TUESDAY: Boise State Writing Project: Nonfiction, Poetry and Fiction Workshop

BY JOSLYN SALOW, News Writer

Greg Hampikian, director of the Idaho Innocence Project and DNA expert for the Georgia Innocence Project, worked with student interns Chad Williams last semester on the DNA exoneration of Willie "Pete" Williams, an Atlanta, Ga., man who has served 21 years of a 45-year sentence for rape. He was released Jan. 21.

A Boise State professor in the departments of biology and criminal justice, Hampikian regularly trains project interns and serves as the Project board's expert. It is likely he learned of DNA evidence on "Pete" Williams' case that had been mistakenly sealed from the destruction of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. That evidence led to Williams' exoneration.

Third-year law student at Georgia State University, Chad Williams, did the investigative work on the case and retrieved the nail kit that was tagged for destruction, which contained the DNA evidence needed to lead to the exoneration.

Hampikian, long-time resident of Georgia, is closely associated with the Georgia Innocence Project, one of many innocence projects in the country.

According to Hampikian, the interns do most of the work. He said that he makes students about DNA, answers their questions and gives them the cases that they are working on in order to enable them to see what additional testing needs to be done.

Hampikian commented on the significance of the exoneration of Chad Williams as an exonerated person.

"I am very kind of saying that we have an ongoing effort to reform systems, if you please. People are innocent there is no good system because you have the power and weight of the state accruing against you and there is no check and balance to mitigate those jurisdictions," Hampikian said.

He said that in many cases the accused are interrogated and admit to false guilt to avoid longer sentences.

"Twenty-seven percent of the first set of innocence project cases that were documented went false confessions during investigations," Hampikian said. "Making deals about the truth hurts innocent people."

Above: Mandell Executive Director of the Georgia Innocence Project, commented on how easily mistakes in identification lead to life sentences.

"Pete Williams' case is a classic case of mistaken identification. Mr. Williams was changed with two critics (tissue and organelle). Both victims and a witness identified him to the police. Mr. Williams was only tried for rape. The crimes were committed on the same date at the same place. Pete was never charged with that," Maxwell said.

She said that in the past few years the Innocence Project received 350 cases and Williams was one of them that the organization worked on.

"Finding the evidence is one of our biggest challenges," Maxwell said. "25,000 laws would throw away the evidence and make it disappear. In 2006, the Georgia Legislature passed a law that says the preservation of evidence for 10 years."

Suicide bombs kill 45 at Shiite mosque in Hillah

A pair of powerful suicide bombs ripped through a Shiite market in Hillah killing 45 and wounding 130 on a day when the government reported no violence for the first time on a daily basis.

The complexity of violence is so great that most of it happens in the day, as political factions clashed over a government account of a weekend battle that pits U.S. and Iraqi forces against a Shiite cult's armed cells, fearful of the shockwaves for the Shia community.

Opponents of the Baghdad government have accused authorities of using the battle to clamp down on innocent Iraqis from opposing Shia chums. The government denied it, as it has announced a crackdown on suspected supporters of the cult near Najaf.

"Anyone who violates the law and threatens the lives of citizens is persecuted according to law," said spokesman Ali Al-Dabbagh.

Besides the blasts in Hillah and mortar attacks against Shia and Sunni neighborhoods in Baghdad killed at least 17 more people Thursday as U.S. and Iraqi forces prepare for a security surge to pacify the capital, according to an Associated Press account.

All the information at Al-Dabbagh's office came after the operation," said opposition parliament member Fadl al-Jamalawi. "When did they review this information? Before or after the incident? Why did they launch an attack without this information?"

Jamalawi called for a judicial investigation of the bombs. "We must distinguish between military and criminal jihad," he said.

Earlier, Shiites from Al-Sadr, who (with Muqtada al-Sadr) was a puppet government formed by an international coalition plan, said angry mobs attacked a shrine in Baghdad, killing 20 and wounding 40.

Final Harry Potter book to be released on July 21

Hogsmeade has been the place to be for Harry Potter fans since the fifth film. "Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix" hits cinemas just eight days earlier, on July 13.

The seventh book is expected to be better than the sixth, according to one of the biggest fans. Rowling has revealed she will kill at least one character. Fans fear that Harry himself may be one of them.

President George W. Bush has agreed to visit the capital after the incident, his press secretary said. The White House said Mr Bush will meet with Middle East officials today to discuss America's response to the incident.

February is a month of celebrity, fame and recognition. February is distinguished as National Cherry Month, Candy Fruit Month, National Sundae Month and Pet Dental Month. Perhaps an ideal Valentine's Day gift basket should include some cherries, a candy fruit, a sundae bar, toothpaste for your cat and a box of dog treats. February should not only be celebrated for its weather, flowers and Valentine's Day, but also for its month-long focus on dental health.

Get a jumpstart on spring sports fashions with technology mixes entertainment with exercise

Welcome to the future, in which you can exercise using electronics- laden cardio equipment that sends beads to the locker room. A new generation of machine/ trainer marriages and efficient trainers to monitor and rate exercise is taking exercise to higher levels while entertaining, entertainment options such as iPod ports, games and built-in TV sets. The “interaction is everything,” says Mike Podany, manager of Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association in Washington, D.C. “If the future of exercise is home, you have to have entertainment.”

The Internet's booming social networking trend has reached a new milestone: Web sites are begin-

That means all those Web-savy coupon types, the people who post advertising videos or write a review about the neighborhood dry-cleaning, could be earning $10 per click on the classified site.

The move to pay people for content has been de-

The decision was up the potential for a monu-

The BSU women's basketball team dropped its first conference game of the year to UNM.

BY KYE JOHNSON  Assistant Sports Editor

It was the Skins Moore show right from the start when the Boise State women's basketball team took on New Mexico in the opening game of the season. The second-ever meeting of the two programs, which New Mexico defeated by 70-55 in 2006 when BSU was still based in Arizona, was an easy win for the Broncos as they turned the score around early on and never gave the Lobos a chance.

"It was great," said Harris. "The fans were just amazing. We had to make sure to have them come out and support us.

"That was a great response from the crowd. By the second half, they were just overflowing, sitting on the floor and cheering us on to the top.

"Kris brought her passion for the fans to the bench, and she cared. She was the best of friends. She wanted to be there for us and support us in any way, shape, or form.

"The crowd was a huge support for us, and we couldn't have done it without them. The fans are great, and we appreciate them for coming out and supporting us.

"The Lobos had a tough time keeping up with us. We made sure to keep the game close and never let them score too many points.
