Purchase of campus school may offer space

by Mack Sernson The University News

BSU may solve overcrowding problems for itself and Campus Elementary School by purchasing the school, if the legislature provides the funding, according to John Franden, executive assistant to the BSU president.

The school has had two years in a row that its playground is too small and that next year it may be unusable, according to a parent-teacher conference. However, Franden said, "If we can get the funds to purchase the school, we can solve the district's problems as well as our own."

Campus Elementary was founded in 1953 to serve the Boise area students. Wecker said. The school has 1.6 acres of playground, but it is required to have at least 10 acres. Since this is the second year it has failed to provide the needed space, Wecker said, he is concerned that the Idaho State Department of Education will force some type of sanction.

"We were somewhat concerned when BSU decided to place the (sunrise skyline) desks so close to the school, but realizing it was the best location," Wecker said, adding that "we feel we've been able to compensate and provide a quality playground." To get build the school where they are, the university would have to use property that formerly had been used as part of the playground. Wecker said the heavy traffic around the school and the lack of parking were more direct problems resulting from the lack of space. Some parents won't even attend our parent-teacher conferences because they can't find a parking space," Wecker said.

These problems could be resolved if the legislature provides funding for the administration's plan to purchase the school, Franden said.

"Let's face it, we both have problems with space and overcrowding," Franden said, referring to the district's overcrowding at Campus and two other elementary schools and the university's plans to use the building, if purchased, to house the School of Social Sciences/Political Affairs.

If the legislature appropriates an additional $1 million toward the BSU Permanent Building Fund, the money will pass to the Boise School District. The money, in conjunction with a mill levy, would be used to build a new administration building on the southwest Boise and thus reduce the overcrowding, Franden said.

Franden and Wecker both said the purchase of the school by BSU presently seems to be the best solution, and with help from the legislature, Campus Elementary will no longer exist in two to three years.

Love confession from an anthemaniac.
As you know, anthemaniacs like myself just go crazy around flowers. So what does my Valentine send me on Valentine's Day? The FTD® Love Note Bouquet! Well, let me tell you, when I saw those beautiful flowers in that fine porcelain bowl it drove me wild. Besides, this glorious bouquet also came with a note pad and pencil with which I've written my Valentine every day. And smart Valentines know it doesn't cost much to send us anthemaniacs into this flower frenzy. Just ask your florist to have FTD send one for you.

A102 Intro. to The Short Story
When Carla told me that my date was a little short, I thought she was talking dollars and cents, not feet and inches. So there I was at the door in my spiked heels, staring at the top of my date's head. All I could think was, how do I get myself out of this? I could imagine how my legs would ache if I had to walk around with my knees bent all evening. So to stall for time, while figuring out how to fake malaria, I made us some Double Dutch Chocolate.
When I brought it into the living room, I discovered that Gary was a chocolate lover too. Ahh, a man after my own heart. Okay, I decided I'd give him a chance. So we sat down and saw each other face-to-face for the first time. He had a nice smile.
After some small talk—I mean conversation—I discovered that we both love Updike, hate the winter weather, and both have miniature schnauzers. So, we made a date to introduce Shadow and Schatzi next week.
Attend a workshop

Donald Melinchenbaas, a founder of cognitive behavior modification, will conduct a workshop on Feb. 17. The workshop, will run from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. in the Student Union Building.

Regional classes set

Beginning in February, classes designed for single parents and displaced homeowners are being offered in Boise, Nampa, Cascade, and the North Central Education Center for New Directions at the Adult Learning Center.

In Boise, classes on personal organization, study skills and self-esteem are offered by the center.

A two-week class on personal organization will be held Feb. 10 and 17 from 9:30-3 p.m. A workshop demonstrating effective study skills will be held Feb. 24 from 9 a.m.-12 p.m. A class on self-esteem will take place each Thursday from Feb. 25 to March 31 from 9-11 a.m. All classes are held at 1110 Wymant. To register, call 385-3278.

