Drinking age may rise

Federal legislation ties highway funds to drinking age

by Steve Grant
The University News

Calling federal pressure on states to raise minimum drinking ages a display of "bankrupt leadership," a state transportation official said failure to comply would cost Idaho millions in federal highway funds.

Darrell Manning, Idaho Transportation Director, said last week that legislation signed by President Reagan on July 17, ordering reductions in federal highway funds to states not adopting a 21-year-old minimum drinking age, "was a big-club approach that we don't appreciate."

States not adopting a 21-year-old minimum drinking age would lose 5 percent of their federal highway funds in 1986 and 10 percent in 1987, according to Manning.

"If the state legislature fails to raise the minimum drinking age by 1986 it will cost Idaho $4.7 million in highway construction funds and another $10 million in 1987," Manning said.

Twenty-seven states do not have a 21-year-old minimum drinking age.

Idaho's 19-year-old minimum drinking age was adopted in 1972. The minimum drinking ages prior to 1972 were 21 years old for liquor and 20 years old for beer.

Since 1980 four legislative attempts to raise the minimum drinking age have failed.

"The bills seldom made it out of committee," Sen. Terry Reilly, D-Nampa, said. "They didn't pass for obvious reasons. If one is old enough to vote and be drafted then one is old enough to drink."

Reilly said if it was certain a bill would be introduced into the next state legislature to raise the minimum drinking age. "If the 'feds' want their current position by tying in federal funds, a bill will pass," he said.

Mark Dunn of the Idaho Licensed Beverage Association said, "We would oppose any legislation to raise the drinking age in Idaho. There is no question about fighting this."

Dunn's association represents about 800 bars across the state.

"There has been a lot of adverse reaction to Reagan's legislation, and it appears that nationally there is growing support for an amendment backed by Senator Symms," Dunn said.

The amendment offered by Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., provided for an incentive of additional highway funds to states enacting stronger drunken driving laws but eliminated penalties.

The original intent of the legislation, according to Dunn, was to make the drinking-age law uniform in order to eliminate teenagers from crossing state boundaries to buy alcohol in states with a lower minimum age and then driving back drunk.

Manning said Idaho statistics do not support government rationales that increasing the drinking age to 21 will decrease the number of alcohol-related accidents.

"Their facts and logic aren't correct," Manning said. "While 59 percent of fatal accidents involve alcohol," he said, "there is no difference in the number of alcohol-related accidents between the 19-21 age group and the 21-25 age group."

"In order for the federal government to make their rationale fit their argument, they should just raise the minimum age to 26 or 27," Manning said.

Major Fisk of the Idaho State Police does not think this type of legislation will have much impact on drunken driving statistics.

"However, we have to support anything that will lead to safer roads," Fisk said. "The question is, how much."

"Generally we support highway safety measures of any kind," Manning said, "but we don't think the federal government acted responsibly."

If the Idaho Legislature doesn't raise the minimum drinking age by 1986, the state could lose nearly $15 million in federal highway funds, according to Idaho Transportation Director Darrell Manning.

Part of the answer to drunken driving is education, according to Teresa Lagoski, a BSU sophomore. "Alcohol education in the schools would be of more benefit than raising the drinking age," Lagoski said.

Manning said that if the state legislature does not comply with the federal legislation, "There's not much we can do but cut back on building and repairing the state's highways."

"We don't know how much this legislation will cost us yet," Dunn said. He went on to say that members of Idaho's restaurant, inn and tavern industries will be meeting in Pocatello this fall to discuss the impact of the Reagan legislation.

Economics for teachers
The Idaho Council on Economic Education will offer an economics course for teachers at BSU Tuesdays from 4:30 p.m., Sept. 18 to Nov. 20. The course is designed to help teachers at all grade levels, particularly those who have been assigned to teach high school economics classes or those who teach separate units in economics in any of the grades. Sessions on economic systems, markets, supply and demand, taxes, policies and economic trade-offs will be included.

Math teachers make finals
Two BSU part-time mathematics teachers were chosen as finalists in the second annual Presidential Awards for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching competition. They are Elizabeth L. Linney, Hillside Junior High School mathematics department chairman, who instructs BSU evening students in M 106 and Jerre Helgeson, mathematics department chairman at Meridian High School, also a BSU night course teacher for the past several years.

Night parking free
Night students and evening visitors to BSU no longer need to purchase parking permits or park far away from their dormitories. Parking is now free after 4 p.m. this year.

