Educator discusses recent entourage

by Tony McFarlane

In the summer of 1977, Dr. John Dahlberg was among eighty-five American educators to tour the Soviet Union and the Mongolian People’s Republic. Three and a half weeks, thirty-seven thousand miles and a wealth of information later, the BSU Associate Professor of Education and his party returned home with perhaps a greater understanding of the forces and philosophies that shape the dynamic quarter of the globe. The following interview was conducted by the Arbiter features editor with Dahlberg, in his unpublished session in which he related his impressions of a little understood, commonly maligned people.

TD: What kind of trip was it; was it fact finding?
JD: It was a seminar sponsored by the Council for the Study of Socialist Education at Kent State University (Ohio) jointly with the USU (Idaho State University) in Moscow and Mongolia... at each stop we met with university people as well as directors of particular public schools. We looked at the education spectrum, from the day care center all the way through graduate school.

TD: Did you have a chance to talk with the students?

JD: Yeah. Virtually always after school, nearly during school... after school and in the streets walking the streets, talking with people of all ages, not just students...

TD: Were you allowed your own freedoms (as a visitor)?
JD: The only thing I was restricted from was the kind of thing... the Russian would be restricted from in this country, military bases... the security areas at the Pentagon.

TD: How were you chosen for this trip?
JD: I had been in the Soviet Union five years ago on a similar situation... this was made up by a number of people who had been there before.

TD: Are the educational systems outlined by them (the educators) or by the government?
JD: They’re all centralized. The Ministry of Education in Moscow pretty much determined, precisely, everything that will transpire in the Soviet Union (educationally). So in Mongolia... in Ulan Bator (the capital) there is no difference to be found.

Dahlberg expanded on that point a week program in the Mongolian People’s Republic in which students produce material for sale in the open market places; at an early age they become a viable member of the market system.

JD: It is similar to what you find in the People’s Republic of China... they are really part of the total economic picture.

TD: No. No negative feelings directed towards me, but the Russians is not an open person. You really miss the readiness that we have here (to smile). It’s not that they have any hostility towards you... they are just not as ready with a smile as we are.

TD: Were there any “backwater slums” in Moscow? Were they loosely disguised?
JD: There’s an enormous building program. Housing is terribly short, there are massive apartment buildings... there are areas... slums has a negative connotation... buildings such as these provide a greater control over the population.

The conversation turned to the international political sphere, and the freedom of educators and students. JD: There is a political atmosphere in Moscow as there is in Washington, or London, or Bonn. The further you go away... the less politically inhibited people may be.

TD: There was no negative feedback as a tourist... as an American?

JD: No. No negative feelings directed towards me, but the Russians is not an open person. You really miss the readiness that we have here (to smile). It’s not that they have any hostility towards you... they are just not as ready with a smile as we are.

JD: There’s an enormous building program. Housing is terribly short, there are massive apartment buildings... there are areas... slums has a negative connotation... buildings such as these provide a greater control over the population.

It’s difficult to put it in its proper place... what is uniquely Russian, what is politically, culturally Russian.

Senator Bill reading approved

by Diane Barr

At its regular October 18 meeting, the ASB Senate approved the first reading of Senate Bill #1, voted to place three questions on the Homecoming ballot concerning the merit of mandatory athletic fees, and sent a proposed constitutional amendment to the ASB Judiciary and the Senate’s own Academic Affairs Committee.

Senate Bill #1, sponsored by Arts and sciences Senator Craig Hurst and Steve Botimer, is intent on establishing a “procedure for the administration of financial budgets.” It was sent to the Legislative Revision committee and will be scheduled for the second reading during the course of the October 25 meeting.

Business Senator Larry Johnson’s request for an advisory approval, three questions to be attached to the Homecoming ballot concerning the merit of mandatory athletic fees. The survey is designed to give the Senate some indication as to the average student’s opinion on this issue. The Senate amendments were approved along with another motion that directed the ASB Public Relations office to prepare a “fact sheet” with all pertinent information on the athletic fee issue as gathered by the Student Affairs committee. These sheets will be distributed at the polls on election day.

A proposed constitutional amendment that would eliminate the two faculty members of the ASB Judiciary was introduced by Arts and Sciences Senator David Hamruquet. The amendment was sent concurrently to the Legislative Revision committee and the Judiciary committee for review and subsequent recommendations.

In another action, the Senate directed the Academic Affairs committee to look into the possibility of adding a “tab” credit to the computer programming classes now being held. Arts and sciences Senator Donna Devine originated the motion to begin the study.

The Student Affairs committee was directed to consider a recommendation from the SUB Board of Governors that advocates the organization of an advisory committee for the Campus Bookstore. The suggestion was made by Vo-Tech Senator Linda Norberg who is a member.

