Health Educator, University Health and Recreation Services

Interested in becoming a part of a healthier Boise State? An Ambassador for Health is a member of the Boise State University faculty and staff that promotes health and wellness to fellow faculty and staff in their department as well as students. Ambassadors work with University Health and Recreation Services to update the campus on resources and events which help them lead a healthy lifestyle. Ambassadors also serve as examples for their department on how to live a healthy lifestyle. As incentive, Ambassadors receive a leadership role on campus, special pricing on select services and programs, and a chance to improve personal health along the way!