Parking permit enforcement was made largely as a convenience to night students, according to Dr. Asa Ruyle, chairman of the Parking Advisory Committee. "We felt it was a nuisance for people taking one class a night," Ruyle said.

The open parking will also allow visitors attending university events to park at any legal parking space, including meter parking lots, without details. Parking will still be illegal at loading zones, fire lanes and other "yellow zones." Parking permits will be required for designated areas from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. and may be obtained at the BSU Parking Control office in room 118 of the Administration building.

Home violence targeted
Domestic violence pervades all socioeconomic brackets of American society. The effects of this emotional violence on the family and what local resources are available for the abused will be the focus of the workshop on "Violent - An Outrage," Sept. 25 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., at BSU's Nameless Alumni Learning Center, Boise State North.

Awareness of domestic violence in the community will be the topic discussed at the workshop sponsored by the Southwest Center Against Domestic Violence and the Boise Office of Mercy House will be the guest speaker.

In addition, the call the Learning Center at 466-4896 or the Adult Learning Center at BSU 385-1293.

ASBSU readies for campus carnival
by Karen E. Kaumann
The University News
ASBSU President Steve Jackson said of the upcoming ASBSU Carnival, "you could almost say it's a 'welcome to BSU' by the students, for the students.

Jackson said the carnival, which will take place on the BSU soccer field on Friday, Sept. 14 beginning at 5:00 p.m., is "a concept based on visibility." He said that the ASBSU administration wants students to become aware that ASBSU is composed of many clubs and organizations and 'to acquaint the students with the different activities around campus.'

Jackson added that the carnival was also planned "just to have an opportunity to have some fun." Several of the ASBSU organizations within the SUB and ASBSU clubs will be participating in the carnival. Jackson said they will set up booths and sideshows. He mentioned that Alpha Eta Rho, BSU's flying club, will have a hot air balloon and an airplane at the carnival. Rides will be given in the balloon and tickets will be sold for rides in the airplane. The airplane rides will take place later at the Boise Municipal airport. There will be two adult-sized and some children's rides at the carnival.

In conjunction with the carnival, ASBSU will be presenting Alfred Hitchcock's Rear Window in the SPEC on the nights of Sept. 13 and 14. Admission to the movie will be $1.00 for students. General admission will be slightly more.

The carnival is not a money-making idea, although there will be tickets sold for the rides. Jackson said that most of the money taken "will just plain cover the cost." He said that if any profit is made, it will probably go into ASBSU's scholarship fund, adding, "at least that's where I would ask that it goes.

Jackson said that any clubs or organizations interested in participating in the carnival should contact the ASBSU office at 385-1440.

MLA regional office moves to BSU
The Rocky Mountain Modern Language Association has a professional organization of scholars in language and literature. The association moved in offices from Arizona State University in Tempe, Arizona.

"It's a very prestigious thing to have a Boise State," Dr. Carol Martin, editor of the MLA review, said. The association originally was located at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Colo. and was then moved to the University of Utah in Salt Lake. Each university committed itself to three years as the home of the association. The board of the MLA can decide to reevaluate these commitments. The board also decides which university will receive the regional branch when it is relocated.

Two graduate students, Evelyn Fonda and Heather Garozini, have assisted in the publication of the review. "Our graduate teams have particular advantage of being a scholarship scholar is produced," Martin said.

BSU will begin broadcasting Campus Network in the next two or three weeks as an alternative to cable or network television. The Director of the Activities and the Student Union, Denny Freeburn, said Wednesday.

The service, which is based in New York, will be offered at two levels: basic service and premium service. The basic service provides four hours of informational and entertainment broadcasting that will be played for a total of 20 hours a week to meet students' schedules.

This format will show things like video dances, comedy spots and student film productions which "could be the type of programming that is not available through any other network," Freeburn said.

BSU will receive the basic service on video tape for now, but Campus Network promises to provide the technical equipment which could be installed by the end of October, Freeburn said.

Neither the basic service nor the equipment will cost BSU or the students, the funding comes from advertisers who advertise in the traditional college market, 18- to 20-year-olds, Freeburn said.

There will be admission prices, however, for the premium service, which will feature lectures and concerts.

From the admission prices, which Freeburn estimated will be in the $5-7 range for most events, BSU will keep a part and send the rest back to Campus Network. "But we never saw it as a potential money-making proposition," Freeburn said.

Three administrative appointments at BSU have been announced by Dr. Richard L. Hart, dean of the College of Education.