The Senate also approved a letter commending Idaho State University’s delegation to the Idaho Student Association Convention and gave Senate President, Chris Ford, the go-ahead for dissemination of a letter to all ASB personnel that challenges them to get involved in the fight against cancer with the drive for the Mountain State Tumor Institute (MSTI).

President Mike Hoffman reported that the Public Alcohol Hearing held on October 18 was attended by fewer than twenty persons and that it had lasted only twenty minutes. The hearing was the first of four being held across the state to give the public a chance to voice its opinion on the alcohol policies of the various Idaho university and college institutions.

Hoffman also stated that the current ASB administration was enlarging the definition of advisement and that this information would eventually culminate in an advising handbook for students.

Finally, Hoffman stated that the Department of Health and Welfare will be sending an investigator to BSU to gather information relative to the complaint filed last April by ASB against the university. The complaint charged that there were some violations of the Federal Title IX (equal rights) statute on campus.

Foundation funds available

The American College and University Service Bureau announces a service to aid students, both undergraduates and graduates, obtain funds from foundations.

The bureau’s director says, “There are hundreds of foundations with millions of dollars in funds earmarked to aid students in meeting the cost of higher education that goes unnotched each year. Why? Students do not know of the foundation or how to go about obtaining these funds.”

The bureau offers its services to deserving students by supplying names of foundations and guidance as to how to go about obtaining funds from same.

For more details on this service interested students may write: American College and University Service Bureau, Department 5, 1728-5058 Poplar Ave., Memphis, Tn. 38157

Friendship bridge dedicated

Mrs. Robert Gibb, together with Boise Mayor Richard Eayrs and former BSU presi- dent Dr. Robert Eardley, dedicat- ed the Bob Gibb Friendship Bridge last Saturday in a brief afternoon ceremony. The dedication drew more than 600 people to watch the opening of the footbridge, which links the BSU central campus with Julia Davis Park, a city-owned foot span of steel and concrete.

The bridge is named for the late Robert S. Gibb, who was executive assistant to the BSU president and assistant director of the Extended Day Program. Project Director Devin Smith introduced the guest speakers.

Mayor Eardley reflected on the role of Flora Bervoix, played by Gerald Morelock baritone, played the role of El Gallo in The Fantasticks for the Boise Little Theatre summer production as well as singing the role of the chart-topping song in La Traviata. He is at present preparing for a junior recital to be given in the theater as well as the role of John Sorrell in the Corsair which is to be the Boise State University Opera offered this fall.

David Sample, baritone, spent the summer performing in the BYU Summer Music Theatre production of Music Man as Harold Hill and will be seen this fall in the MSTI (Mountain State Tumor Institute) production of Shenandoah. David will also be appearing in the BSU Open production of the Caisal as the Secret Police Agent.

A number of students from both Mrs. Elliott’s and Mr. Taylor’s studios will be traveling to Richland, Washington in late October to perform for the Northwest District Convention either in the Opera, which is to be sung by Gerald Morelock, Jackie Dod- son, Beverley Peterson, Barbara Rogerscheger, Bob Heller, and Shirley Rasch.

Tea honors new pledges

A tea was given on Oct. 22 to honor Alpha Omicron Pi Alumna and their two new pledges: Susan Kaas and Kathy O’Dell.

The tea, given by Mrs. Audrey Gellert was a welcome opportunity for alumni, pledges, and members to become better acquainted with the new students, or make new plans for the AOPA’s Halloween Retreat to McCall.

Before the Retreat, among other projects, the pledges of Alpha Omicron Pi will be selling “hook” insurance covering all the ills that this holiday culture could bring. This insurance will be available from any AOP pledge at various locations or campus.

Kappa Psi states support of anti-cancer effort

The members of Alpha Kappa Psi are convinced that the fight against cancer is a worthy cause. Therefore, when organiza- tions at Boise State University were asked to support a drive to raise funds to purchase a linear accelerator (a machine most effective in treating cancer victims) for MSTI (Mountain State Tumor Institute), Alpha Kappa Psi did not hesitate in offering their support. First, Alpha Kappa Psi purchased 50 tickets to a MSTI benefit dinner and “Shenandoah,” a MSTI live play, 1951, was the cost of the 50 tickets to the benefit dinner and play, but Alpha Kappa Psi went beyond this figure and contributed $500 for the cause.

Alpha Kappa Psi is supporting MSTI in another way. They are organizing a "Phantom Ball" to raise funds for the linear accelerator. A "ball" will not actually be held, but those who purchase tickets for the Phantom Ball will have a bottle of champagne delivered to their door by a mysterious "phantom" on the evening of Friday, November 11. In addition to the champagne, certain people chosen at random will receive a special surprise which cannot be disclosed at this time.

Sixty-five per cent of the proceeds from the Phantom Ball will be given to MSTI for their linear accelerator, while the rest of the proceeds will be retained by Alpha Kappa Psi to cover the costs incurred in sponsor- ing this project.

