WHERE'S YOUR BACKBONE?

Last week we, the student body were called upon to consider the latest proposed constitution. The student council had spent many weeks writing and rewriting it. They admitted that it was not perfect, but they thought that they had improved it and provided answers to a few of the problems that have arisen and will arise next year.

We were asked to read it through carefully and decide whether we thought it worth adopting. Copies of it were available and signs were hung in the halls. May 15, the day of voting arrived, the polling places were in the Student Union, the most convenient place on the campus.

At 9:00 the polls were open. The voting was 24 students out of 100. Twenty students had voted to reject it and 30 students had voted to adopt it. A total of 108 students has voted out of a student body of approximately 600. Exceeds were voted on every side... "I didn't know about it..." "Well, I didn't have time..."

Hoping we as an citizens, going to be able to vote intelligently, if we are too lazy to read a few typewritten pages of a constitueny, can we realize whether it is good or bad and vote accordingly. Even if a student does not like part of all the new constituents, he has no reason in the world not to vote.

Next Monday we will be given another chance to adopt or reject the new constitution. In order for the election to be effective two-thirds of the votes must vote. And for the new constitution to be adopted, a majority of this two-thirds must vote in favor of it. Whether you vote for or against its adoption, GET OUT AND VOTE! Let's show the little more enthusiasm this time, and not have another such disgraceful election in which nobody bothers to vote.

Cannibalism, Result of Necessity

Among Many Primitive People

(Editors' note: This article is one of the feature articles written by the Idahoan English composition classes.)

Modern primitive peoples have been known to kill their young and feed them to those who were left. These people by any standard could barely be called cannibals, for under similar conditions highly civilized men have been known to do the same thing. Under great stress of hunger, occasionally by shipwrecks, genocides, and famines, civilized persons have been driven to the eating of human flesh. The famous case in Algiers in 1868 serves as an example of this. Hunger drove a person to do these things, but we should not even think of doing under ordinary circumstances. In the adventu of Magellan, the ship's crew was so hungry that they were forced to eat the leather from their shoes.

The Spanish discoverers found the practice of eating human flesh to be usual among the Caribs, a West Indian tribe, and from them the same custom was spread. Since that time it has been found that the practice existed among ignorant and barbarous tribes in all parts of the world. In some instances cannibalism seems to have been the natural result of a religious one. The victims were first sacrificed to a god and later eaten; but in many cases the practice appears to have been rather the result of natural stress of hunger. In order to have enough food for their flesh. Only a few of the Indian tribes of the United States indulged in cannibalism to any great extent.

From survivals of historical value, we are led to believe that not only among cannibals, but that those same eating people have a preference for certain races and nationality. It has been said that the flesh of the French is more delicate and tasty, while the flesh of the Spaniards was very tough and hard on their digestive system.

It might be well to consider here that human flesh is actually killed for food, or whether they are eaten. There may have already met their death in death and no other word can be the word of interest among those who have been witness to the events.

Galliers have been busy practicing:

They are now making use of the return of the head. It is a sickening thought. People have been said to take a good look of the head and the body that had been eaten whole. The idea of food is always killed for food, or whether they are eaten. There may have already met their death and no other word can be the word of interest among those who have been witness to the events.

Juvenile Colleges Participate In League

The city softball league is officially under way for another season of great activity and interest. Many of our Boise Junior College athletes are members of the various teams and have been showing great form in their games which have opened the season.

Business organizations of the city sponsor individual teams which compose the league and promise to show a good contest for ball fans during the summer months.

The majority of the community will try out for the numbers, teams, however, some fall out of town teams are on the schedule.

Good luck to all the fellows of Boise Junior College who are participating and helping to preserve such a valuable contest that is worth either for the coming months. They are putting forth all their effort and if you ball fans want some excitement this summer plan to attend their coming games.