James Alan Nicholson, director of graduate studies in clinical and community psychology at the University of South Dakota, Nichols- ton, recently received his doctorate in psychology at Northwestern State University, Natchitoches, La., will direct the BSU Counseling and Testing Center.

An educational consultant for the University of South Dakota, Nicholson said the students and staff will get along well with the BSU students and staff. "I was named chairman of the Westminster College Teacher Corps, Salt Lake City, Utah, prior to coming to BSU in 1973.

He earned his bachelor's degree in secondary education from Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, and his doctorate in curriculum and administration from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

He taught in Utah secondary schools for several years.

Kenneth L. Hill, BSU professor of teacher education, succeeds Lyons as chairman of the Department of Teacher Education and Library Science.

Heil received his doctorate in secondary education and behavioral science from the University of Idaho, Moscow, his master's degree in secondary education from the College of Idaho, Caldwell and his bachelor's degree from Illinois State University, Normal, Ill.

The contract with Campus Network is on a one year renewable schedule, and, according to the agreement, BSU is not obligated to show any premium viewing and may use the equipment 20 hours a week for its own broadcasting.

The audio-video center will be set up in the SUB Ballroom and will include a view of the audience, cheerleaders and stereo amplifiers. The package also includes a satellite disk; Freeburn said the location of the disk has not been decided upon yet.

ECOLOGIST TO SPEAK

George Orwell's automation society of 1984 gave its inhabitants no control over their beliefs or actions. Human ecologist Garrett Hardin, who will speak at BSU on Tuesday, Sept. 18, believes that human nature controls the world.

Hardin's talk, "Survival Through Discriminating Altruism," in the first in this fall's continuation of the "1984 and Beyond" lecture series at Boise State. He will speak at 8:00 in the SUB Ballroom.

A roundtable discussion featuring Hardin, Alan Brinton, BSU philosophy professor; and Larry Reynolds, BSU economics professor, will take place in the balcony from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 19. Robert Byerly, chairman of BSU's biology department, will be the moderator.

Two other sessions this fall will feature a lecture by author Diane Ravitch on "The Future of American Education" Oct. 25. A technology session concludes the series Nov. 13 and 14 with a talk by Michael Annon on "The Impact of Technology on Human Life."

DANCING HORSES

The Lipizan Stallions, a troupe of dancing horses from Austria, will perform in the Pavilion at 7:00 p.m. on Sept. 16, 1984. The horses perform gaits, jumps and maneuvers originally found in medieval warfare.

The horses' rescuers from Czechoslovakia by Gen. Patton during World War II is the subject of a Walt Disney movie, The Miracle of the White Stallions. The breed is more than 2,000 years old and is believed to have descended from oriental horses brought to Europe by Genghis Khan.

Bangles aren't barbies

by Stephen King

There is an all-female group called The Bangles with a new album that will knock your socks off. Yes, All Over the Place will leave you tingling with vibrant appeal. They are a group that borders on teeny-bopper sentimental-ity. Throughout the album, The Bangles are an appealing piece of art, instead of something that borders on twee. The music is in the basement parking lot of his office. As he's parking, the model walks over the subway 20 feet away to borrow a Marilyn Monroe pose for him, followed by a Ginger Rogers image. Ted is immediately obsessed. He tries calling the model, who is in his associate's office. Her view is blocked and he ends up speaking to the dowdy secretary played by Gilda Radner. Radner does well, though her part is minor. Ted finally gets a date with the elusive Charlotte and is nearly foiled when a surprise pops up.

The only thing about The Woman In Red that is really high-class is the soundtrack. Stevie Wonder, who is just now and then by singer Dionne Warwick, wrote most of the songs and produced the soundtrack. Already, "I Just Called to Say I Love You" is on the charts for Wonder. Composers, sets and lighting were adequate but not spectacular. The film is rated PG-13 and contains some strong profanity, no nudity, a few sexual situations.

Wilder has certainly done better with most of the films he's been involved with. The Woman In Red lacked the usual hilarity of a Wilder film as well as the fine touches and innocent common to his style and style of comedy. However, Wilder is not noted for having a serious side to his films and Woman In Red has more substance in that regard. The film is reasonably funny, but another in the long line of mediocre movies for 1984.

The Woman in Red, starring Gene Wilder, who also directed and wrote the film, is a comedy of errors and the oldest older than the silent movies which is being borrowed only by a few classic scenes borrowed from the classic filmmakers.

