Planning documents describe neighborhood design standards; see, for example, “Blueprint Boise: Boise’s Comprehensive Plan,” public review draft (January 2010) at cityofboise.org. Key primary sources include the archives of the Idaho Statesman and the photos and vertical files at the Idaho State Historical Society Library and Archives. Timberline High School’s Boise Architecture Project documents more than 100 significant buildings at www.boisearchitecture.org.

Capitol City Christian Church at Ninth and Franklin, from the Boise Architecture Project. The church mixed heavy Romanesque arches with Protestant auditorium-style “Akron plan” architecture. It opened in 1910.
