Although this file was scanned from the highest-quality microfilm held by Boise State University, it reveals the limitations of the source microfilm. It is possible to perform a text search of much of this material; however, there are sections where the source microfilm was too faint or unreadable to allow for text scanning. I Remember Mama

When people are gathered in the union and the dance floor is already well-filled, and everyone is dancing, it may seem like the peak of the evening. The spotlight shines on the center of the floor as the DJ announces the next dance. The music fills the air, inviting everyone to join in the fun. It's a moment of joy and celebration, where differences fade away and everyone comes together to share in the experience.

The DJ plays a classic song that everyone knows, and the crowd erupts with joy. The music is blasting, and the energy is palpable. People are moving to the rhythm, laughing and smiling as they dance. The dance floor is a swirling mass of bodies, each one lost in the moment.

As the song reaches its climax, a sudden silence falls over the crowd. Everyone is captivated by the music, and there is a sense of shared experience. It's a moment of unity, where differences are forgotten and everyone is united in the joy of the moment.

The DJ announces a new song, and the crowd erupts again, this time with even more energy. The music is upbeat and exciting, and everyone is dancing with even more enthusiasm. The dance floor is packed, and there is a sense of excitement and anticipation.

As the night wears on, the DJ plays more classic songs, and the crowd continues to dance. The music is the driving force, and everyone is lost in the moment. It's a moment of pure joy, where everyone is united in the experience.

The DJ announces that the final song of the night is about to be played, and everyone is ready. The music is electric, and the crowd erupts once again. The DJ plays the final song, and the crowd dances with even more energy. The music is the driving force, and everyone is united in the experience.

As the music fades to silence, the DJ thanks everyone for coming out and having a great time. The crowd erupts in applause, and everyone is happy and fulfilled.

The night may be over, but the memories will last a lifetime. The joy and unity of the moment will be remembered forever, and everyone will look back on this night with fondness and nostalgia.
Meet Miss Catherine Evans

By CARL HAMILTON

We don't know what there is about Sartie that the natives can't stand; but we do know that we have, at least, two faculty fugitives of that web-footed Washington weather: Dr. Halsey, and Miss Catherine Evans, BJC art instructor.

In reply to the unquench query about when she was born, Miss Evans replied, "None of your business!" but she did tell us where she was born, so maybe we can pick it up from there.

She was born in Indiana. Her parents moved to Fortinet pettishly five years ago. She attended grade school and high school at Seattle, and entered Washington, where she majored in public art. After her graduation, she accepted the U. of Wash. scholarship to attend the Art Students League in New York City, then Columbia U., and finally, she studied with Arbe.

She's an internationally known modern sculptor and painter.

"Time Waits for No Man"

By Wilma Carter

"Procrastination is the thief of time," is a saying most BJC students will agree to be true after taking term exams. Probably if the truth were known, nearly every student felt at one time during exam week that he should have studied much harder and earlier during the term.

Records show that cramming is the most prominent type of procrastination among BJC students. It is responsible for poor grades, as well as, poor mental health. The student publishes, compared to test material, and then the semester draws to a close and it is impossible to do anything but cram. Staying up all to hours of the night is another form of procrastination among college students.

It is true that it is easier to make records which will be considered as being of value, but cram. Staying up all hours of the night is another form of procrastination among college students. The mind is cloudy and the material is not clear and concise as it would have been through examining during the term.

What are students doing between exams? It has been said that college students lead a pretty soft life. Whether it is playing cards, participating in too many extra-curricular activities, or whether just plain loafing, it would be profitable to spend more time in studying.

Another question which might be asked is, why are students attending college? It is true that it is easier to obtain a college diploma with a college diploma. The student minds the idea of the college and the material is not clear and concise as it would have been through proper studying methods.

JUNIATEL CLUB
International Club is open to a member of the class of 1949, 1950, February 21, at 8 p.m., in the Roller Rink, for a member of the class of 1949, 1950, February 21, at 8 p.m., in the Roller Rink, for a meeting. All members are invited to attend.

JOSH CLUB
A meeting of the club will be held this Thursday, February 18, at 8 p.m., in the home of Mrs. Powers, advisor. All members are invited to attend.

KILLS
The basketball team will be playing in the game on Friday night as the team plays the Valley girls. It is hoped that we will have a good game. The girls will be looking forward to a good game. The game will be played in the gym.

KILLER'S ROLLER RINK
The girls will be having a good time in store. It is hoped that the girls will have a good time. The girls will be looking forward to a good game. The game will be played in the gym.