Both groups will be held in Boise and Nampa. The Boise group will meet every Thursday from 1-3:30 p.m. To register, call 385-2930. In Nampa, the group meets every Tuesday from 1-3:30 p.m. In Room 3222 of the Canyon County Division of BVI Vocational Technical Education, 2407 Caldwell Blvd. The groups provide job-search techniques and current job leads and information.

Teaching deadline nears

Feb. 15 is the deadline for elementary and secondary student teaching applications for fall semester 1988.

Application forms are available in room 306 of the Education Building.

Summer jobs with SRL

The Office of Student Residential Life currently is accepting summer employment applications for student painters, groundskeepers, housekeeping supervisor, assistant supervisors, housekeeping aides, conference aides, and residence advisors. All applicants must be full-time students with a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.0.

Applications are available in room 241 of the Administration Building or may be obtained by calling 385-3961 no later than Feb. 26. For more information, call 385-3961.

Students for Gary Hart

A BSU student group supporting Gary Hart for president has been organized. The group will encourage students to attend the Democratic caucuses at BSU on March 8 at 6:30 p.m. to show their support, according to Students for Hart Co-chairman Michelle Wadell.

Students for Hart should have buttons, stickers and postcards available this week.

People interested in joining the group, or wishing for more information, may write to Students for Hart, c/o BSU College Democrats, 1910 University Drive—SUB, Boise, ID, 83725.

Students know no geography

CPS—American students do not know very much geography, according to a study released during recent weeks.

Separate surveys of students' geography knowledge at the University of Wisconsin—Oshkosh and California State and Mankato State universities found some students were unable to find the Soviet Union on a map, though Nicaragua was an Asian island or did not know who America's leading trade partner was.

Students who took a 21-question multiple-choice geography quiz at Cal State Fullerton, for example, averaged just 12 correct answers. Only 14 percent could locate the eastern Caribbean Sea, where Columbus first arrived in the Western Hemispheres; only one-fourth of those tested could locate and identify Canada as the United States' leading trade partner or the Soviet Union as the world's third most populous nation.

At the University of Wisconsin—Oshkosh, only 20 percent of students recently surveyed could find the country they are nearest, Germany, on a map. And on a 25-question geography test, 40 percent of students enrolled in the Air Force ROTC program at the university couldn't locate and identify the Soviet Union on a world map. In Dallas, another survey revealed that one quarter of the high school seniors tested knew that Mexico is the United States' southern neighbor.

"The tests are depressingly accurate," according to Pat Morrison, a University of Southern California journalism teacher and Los Angeles Times reporter. "When students place the Bering Straits off the coast of Maine and think Nicaragua is an island off the coast of India, something is definitely wrong."

Nazi attack a diet, student says

CPS—American students are described as being culturally illiterate in a book which has been a bestseller since August. And in November some students at Amherst College and Princeton University set out to prove the point.

"According to Capt. Bill Stephenson, an Air Force ROTC spokesman, the Air Force will allow students to leave the program voluntarily without future commitment."

The 63,000 students enrolled in the Army ROTC, however, will not face the same fate this year, Duren said. Those students were graduated last spring, spokesman Rod Duren said. Those students were "non-scholarship" cadets who were asked to postpone their military careers following "a selection process," Duren said.

Other students may be asked to delay their commisioning again this year, Duren said. The 6,000 students enrolled in the Army ROTC, however, will not face any problems, according to spokesman Paul Kerals.
Lengthen library's hours

Research is the heart of any university, and since it recently has become a stated aim of this one, the resolution passed by the ASBISU Senate expressing concern over library hours seems to relate to an all-too-familiar message—the administration understands, the student body does not.

The library is the single asset used by all departments, programs, and schools. It does not serve only a few, select programs, as is the case with the recently constructed Human Performance Center, which was built without regard for the university's financial woes. When the money exists to purchase and install a satellite uplink, how can the administration claim that the finances are not available to make an investment that would benefit all students and faculty members on campus? The expansion of the library's hours would be an inexpensive and positive step for an emerging research-oriented institution.

