Miss Ruth McNerney, BJC Librarian,
Is Featured Teacher of the Week

Miss Ruth McNerney, BJC Librarian, is featured this week. She has been at BJC for 18 years and has directed the library since 1954. She is known for her extensive knowledge of books and her ability to find just the right book for a student or faculty member. McNerney is also a member of the American Library Association and the Society of College Librarians.

In response to a request from the student government, McNerney has put together a list of books that are recommended for the summer reading program. She has also arranged for members of the student government to meet with her to discuss the library's needs and to get feedback on how the library can improve.

McNerney is a native New Yorker and has been at BJC for 18 years. She has a bachelor's degree in English from Barnard College and a master's degree in library science from the University of Illinois.

ACADEMIC NEWS

The school and the college's president, Mr. Butler, are pleased to announce that Ruth McNerney has been named as Librarian of the Year for 1964. McNerney has been with the library for 18 years and has worked tirelessly to improve the library's collection and services. She has been instrumental in bringing new materials and resources to the library, and has been a driving force in the library's growth.

McNerney's accomplishments include:
- Developing a comprehensive collection of materials
- Implementing a computerized cataloging system
- Establishing a special collections area
- Creating a reference desk
- Setting up a summer reading program

McNerney's dedication to the library and her commitment to providing excellent service to the students and faculty have earned her this prestigious award. She is a true professional and a true asset to our community.

In other news, the students have been busy preparing for the upcoming academic year. They have been working hard to ensure that the library is well-stocked with materials that will be needed for the fall term. They have also been planning for the upcoming academic year, and are excited to see what the future holds.
