American diplomat meets with Palestinian prime minister

A senior U.S. diplomat met with the Palestinian finance minister in Jerusalem on Saturday, the first high-level U.S. contact since the Palestinian unity government. The meeting was the sign of the U.S. desire to capitalize on the new political reality.

The meeting between Jacob M. Arnon, the American consul general in Jerusalem, and Salam Fayyad, the Palestinian finance minister, followed on Saturday a visit to the West Bank by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice. Rice was in the West Bank to meet with Palestinian ministers, including Fayyad, on both sides.

Rice and her counterparts from the United States and the European Union discussed the progress on a new Palestinian unity government and the need for a new unity government.

The meeting is part of a broader effort by the U.S. and the EU to support a new Palestinian unity government and to help bring about an end to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

In his recent speech, Rice said that the U.S. was committed to working with the Palestinian unity government to achieve a durable peace in the region.

Volunteer Services Board hosts the Spring Break Alternative trip for its fourth consecutive year

BY JOSLYN SALOW

This is an opportunity for students to learn about another culture, gain a new perspective and spend spring break in a unique way. Friday, March 23, 17 students and two advisors will head for Arizona to spend a week participating in different service projects and visiting the Navajo Indian Reservation.

Brett Berning, Spring Break Alternative Trip 2007 coordinator, gave a preview of the trip and spoke of the group's preparation for it.

The group, which consists of a service committee and a travel committee, planned the entire trip and raised the money required to go. Recruiting for the trip started in September and the group met in October. For nearly six months the group has been raising money with concessions and bounties, a homecoming campaign and sponsorships. The goal was for the trip to be self-sustaining, and so they have asked us to gather some presentation material to give to them on ways to prepare for college, what BSU has to offer, so we are prepared to do our best for the trip.

The group's busy itinerary includes service work at the Boys' and Girls' Club in Ft. Defiance. Berning commented on the type of people they will be helping there. It is a chance to break out of what we normally know as safe and secure in our own American bubble. It is a great way to be a more active citizen and try to support skills that you learn, connect and network with other students and faculty here in the campus and go back and to really appreciate what we have. Berning said.

Berning and the group's executive board include 14 members from a variety of backgrounds. For some of them, this is their first time participating. For others, it is their third or fourth year volunteering for an alternative service trip. Connor McGee, a freshman in international studies, is one of the students participating in Spring Break Alternative this year.

"I hope that we can actually make a positive impact. We have this class that we are taking to understand the history and the culture of the Navajo so that we know what we are going to be doing and that we know what to expect. I am pretty excited," McGee said.

The College Republicans offended me

I was deeply disturbed when I saw the first page of the Idaho Statesman on Monday morning. The actions of the College Republicans Club at Boise State University are abhorrent. As a member of the student body, I was offended by these actions and feel that the members of such groups as the College Republicans, the majority of the people breaking the law are Mexican. We would go to jail for! Ed Keener is lucky he is not allowed to speak the truth.

In the last year they averaged about two incidents. It is a general lacking of diversity and its racial dispositions. I think we take it for granted, I do agree that there is a time when we do evil, but because of those who look on and do nothing, the police have time to pull people over for not having their license, and I was very shocked with the language/"games" that are allowed the members of such groups as the College Republicans.

I have many of my own experiences that result in my opinion regarding race. It is a fact that people from other countries come here and let us know, but it almost seems as if they were doing so in an attempt to cover something that rings with something which seeks and which relies less. It’s absolutely known that the students who would resign. Ortmann’s hasn’t spoken to him in weeks. By the way, there are some people, something out of the ordinary, something common in us. It is a lack of enthusiasm, an abundance of great speeches and a lacking in great actions. It is a fitting and sad reminder that before we can even change for the better, they became worse. ASBSU is running in quicksand and is sinking deeper. In addition, amid all the stuff about flirter and fences this week, the vast majority of readers missed the best news story we wrote all year.

Our columnists reflect the diversity of opinion in the academic community and often will be controversial, but they do not represent the views of this newspaper or any organization the author may be affiliated with unless it is labeled as such.

My adventures on St. Patrick's Day taught me a very important lesson. No, it wasn't that an absence of class was the keynote of the night, or that I spent hours trying to find a guy to help me out of the house. I learned that there is a severe shortage among members of our modern-day society. A shortage of any type of technology, class.

It all began when I was waking uilds Saturday afternoon. I got quite possibly the clumsiest start to a morning ever. He was apparently away all night, which stained from excessive alcohol use and was swaddled in jeans and a cotton-covered shirt. The woman he was with seemed to be attempting to talk him into leaving, and I would pick something on the table and we would talk about it and we would follow the discussion.

Once they had finished their match I lifted the tinfoil on the table. The note came to pay me and I joked about it. "You notice the check?"

To bring awareness of West Campus culture

BY STEVE AHLBORN

The West Campus of Boise State University opened for classes in 2005. It has been in existence for many years, but it is steadily growing in popularity, in classes and in responsibilities.

Since the building is fairly new, there isn't much that could be called "traits of the art technology"—including science labs, two computer labs and two distance learning classrooms.

On the Main Campus, most of the same buildings being established will be furnished with the same type of technology. But most of the buildings on the Main Campus were built long before the technology had been invented. Many of the positive aspects of the West Campus deal with the fact that there are about 1,200 students there as opposed to 18,000 students on the Main Campus.

With the buildings being designed the environment, both social and intellectual, which all have fairly low numbers. It seems that there is a better

Boise State University's Dead Eight Film Club will host the annual Boise State Film Festival, which will take place April 29 at the Student Union Special Events Center. This will be the 12th year of production for the festival.

