Coeds Entertain in April Pageant

The latest in fashions will be worn by the curvaceous "Miss BJC" candidates, April 4 in the gym. Recopy the "Blimp," 75-'30-'95, will be paraded into people bedsides with eyeshadow to match and an orange striped blouse for contrast. Skinny Minny, 10-'5-39, will bounce into stage in a chairman mantilla to set off her protruding blue eyes. "Knock-em-down Gertrude" will do just that in her capriques, backless, diaphanous blouse. "Sunny Buxom" will be adorned in a "Cholesney" original. "Knobby Kneed" Daisy will wear a wrap but once worn by her donkey, and dainties here and there. "Walk-aye" Violet, the last of the contestants will be draped in the finest of feed sacks, her own original creation.

Next month's foreign film showing will be "The Three Little Pigs," a deep and penetrating psychological Freudian study of three brothers suffering from psychoanalytical tendencies of micro id overlaws (they think they're pigs and that someone is trying to blow their house down)."

Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life!

Here we sit in our lovely, untidy, spacious publications office tapping out profound thoughts on our brand new super electronic typewriter. As we cross the clean, green expanse of our pleasant campus through the wall to wall plate glass windows in our new ultra-modern spacious, etc., another profound thought occurs, and suddenly another and another, a whole sentence forms itself in the mysterious jungle of my cerebral mind. I reach my hand placed over my mouth to keep from shooting my excitement. Suddenly I begin to modulate unthinkingly.

Scientists tell us that the ever-green bamboo against the red brick buildings, and ingenuity of the unused shade of pale green fire escapes strategic in artistic yet inconspicuous places I sighed in rapture. Where else but at BJC could we find such a fire escape strategically placed in artistic yet inconspicuous places? Why? Isn’t anyone ever so constructive serving. Here on the Campus! Why? I ask questioningly. Why?? Isn’t anyone ever so constructive serving. Here on the Campus!

Togetherness In Hallway

During break time and noon hour there is only one satisfactory place to be if you are a Junior College student—right in the center of the downstairs hallway. The month of March, however, his marked a new low in the spirits of students. Scarcely half the student body has seen fit to come into the hallway during break time.

The apathy has become so vicious, as a matter of fact, that during the whole of the preceding month, only one faculty member and one non-shop scholar on his way from room 110 to the library, and a pottery four others were all amiable at noon.

Surely, BJC students, a lack of initiative is evident! We feel that the whole student body is using up the vacation, sloshing and filling up empty bottles with goodies, a congested hallway should give us a clue to why we are not using up the break, and a pottery four others were all amiable at noon.

A Sticky Problem

Something must be done, and pronto, about the dark situation. It is no longer safe for a student to park his guns under the desk for fear it will be gone by the holiday. Last week, in desk four, room 208, a student deposited a half-full can of chocolate chunks water under the desk right towards the left-hand end. When he came back the next day it was gone! In its place was a half-empty stick of juicy-jutty, but show that isn’t his favorite flavor, this student became והוא not was referred to the school psychologist to help him with this complex he obtained as a result of this flagrant behavior on the part of this gun-matcher. Why, anyone, it isn’t even safe to leave your guns any place—especially at BJC.

HOW TO WRITE A TERM PAPER WITHOUT REALLY TRYING

The heading on the school gym wall read: "NOVEMBER 20, 1964." This was the day that the school's Athletic Director announced that the school would be postponing its annual football game because of rain. The news spread quickly through the halls, and students could be seen gathering in small groups to discuss the implications of the decision. Among them was a young man named Jack, who had just received his first term paper assignment.

Jack had always been a bit of a procrastinator, and he knew that he was going to have to start working on his paper soon. But he also knew that he didn't have the time or the motivation to do the work required to earn a good grade. So, he set about trying to come up with a plan to get through the assignment without actually doing any work.

He started by taking a deep breath and closing his eyes. He visualized himself in the final exam, sitting at his desk, surrounded by blank pages. He felt a wave of anxiety wash over him, and he opened his eyes again, resolution on his face.

"I'll just make it up," he thought. "I can write about anything I want, and if I make it sound good enough, they won't notice.

And so, Jack began to write. He started with a title that he thought would appeal to his professor: "The Impact of Football on Student Life." He then proceeded to write a few paragraphs about the history of football at the school, including some quotes from famous alumni about the sport. He added a few statistics about the school's recent football team, and then he sat back and looked at the results.

It wasn't a bad start, he thought. He could see himself getting a good grade on this paper. But then he thought about the final exam, and he felt a pang of anxiety. He knew that he couldn't just keep writing without actually learning anything. He needed to find a way to genuinely understand the material and then write about it.

He knew that he had to make a real effort if he wanted to succeed. He decided to set aside some time each day to work on the assignment, and he started to feel a bit more confident. He knew that it wouldn't be easy, but he was willing to put in the work if it meant getting a good grade.

In the end, Jack did manage to turn in a decent paper. He didn't get an A, but he was happy with his B. And he learned an important lesson: if you want to succeed, you have to put in the effort. But he also learned that sometimes, even if you don't actually learn anything, you can still manage to get through a difficult task. The key is to be realistic about your goals and to be willing to work hard to achieve them.