Wilder plays Ted Pierce, a klutzy executive who wants to find the model, who is in his associate's office. His view is blocked and he ends up speaking to the dowdy secretary played by Gilda Radner. Radner does well, though her part is minor. Ted finally gets a date with the elusive Charlotte and is nearly foiled when a surprise pops up.

The BSU football team dropped their second home game in a row against another top-ranked Pacific Coast Athletic Association team last Saturday night.

After the game was tied 15-15 at halftime, the Fresno State Bulldogs chuked up 22 points to beat the Broncos 37-21.

Last week, 1983 PCAA champion Fullerton State beat BSU 27-25. According to pre-season rankings, Fullerton and Fresno are expected to place in the top three in that conference. Last Saturday, Fresno upset Pac 10 team Arizona, 27-22, in Tucson.

BSU only scored once in the second half when quarterback Todd Anderson connected with Tony Hunter on a 20-yard pass when quarterback Todd Anderson connected with Tony Hunter on a 20-yard pass. The point after kick was good for another point.

The Broncos tied the game with 2:47 left in the half. Tailback Jon Francis brought the Broncos within two points on a one-yard charge. He brought the score even on the last play of the game. Anderson led BSU to the Fresno six-yard line, but a quarterback draw play failed to score to the Broncos’ 110. In passing, Francis led the Broncos with 48 yards in eleven plays.

For the game, the Bulldogs had 164 yards rushing to the Broncos’ 75. In passing, Fresno had 270 yards while among the Broncos, Despres played most of the game. Hazen Choates, who sprained his ankle in last week’s game against Fullerton State, played for one series in the third quarter. Junior Todd Anderson finished the game for the Broncos. On his first drive as a Bronco, Anderson completed five passes out of seven attempts for 69 yards, leading to their only score in the second half.

In the last minutes of the game, Anderson led BSU to the Fresno six-yard line, but a quarterback draw play failed to score to the last play of the game.

Official attendance for the game was up from last week’s 16,945 to 19,252. The Broncos are now 0-2 for the year.

Coach Lyle Setencich’s career record as head coach of the Broncos is now 6-7. The team has next weekend off before their first Big Sky match-up against the University of Nevada-Reno in Bronco Stadium.

Dear Miss Bronco,

I'm a lowly freshman and I can tell I'll need help in math already. My 105 professor is using terms I never came across in high school pre-algebra. Any helpful hints?

Signed,
Completely confused

Dear Completely,

I know how you feel. All math questions sound to me like one I heard somewhere in Algebra I: if a chicken and a half can lay and egg and a half in a day and a half, how long will it take a chicken with a wooden leg to kick all the seeds out of a dill pickle? Sound familiar?

To become the proud recipient of math tutoring, you have to get a tutoring referral form out all the nifty information like the maiden name of your mother's grandmother and her signature, signifying that of the 180 people in your class, you too are considered worth helping.

Turn it in to the Student Special Services and they will tell you the hours of the math lab where you will gain tremendous insights into the formulation and use of algebraic equations. The math lab is in the science building room 205, and there are people up there who will give you a hand.

You can go in when you need to, but they won't let you in without having filled out a card. (You know how keen on paperwork and records BSU is.)

To become the proud recipient of math tutoring, you have to get a tutoring referral card from either the math office (room 205-A in the science building) or the Student Special Services (room 114 in the administration building).

Fill out all the nifty information like the maiden name of your mother's grandmother and the other vital statistics they need. Now, give it to your loving instructor for his signature, signifying that of the 180 people in your class, you too are considered worth helping.

It's free and they'll probably do a better job than either your older brother who's an English major or your pal Hubert who was a calculator on his belt just so the female business majors would oogle at him.

Signed,
You'd Better Believe Math Is A Four-Letter Word,
Miss Bronco

Yes, there are differences. And we think you should know what they are. Ask yourself these questions.

WHEN YOU LEASE A CHICKEN, DO YOU GET THREE MONTHS FREE DURING THE SUMMER?

Probably not. But when you lease your telephone from AT&T this fall, you won't pay any lease charges next summer. You can use your phone at home, and bring it back to school in the fall.

DO LEASED CHICKENS COME IN A SELECTION OF COLORS AND STYLES?

No. Chickens don't come in many colors. But the AT&T telephone you lease this fall comes in a variety of colors and three popular styles.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS REPAIRED FREE?

Don't kid yourself. Repairing a chicken is a delicate process that requires the work of expensive professionals. However, in the off chance your AT&T leased telephone needs repairs, we'll fix it absolutely free when you visit any of our AT&T Phone Centers.