The student-run club is currently accepting applications for video entries. There are three main categories: junior high/school, college/amateur and professional. The main focus is the community and the events and programs within the community. The purpose is to give students as well as non-students an opportunity to be creative and work hands on in video production.

Everything is locally oriented from the creators to the content forging a symbiotic pact of entry. Entry forms can be found at the Boise State Department of Communications office or online at www.tvctvonline.org. This site also offers examples of video entries from previous years.

The website is the home of Treasure Valley Community Television and was first established in 2001. The main focus is the community and the events and programs within the community. The club is currently raising $800 for packages of four.

Reign Over Me
Adam Sandler and Don Cheadle star in "Reign Over Me," a drama starring Adam Sandler and Don Cheadle.

When Charlie Fineman (Sandler) meets up with his former college roommate, Alan Johnson (Cheadle), the two once again become close friends. Fineman has changed and finds out he is in need of healing.

Swagger then decides to find the real shooter and take his revenge on the president. His superiors bring him back to the situation of his ex-girlfriend. The shooting occurs but not by Charlie. The president tells him of a plan to shoot his family in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Charlie then decides to help Fineman deal with the tragedy.

Military man Bob Lee Swagger (Mark Wahlberg) signs after an assignment goes wrong.

The Hills Have Eyes II
"The lucky ones die fast," according to the tagline of "The Hills Have Eyes II," the sequel to the 2006 remake of Wes Craven's tale of flesh-eating mutants. This time, a team of National Guard trainees come against their old enemy, The Shredder, but that doesn't stop them from creating their own unique agenda.

Duncan and Joe 1y Richardson star.

The Last Mimzy
Two siblings develop unusual powers after they find a box of toys, supposedly made from the future. Their parents and teachers take notice, and find themselves drawn to the children's new gifts.

"The Last Mimzy" was originally released at the Sundance Film Festival this year.

The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles (hopefully) band together to take over New York City, the Ninja Turtles' home. But when odd events begin to occur, the children's new gifts come into play.

The Turtles (Michelangelo and Raphael defeat their old enemy, The Shredder, but that doesn't stop them from creating their own unique agenda.

The movie is set in the 1980s, and the story is about a group of children who find a box of toys, supposedly made from the future. Their parents and teachers take notice, and find themselves drawn to the children's new gifts.

This Friday the Boise State women's gymnastics team will compete in Head Coach Sam Sandmire's last appearance at Boise State. The Boise State season will not be the Easy one, as BSU goes up against Utah State this Saturday.

"We have a rich history of rivalry with Utah State," Sandmire said. "Their history hasn't been too good for the Broncos over the last six years."

In the Boise State home won three duals and dropped four in head-to-head spots with Utah State, including their last meeting this week in which the Broncos lost 194.650 to 193.375.

The final home for Sandmire has been a tough one this far, but she hopes to award another scholarship this year as a result of the Broncos' successful season.

Although the season has been

Sandmire has already seen the Broncos have had many bright spots, including Ashley Todd's performance on the vault against the Florida Gators in the regionals the past 20 years, but her successful career at BSU will see its last regular season meet this Friday when the Broncos host Utah State University.

BSU sophomore Jeremy Childs will be called upon for production in the Broncos receiving corps next season. Childs is the leading returning receiver from 2006.

The 2007 spring football season has already brought about great debate on who will be the next starting quarterback at Boise State. Whoever wins the race has one important thing to workout - who is he going to throw the football to?

Coming off the miraculous 2006 Fiesta Bowl Championship season, the BSU coaching staff has a big offensive hole they will be trying to fill over the summer.

The hole was created by the graduation of the team's top four receivers from '06. Not only did the Broncos lose three-year starting quarterback Jared Zabransky, but they also lost three senior wide receivers and their star tight end Derek Schouman.

With the loss of Jerard Rabb, Drisan James and Legedu Naanee, BSU will now turn to sophomore Jeremy Childs, who appears to be the best candidate to lead the 2007 receiving corps.

"Things are going pretty well," Childs said about spring practice. "I've been competing with Kyle [Wilson] and Orlando [Scandrick] - the two starting cornerbacks from last year. I'm learning a lot, trying to get all the small details down. It's going to be a fun spring.

The biggest challenge BSU will face in the passing game is replacing its top three receivers with Jerard Rabb, Trevor James and Legedu Naanee from last season.

Rabb led the team in receptions with 37, which he turned into 586 receiving yards and four touchdowns. James was second in receptions with 36. He led the team in receiving yards with 650 and added four touchdowns.

Naanee was third in receptions with 35 and racked up 541 yards along with a team-high 6 receiving touchdowns.

As a group, Rabb, James and Naanee caught 68.8 percent of Zabransky's total passing yards in 2006. The trio also tallied 56.5 percent of his total completions and 60.5 percent of his passing touchdowns in 2006.

Childs brings the most receiving experience to the table in '07 after finishing the '06 campaign sixth on the team in receptions. He finished the year with 14 catches for 152 yards and one touchdown.

The best game of Childs' career came at Nevada in the season finale.

He finished the game with three receptions for 65 yards in the game that clinched the Western Athletic Conference title and a berth to a BCS game.

"It was a great season last year, but there's still doubts in people's minds," Childs said about moving forward from last season. "A good team is always consistent with winning and winning big games. So we're not looking back on the past, we're not going to get too much momentum that we had last year.

Childs said he hopes the spring will give him a chance to prepare to be the No. 1 receiving threat for the Broncos next season. He said the approach should be the same for him and the rest of the team in working towards earning the team's sixth straight conference title.

"No team is perfect so you go watch film and see the mistakes you had last year and you correct them this year," Childs said. "You pick up the small details to make the team and make yourself better."
