Members of the sophomore class were closer than ever in friendship this year because of the decreased size of the class due to the war. Because of the shortage of men the leadership of the class rested on the shoulders of the girls. The officers for the year included Coleen Rankin Lucas, president, assisted by Helen Westfall, vice president; Judy Harris, secretary, and LeJeanne Houston, treasurer.

Jeanne Swanholm and Connie Carver Swenson were chosen as class representatives to the student executive board.

The sophomores held their annual Christmas party during the Yuletide season in the student union building. LaVerne Sarvis was chairman of the dance.

One of the most popular booths at the student carnival this year was the "Little Reno" concession, which was sponsored by the sophomores. Helen Westfall was in charge.

Highlighting the latter part of the year was the class assembly, which was planned by Helen Westfall. The sophomores participated in the student stunt night on March 24 with one of the most unusual stunts.

The sophomore year was climaxed by the traditional "hag day," on which students wore outfits of all descriptions and the girls wore no make-up.

May 5 was a gala day for the sophomores, for this was their annual "sneak" day. Sophomores said goodbye to the school on May 31 when the graduation exercises were held.

As the war has affected many other things, so has it also affected the freshman class of Boise Junior College. We started our school year with the following officers: Dudley Williams, president; Bob Parker, vice president; Jean Ash, secretary, and Burt Chisholm, treasurer. Bernard Gratton and Yvonne Rutten represented our class on the student council.

However, by the time the winter term began, only Jean Ash and Yvonne Rutten remained to direct the class activities, as the boys joined the various branches of the service.

In spite of this the freshman class continued with its yearly activities. Levis and plaid shirts were predominant at the freshman class dance on November 19. Yvonne Rutten was chairman of the hard times dance, which had "Jivin' Jig" as the theme.

Sponsoring a booth at the carnival was the next activity of our class. The group held a "penny throw" which brought a crowd.

In the spring we were in charge of the exchange assembly with Boise High School. This annual affair was started several years ago by the two schools.

From our present freshman class will come the leaders and the officers of the sophomore class next year.
