Idahoans hold some variety of health coverage at the same rate as those on a national level. Roughly 11% of U.S. citizens don’t have any sort of health coverage as do; those without health coverage in Idaho are nearly identical at a 10.7% non-coverage rate.
Idaho uses private health insurers at a lower rate than the national average. On average, 72% of U.S. citizens use a private form of insurance such as company, union or self coverage health insurance. Idaho citizens used private health coverage at a rate of 52%. Idaho uses Medicaid or Medicare at a rate of 8.3% while U.S. citizens have a 16% rating. Finally, a combination of Medicaid/Medicare and private health insurance is held by 11% of U.S. citizens. Idaho citizens use the same combination at a rate of 13.4%. ³

2. Attitudes toward providing insurance for children.

Priority for Receiving Health Care

L.I. Children (ages 0-19) 59%
Comparison

Polls taken at the national and state level reflect a positive attitude towards providing children in low income families with health care. Fifty nine percent of Idahoans believe low income children should receive the most public assistance for health costs. On a national level, 84% of Americans said they favor expanding a health care program to assist all underprivileged children. Sixty seven percent of those said they would support the program even if it meant paying more income taxes.

3. Most important national and state issues.

Idaho

What is the single most important issue facing Idaho today?

Comparison

While the Idaho survey offers a more broad selection of issues than the national survey, attitudes towards healthcare appear to be nonchalant. Only 2% believe it is the most important issue facing Idaho. On the other hand, from a national perspective it is the most important issue facing the nation. Fifty five percent of those polled believed providing health care for all was the most important issue facing the nation. (Note: The Idaho survey asks citizens an open-ended question. The national poll provided a response set from which respondents chose one best answer.)