We call on the central administration, and in particular President John Kolker, to understand and work for the expansion of the library's hours, as it would benefit the entire university with very little cost to the state. However, we are afraid our call, as well as ASBISU's, will fall on deaf ears, primarily because the unstated goal of the university's financial woes, is to downplay the library. After all, who needs a periodicals section when we can research public television blankets Boise is caused by pollutants being dumped into our air. A lie! It is deadly nerve gas that the cunning communists injected in-...
The 2nd annual Celebrity Fashion Show, held Feb. 6 in the Red Lion Downtowner Ballroom, raised approximately $700 for the BSU Childcare Center, according to Mark Zimmermann, president of Students for Quality Child Care. Zimmermann said about 100 people showed up to watch BSU students and faculty and community members model fashions provided by The Bon.

The proceeds from the fashion show will be used to purchase equipment for the center. SQCC plans to join Vo-Tech’s yard sale in April to raise money for a scholarship fund to help faculty members and students with the cost of child care. Zimmermann said. Currently, 22 out of the 46 people who use the center are single parents.

During the show, Gov. Cecil Andrus presented a bowl and urged the crowd to put a few extra dollars in to help the center. According to Zimmermann, $120 was placed into the bowl by the end of the evening.

Among the participants were BSU football players Eric Andrade and Pete Kwiatkowski. Andrade made an appearance on a skateboard, but a football was in his hands within seconds. BSU Archaeologist Dr. Mark Plew and Vice President of Student Affairs Dr. David Taylor made their first appearance in western wear and entertained the audience with a do-si-do. Other BSU administrators who modeled in the show were Dr. Larry Selland and Ben Hancock.

CLARK AND TILLIS

Country stars Roy Clark and Mel Tillis will perform at the Pavilion on Feb. 8 at 8 p.m.

Clark, best known as the "clownish chap" on "Hee-Haw" began learning how to master string instruments when his parents gave him his first guitar at the age of 14. Offered apprenticeships in the House Clark square dance band at the age of 15 and his father's band a year later, Clark also worked briefly as a cab driver in Memphis and as a piano player for the Washington Star.

Since those early beginnings, Clark has achieved many major awards including Entertainer of the Year by the Academy of Country Music in 1972 and 1973. Instrumentalist of the Year in 1977, 1978, and 1980 by the Country Music Association as well as creating an Honorary Doctorate of Human Letters at John Brown University. Clark and Tillis have been touring together for about a year and are returning from a successful Canadian tour. Tillis began his music career in 1958, when, after serving time in the Air Force, Tillis and his wife moved from Dover, Fl., to Nashville. Critics acknowledge that Tillis has changed the direction of country music, not so much in his choice of material, but in his attention to the small details. "Dorothy" refers to the lead role played by Ann-Margaret in the film "This is Spinal Tap." The show has been a hit with audiences of all ages, and will be performed at the Idaho Theatre for Youth.

Tickets are $12.50 and $6 for adults, and $6 for children. A special discount is available to students with a Current Student Card, for $5.50 and $3.50.

PUSS WINS BOOTS

Idaho Theatre for Youth will perform their second production of the spring, Puss N’ Boots, Feb. 13 at 8 a.m. and Feb. 14 at 2 p.m. in the Reading Center on the 5th floor of the Education Building.

In Puss N’ Boots, when the Miller’s son inherits only a pet cat, he is sorely dismayed. But the cat, I, proves to be quite unusual. He amazed the king, gets his master into the castle and wins himself a new pair of boots.

Tickets to this production are $2.50 plus tax and can be purchased at the door the day of the performance.
SPB to show student films

SPB's featured films for this week are student films, This is Spinal Tap and The Princess Bride. Student films are an assortment of short films made by some of the famous and not-so-famous. Steven Spielberg's 1968 film Amblin' and short films made by BSU Students are featured. In a change of pace, This is Spinal Tap is a pseudo-rockumentary on rock heroes. Director Rob Reiner creates a witty reflection of contemporary lifestyles as he attacks fads, drugs, big business, hip language, sex, groupies and filmmakers. The Princess Bride, with Billy Crystal, is a comedic love tale of murder and suspense that somehow ends up all right. The student films will be shown Feb. 8 and 10 in the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. and 3:15 p.m., respectively. This is Spinal Tap will show on Feb. 12 in the SPEC at 7 p.m. The Princess Bride will show Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. in the SPEC.

