Money And Plans Are Not Essential If You Want To Have Fun On A Date

By Sharon Paul

Many times, especially if a couple is dating regularly or simply going steady, they run out of things to do during a date. After they've run the gamut of movies, miniature golf courses, bowling alleys, pizza places, Chinese and Russian restaurants and dances so long that they are sick of each other, usually the latter, a type of boredom creeps into the relationship. That's when it's time for one, or both, of them to dream up something new to do. Many times this is not so easy as it sounds.

First of all, both the couple and the girl must take a positive attitude. If they've always been the sort to make plans and then go through with them, they ought to have fun doing complete departures from their plans. The guy might try a different restaurant, or he might try staying home. This is not an impossible idea. Making and pulling off a surprise has never been easier. There are lots of things that the most fun usually happen to you when you aren't looking for them. Don't just sit around watching your brain, trying to think of something to do. Just enjoy yourself even if you're not doing anything.

"Bored" is a word that shouldn't exist. Especially if you're in love, it's a word that should be avoided.
