EDUCATION

..... Mightiest of American Structures

We who are building a powerful America with steel and stone and timber and sand pay fitting and constant tribute to those who are building a mightier America with books and science and intellect and study.

Though we both build toward a finer America, construction's job is one of TODAY. Ours is the task of harnessing the mighty rivers; spanning the nation with highways and airports; uniting cities with bridges; building the ships of trade and the structures of commerce.

Education's job is one of the future. It is shaping the minds which will know better than we how to fully utilize what we have built; instilling the will to continually improve and expand; stimulating the courage to accomplish the seemingly impossible; fostering the pride of country that will carry America to victory over all.

Educational institutions such as Boise Junior College bespeak the fact that America's future is in good hands.