Admission is free to all BSU students with an activity card, $1 for faculty and staff and $2.50 for the general public.

Opera comes to BSU

Die Fledermaus will play for two performances at the Morrison Center at 8 p.m. on Feb. 13 and 15.

Considered by critics as Johann Strauss' most famous work, Die Fledermaus resembles the modern-day "soaps," with the filthy rich Prince Orlofsky, Adele the mischievous maid and the errant Rosalinda all wrapped up in intrigue, suspense and romance.

Tickets for the performance range from $8-20.
Midnight Oil mixes politics with hard-driving sounds

by Steve Furenmam

The University News

On Jan. 36, Australia celebrated in 200th birthday, which coincided with the U.S. release of the sixth album from one of the Great South Land’s most popular bands.

Midnight Oil: Diezel and Dust shows this Australian rock quartet takes the political stage with the same fervor that has been recognized since it’s opening in 1980. The band’s sound is characterized by powerful vocals, driving guitar riffs, and melodies that often focus on social and political issues.

In this album, Midnight Oil’s lyrics continue to address themes of social justice and environmental awareness, such as “Diesel and Dust” where the band critiques the exploitation of indigenous peoples and the environmental impacts of coal mining. The album’s opening cut, “Beds Are Burning,” delves into the issues of economic disparity and the harsh realities faced by ordinary people.

Midnight Oil is known for its politically charged music, and this album is no exception. The band’s message is clear: they use their platform to call attention to important issues and to inspire change. Whether through powerful songs like “Wrong”, or the more critical “Too Australian” where the band questions the authenticity of their country’s identity, Midnight Oil continues to be a voice for the neglected minority.

Midnight Oil’s 200th birthday this year coincides with the release of their sixth album, and it marks another significant milestone in the band’s career. Their influence on Australian music and politics is undeniable, and this album is a testament to their commitment to making meaningful and impactful music.
Boise offers a bar for every student's taste

by Josi Lynn Arrewood
The University News

After a week of sitting in class taking notes during the day, reading assignments at night and doing research in the library in between, many BSU students make their way to the bars on the weekends. Which bars do the students frequent, and why? You do not have to stray far from campus to hit a beer-drinking establishment. The End Zone, located on Broadway, is a popular place to have a few beers before going on to other bars. The Cactus is a popular place to have a few beers before going on to other bars. The Cactus' simple, no-pretensions atmosphere offers beer in 20-ounce schooners such as White Cloud, which is from Idaho. Burger N Brew also offers beer in 30-ounce schooners and, for the hungry, a variety of hamburgers and nachos. Pool table games and pool tables are available in the back for enthusiasts.

Downtown, there is a mixture of beer-drinking pubs and clubs. The Cactus is a popular place to have a few beers before going on to other bars. The Cactus' simple, no-pretensions atmosphere includes a pool table in the rear, plain tables and chairs and room at the bar for patrons who want to chat with the owner. The decor in 10th St. Station offers plenty of reading matter to keep you occupied while you have beer, wine or a mixed drink. Football helmets, street signs, a boat oar, an airplane propeller and stickers to almost everything are among the various objects on the walls. Complimentary popcorn is available.

The Heartbreak Cafe serves beer and wine as well as hard liquor and has a dining area.

BSU gives one, takes from Montana

by Tom Lloyd

The University News

The BSU basketball team found itself in a new position after the Montana invasion. Both Montana States, the University of Montana invaded Boise with revenge on their minds. In the first half, the Bronco, the Bobcats had been in both schools on their honor courts—a feat rarely accomplished in Big Sky basketball. However, only one narrowly escaped with the ball. The Bobcats felt the full wrath of Bronco ball.

