opted to go for first downs deep in Nevada territory. The Wolf Pack offense was stopped there. I didn't have any regrets at all."

Wekind of got too good too early, so we had to stick with that sport," Shields said. "And it made me realize that it would be the sport to go with."

Weknow this is not the time to slowdown. However, June's quick progress made it clear that it would be the sport to go with."

Nevada will probably earn a berth in MPC Computer Bowl. Boise. They finished the season 8-4, 5-3 WAC. They will face a team from the Atlantic Coast Conference.