KILN
It is believed that when the girls move to their present quarters in 1940, the library will be more available to the students. In 1940 the women's dormitories were substituted for all college dormitories. Altogether there is a total of 13,000 books in the library.

The library, says Mrs. Bellton, is admirably equipped to meet the needs of these busy freshmen and maintains hours as the material enables. Besides being open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on school days, it is open on Saturdays from 12 to 5 p.m. and on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Staff members on duty are always ready to answer questions and assist students in finding materials.

Instructors in the English department and the librarians know that the student has finished his research paper he will have made some critical thinking. Second he will understand how to use the library which is always ready to answer questions and assist students in finding materials in any library because ours is operated by standard procedure. We have evidence, as do other members of the department, that staff members are always ready to answer questions and assist students in finding materials.

Mr. Schwartz is confident of the value of the public in the social sciences area in the same type of activity. In the beginning of the unit he, and the other instructors, try to impress on the students the fact that here is a technique basic to all their college studies, becoming even more important as they advance to upper division work.

The same opinion is expressed by Mrs. Burkel who adds that professionally the student should possess a single bound volume of periodicals. Today it is desired to have a guide book which covers all of college catalogue. Altogether there is a total of 13,000 books in the library.

Searching for Research

The noticeable increase in activity in the library is not at all unusual for this time of the year. It involves the freshmen who have just arrived at college and who are interested in the mysteries of the card catalogue, the stacks, the reader's guides and other reference books.

There is a reason for this sudden interest in the English department. The library, headed by Mrs. Ada Hatch, believes that there is great value for freshmen to produce a research paper. Consequently, the first six weeks of the second semester are always devoted to instructing freshmen composition students in the mysteries of selecting a topic, searching for materials pertaining to it, and developing and organizing that material into a standard form.

Mr. hatch says this unit of work is by far the most important of the entire year's work. All the activity of the first semester has been preparatory to this extension.

It involves all the processes of composition, research, and grammar studied during the fall term. Here, then, is the student's opportunity to put to practice what he has learned.

"This unit of work," says Mrs. Hatch, "pushes the student toward mastery as no other unit in Freshman English. Because it necessitates selecting a topic, finding material, organizing and developing that material on a mature level. This result is an extended exercise in mature critical thinking."

Sophomore students agree with this opinion, for many of them even before the end of the first year volunteered the information that the research paper has demanded more critical effort on their part than any other phase of their English work. Miss Helen Moore is of the opinion that the student is now ready to go beyond the material in the library.

In the Library Department, Mrs. Hatch believes that the student is now ready to go beyond the material in the library.
The Boise Junior College basketball team was victorious in its first game, a two-game series at Rexburg, February 3 and 4, but dropped the second to the Viking quintet. The split enabled the Bronco team to remain in second place in the Intermountain conference but did not strengthen their standing.

The BJC 53-41 victory was attributed to a baffling zone defense employed by Coach Blankley. Both teams were taught and fired will were saying at the first riflery

The Art of Duck Decoiling By Benny Shuey

The other day, while standing at the bus stop, I was approached by a young friend. "I would like to make a duckblind one must poke his eyes, and since you know of these things, tell me how just does one make a duckblind."

"Well, ahh ... " I said, "to make a duckblind one must poke his eyes out."

"And I felt perhaps I'd been a bit cruat. Perhaps I should have told him to go down to the river with hatchet, hammer, 2 by 4's, wire, etc., and perhaps I should've told him of the three basic models.

The sunken-barrel blind, for instance, was originated by a pheasant player. It's simply a barrel, one end open, partially buried in the ground. Barf. Pat man, who use the sunken-barrel have been known to become quite close to their hunting dogs.

But it's practical, whom I know quite well, has three ribs cracked while in one with his master and so built his own. From then on it was an object of humor to see two birds poaching from a steel bar. You never know which was which, the man was fired for a gun, and when a duck hit near the man, another hunter would work as to which one should shoot the duck and which one it would retrieve.

Another type, the blind of vision, which was invented by an instructor of mathematics, is a favored among deep trimmers. It has many advantages: saves菏at, savas ammunition, saves your dogs, saves wildlife.

It is, approximately, a four foot square boulder, enclosed except for the front wall. A foot or two from the front is a shield which exactly shades the opening. Now, if you close the end open with a loose flap, you've a perfect blind.

The best of the three, however, for hunting in foul weather, is the chicken-coop blind, favored for its qualities of both comfort and camouflage.

I'm thinking of one in particular, located on a pond surrounded by several miles of fog and tule. Built by three sportsmen, it stands today endorsed by the seal of Good standing.