Montana State and Boise State were the two pre-season favorites in the Big-Sky Conference. About a month ago, BSU embraced the Bobcats on their home floor. Vin-dication was BSU's scheme when they arrived in Boise for their Feb. 5 showdown with the Broncos. BSU looked to get back on the winning trail after its loss to Northern Arizona in its last outing.

From the opening tip-off, the two teams were a contrast. Montana State, reported to be tired after a rugged one-point victory over the University of Nevada-Reno, did not keep the Lady Broncos out of the game for long as they rebounded UNR 41-27 which enabled them to keep the lead for the home team.

Then, with time for two possessions left, BSU picked off an errant ball and the home crowd started counting its luckers. But they never hand from the three-point range, and Boise State was back in the game.

The Bronco defense stifled; the lead changed hands. BSU's Chris Childs hit from the downtown range to put Boise State up by one with just 3.9 seconds left. BSU's Tom Damoehl sank two free throws to take the lead back. Broncos forward Arnett Jones muscled a bucket tight at the one-minute mark to recapture the lead for the home team.

 então, with time for two possessions left, BSU picked off an errant ball and the home crowd started counting its luckers. But they never hooked the ball and the Lady Broncos out of the game for long as they rebounded UNR 41-27 which enabled them to keep the lead for the home team.

The Broncos'next competition will be against the University of Idaho on the road.

Lady Broncos up record to 12-6

The University News

A devastating loss to the Montana State Bobcats did not keep the Lady Bronco basketball team down for long as they rebounded with a victory over the University of Idaho-Koos, improving their overall record to 12-6.

On Feb. 1 the Lady Broncos faced the Idaho Bobcats, which are second to last in the Big Sky Conference, losing to the Bobcats 75-68.

The Boise State gymnastics team narrowly lost its home opener to Montana, 179.55 to 179.15. The University of Idaho-Anchorage Conference game of the year. With the Wolfpack leading most of the game, the possibilities of losing three straight looked probable.

The Lady Broncos had other thoughts, though, as they came from losing three consecutive games to the Bobcats. With a chance to redeem themselves, the Lady Broncos faced the University of Montana-Bobcats in their last outing. I have never met or heard of a coach who enjoys losing or wants to lose, but sometimes a loss can be beneficial. Now I'm not exalting the virtues of losing, but rather what it can mean to a team.

If BSU were to choose the timing of such events, now is not the time. They have to lose to the good and the bad, at home and away. What it boils down to is that nothing can be taken for granted. It is, as coach-aids us to call, a feel-check time.

The Boise State volleyball team would have been well coached; their record says so. However, they are human, and are granted all the right to feel that way. They found that by not pasting away a mediocre team, they can't eat the loss. They found that by not giving away a mediocre team, they can't eat the loss.

WHEELS and HOOPS

If you should ever be approached by a member of the Star Riders basketball team and asked to play a friendly game in wheelchairs, don't.

Very likely you, like the guys from Audio Source who last played the Alternate Mobility Adventure Seekers last week, would go down in defeat.

The team practices every other weekend and play wherever they can, or whenever they can find anyone to play against them, according to Star Rider player/coach T. Toops.

Nine to 10 players make up the team, which plays locally and regionally, most recently in a tournament held in Ogden, Utah last year.

The rules are a little different when the Star Riders play. A dribble consists of one or more bounces. A player can either pass the ball or keep it after dribbling, but must dribble once for every two turns of the wheelchair.

Actually, wheelchair is not really the right word for the lightweight, expensive (around $1,500) chairs the Star Riders use; they are referred to as "sportchairs."

Aside from playing basketball, Bill Eddins, Star Rider shooter extraordinaire, lifts weights and skis at Bogus Basin.

"We're out here and we like sports as much as anybody else does."

Playing a grueling game of 60 minutes or more, with the team scoring averaging around 40-60 points, Eddins said "the last eight minutes are pretty tough if you've played the whole game."

Another member of the team, Larry Thrasher, said if you are not used to it, your arms give out pretty fast.

The Star Riders had no trouble putting away the Audio Source team 46-38, even after giving Audio Source 10 free points at halftime.
