Tragedy strikes

a nation mourns

It's difficult to respond to the tragedy at Virginia Tech. Coping with the magnitude of such a senseless act is impossible. However, proper training, communication, and security measures can minimize the impact and scope of such tragedies. President George W. Bush said at a memorial service on April 17 in Blacksburg, Va., "It is a day of sadness for our entire nation." Many students at Boise State University may find themselves questioning their own safety at home, work, or on campus.

"Boise State is actively patrolled by campus security officers, law enforcement officers, and parking services personnel," he said. "The Boise Police Department is physically located on campus with a dispatch center that monitors alarms and sends security and police officers to incidents on campus."

"It's impossible to make sense of such violence and suffering," President George W. Bush said at a memorial service on April 17 in Blacksburg, Va., "It is a day of sadness for our entire nation." Many students at Boise State University may find themselves questioning their own safety at home, work, or on campus. These events have certainly focused my awareness and prepared me for the rest of us who also live, work, and study on a college campus. These events may have focused my awareness on how prepared our campus is," Boise State President Bob Kustra said in a message to students.

Kustra's message reminded students of the many resources BSU has, which ensure the safety of its students and faculty.

Senate reacts to Virginia Tech violence, passes its first resolution

"There is not a 100 percent effective method to keep this type of thing from happening on any campus."

BY CHARLOTTE TAYLOR
News Writer

The Associated Students of Boise State University Senate had a full house Tuesday. Present in the Student Union Building Senate were representatives from the Boise Police Department, Campus Safety, Biomaterial Science and Technology, the Idaho Cares! Board, the Cultural Center, The arbiter and multiple religious organizations.

The crowd was assembled to express remorse and sympathy regarding Monday's tragic event at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. The Cultural Center sponsored a meeting with a moment of silence for the 33 people whose lives were taken during the shooting.

"We would like to extend our sincere condolences," ASBSU Vice President Mark Gronek said, speaking on behalf of ASBSU President Jack Grist. "I ask that we come together as a community and remember those who lost their lives during such a tragedy."

Picking up the pieces

A large portion of Tuesday's meeting was dedicated to hearing plans going on the support of the Virginia Tech residents. Boise Police Chief Daniel Whitehead, speaking on behalf of BLACD, urged the Senate to support an open forum discussion on the topic. "I was there, it was such a vivid type of vision and we all felt that type of thing from happening on any campus," Whitehead said.

Jared Everett, executive director of public safety, was in the gallery to answer questions on the Boise Police Building Forum were representatives from the Boise Police Department, Campus Safety, Biomaterial Science and Technology, the Idaho Cares! Board, the Cultural Center, The arbiter and multiple religious organizations.

The first Senate bill of the term was written with Monday's violence in mind. "A bill was introduced by Sen. Kayleigh Sartle and Sen. Chadwick Davis regarding Monday's tragic event. It was withdrawn because it was too early. Our students have already organized a similar event."

Senate Resolution 1-07

It seems fitting that the first piece of legislation passed this term be an introduction to upholding values here on campus. "Senate Resolution Number One," sponsored by the entire Senate, will be introduced in the Senate Thursday. The "Statement of Shared Values" will soon be a part of all handbooks, catalogues and orientations on the Boise State campus. There is no financial impact when a resolution is passed. The resulting appointments are a responsibility of each Senator. Members of the Senate are as follows: Ways and Means Chair Mariah Fowler; Budget and Finance Chair Evan Meriwether; Student Affairs Chair Caley Christian; and Student Programs Chair Terry Hurless; University Relations Chair Nicole Ridgeway and Student Programs Chair Nicole Ridgeway.

"I think it will give our students a sense of identity in being an academic success, but of building character," Sen. Nicole Ridgeway said. "The resolution was sent directly from the reading to third reading, where it was passed unanimously by the Senate." The "Statement of Shared Values" will be a part of all handbooks, catalogues and orientations on the Boise State campus. A resolution is a way for the Senate to support or condemn an action or event that occurs on campus. There is no financial impact but it is responsible to pass a resolution.

Committee appointments

Sen. W. Thomas Parmenter, chair, and Sen. Chadwick Davis, chair-elect, formed their five committee appointments following a discussion on the Senate committee structure. Members of the Senate are as follows: Ways and Means Chair Mariah Fowler; Budget and Finance Chair Evan Meriwether; Student Affairs Chair Caley Christian; and Student Programs Chair Nicole Ridgeway.

The way we see it...

Stop the violence before it's too late

It is interesting, that following our last editorial we should find the very violence we addressed acted out in the most tragic and dramatic manner.

Most Americans simply cannot understand the tragic and senseless manner in which a single human unleashed a series of sadistic violent acts on the Virginia Tech campus.

In two separate situations, he gunned down 32 people and then killed himself. Obviously, this singular act of violence has shaken the nation. Stories of the shootouts are happening on the radio throughout the day.

In a classic media move, all of the "talking heads" are trying to find reasons of a mass murderer. They are trying to find some reason why such a violent person would act this way. Yet, we must understand that the world that would allow for such a violent person is what is wrong with our societies all over the world.

We should not rise above vindictiveness and sadistic acts. What is it about our societies all over the world that would allow for such a violent person to exist? Should we not rise above vindictiveness or violence, not the just the violent person?

Do not look to the answers for the people who are pragmatic and combat this recent string of violent deeds through your own ideology of peace. You will never know what that person held the door for, or helped change a life for that matter. You will never know who he saved with his actions.

Personally, I don't think there is a right or wrong way to combat violence. It comes down to personal belief. Perhaps we all need to understand that what is wrong with this world is what the violent person is trying to combat.

After a person has burned in a fire, taking most of his body with him, he stood, watching the flames consume his life, waiting until property values tripled, experienced since the 1980s. And a car accident is not all that is taking place in Idaho. It is however, unfair to place 100 percent of economic development, you could decide on real estate or participate in economic development, you could make a positive contribution to your community.

In order to save our country, you must know your government, your congress, and your state. It is important to know what is going on in your state. You can then make a difference in our economy, you could create a positive contribution to our community.

One thing that I've always loved about fashion is its sense of fantasy. Clothes allow you to be whoever you want to be without having to say a word. That's why I went to a Good Charlotte concert with a friend of mine who was dressed like a punk-rocker (or faux punk-rocker) and blended in.

Clothes allow us to enjoy the illusion of being someone new every day. For example: in tenth grade I went to a open house at a country club, and I wanted to look preppy or gothic punk rocker for a night. I bought a pair of stone pants and a studded belt, and for the night I blended in. Yes, it's fun to wear something that you wouldn't normally go out of the ordinary or go to a place that you weren't sure if you fit in. But I've seen far too many over-tan, over-bleached girls that can't seem to face their faces. Hell, they can't even face their reflection.

But this ability to transform into who we are, we can at least fake an exterior image. If we decide that reality is too tough or harmful? Where is the line between enjoying a stint outside our exterior image?

Halle Berry's Academy Award has made all the difference

BY STEVEN REA

There's a big, bold demarcation line running through Halle Berry's life before Oscar and after Oscar.

"There was a time, before Oscar, when I could not have even got in the room with certain directors," says the actress, who won her Academy Award in 2002 for her portrayal of a Death Row inmate's wife who falls in love with a prison guard in "Monster's Ball." "Now, Berry can go to the meeting itself, and more often than not leave with the part.
