American Invented Game of Basketball
To Celebrate 65th Year of Existence

The first game was played with two baskets, eight players on a side, and each side five men on a side plus a center player. The baskets were large and fixed, which prevented players from scoring. The game was invented by James Naismith, who was a physical education instructor at the YMCA Training School in Springfield, Massachusetts. The game was first played on the basketball court at the YMCA Training School on December 21, 1891.