Tickets for the Phantom Ball range from $2.00 per person or $5.00 per table. If you wish to purchase tickets, call 385-1909 and ask for Shane, or write to Alpha Kappa Psi, P.O. Box 62, 1910 University Drive, Boise, Idaho, 83725.

The members of Alpha Kappa Psi feel it is worth their time and effort to help fight cancer. They challenge any other BSU organiza- tion to match their contribu- tion to MSTI.

In addition to their support of MSTI, Alpha Kappa Psi has been busy with various other activities this fall. On the first week-end in October, members of the fraternity presented a tea to generally support the fight against cancer. On October 24, it was an honor to be asked to help in the Opening Night of Boise State University's new student body, Boise State University, 1910 University Drive, Boise, Idaho, 83725.

Schools lobby to stop increase

by Steve D. Robertson
Chairman S.U.P.B.

In my second article about the Student Union Programs Board, I am going to explain what the Board is.

First, the Board is made up entirely of full-time students who are chosen by the Board Chairperson for a period of one year. If you have a desire to be involved in the selection of the programs offered to the students of BSU, then I suggest that you become a member of the Programs Board.

The biggest problem faced each year by my department is the student senate—most of them have not been involved with student government at BSU before and do not understand the problems faced by me or my department.

I take input from you, the student, to inform us and the senate which you would like to see come here next year. It will make my job much easier and will provide you with the types of programs that you would like to see.

Our events for this week include only our Weekend Film Series presentations and the complete list of all films for this semester you can pick up a film schedule at the SUB Information Booth.

Normally, I would suggest that all complaints about the programs offered be brought directly to me, but for this year I ask that you contact one of the student senators. This group of sometimes-on-the-bull boys and girls saw fit to cut my budget this year by over $20,000. This has put limitations on what we can do. However, I must also be working on concrete positive recommendations as to where the increases should go and as to how the total fee structure should be revamped. I would certainly appreciate your input on this crucial issue.

can go into comparative kinds of things, that's all colored by biases.

Tm: As an observer, an outsider, do you hold political views about the Soviet Union?

Jd: They have tremendous contact... it is efficient as far as disseminating their policy... if the central government wants to institute, it's instituted. There is emphasis on the relationship between school and home. It isn't requested that the parent attend. They have what they call a "Child Upbringing Night." You'll be told how your kids will be brought up, how you're going to discipline them.

Tm: How is that enforced?

Jd: If the kid does not comply, then often times the employer (of the parent) is notified and the employer tells the parent to keep him squared away. If you don't, you'll go elsewhere and some of those elsewhere are less than desirable.

Tm: It's a difficult place... it's very difficult to put things in their proper perspective. What's uniquely Russian? What is politically Russian? Culturally Russian?

Tm: Can we say, "what is Soviet versus what is Russian"?

Jd: You have to, really. What is pre-Revolution what is post-Revolution? The Ukrainian doesn't consider himself Russian... but they are looking at cultural differences, not political differences. But they have ties to the Soviet Union.

Tm: How? By virtue of a card?

Jd: By the virtue of a card.

Jd: There were less than three hundred Americans admitted to Mongolia this year. They have a very strict visa application and grant. Why I don't know.

Tm: Well, how do they view their status? Do they feel they are independent, or in reality a buffer between the PRC and the Soviet Union?

Jd: In reality they are a buffer. Because no way can you envision Mongolia would stop China or the Soviet Union... but they won't admit that. You have to give credence to your own political existence...

Tm: Is this mountainous through here (pointing to the map) on the Soviet Border... and the Gobi to the south? So it is an isolated "peacock in the midst of adversity"?

Jd: It's isolated, geographically.

Tm: Culturally? Is it a backward country, by our standards?

Jd: To some degree. But Ulan Bator is really a very contemporary city... a pleasant city. Mongolia culturally, it's related to the Oriental world; politically, they're tied solely and wholly to the U.S.S.R.

Tm: Are they trying to relate themselves to the western world, to the Communist bloc?

Jd: All those. They want to retain their cultural identity, but they want to become a viable participant in the world community. It's very hard. They're dependent on the Communist bloc.

The conversation turned again to the Soviet Union, its political system, its people; we spoke, 1 as an International Relations major, he as an educator who earned his Masters Degree in Political Science at Lewis and Clark at Portland; mostly, though, he spoke with the most valuable learning tool, experience. We spoke of the U.S.S.R. under Stalin, the days of the purges, of the problems facing the nations of the Soviet Union and Mongolia, the forces of the East versus the influx of the West.

He spoke intelligently, finally of his travels and his experiences, and is planning a paper on it. But admittedly he has so much information to compile he's dealing with an area of the world that leaves so much room for debate in the political academic spheres. Let it be said he has taken his first steps in understanding not only the regimes and figureheads that shape international affairs, but gone inside, to the cultures, to the history, to the native populations that shape our attitudes and thoughts on the communist world.

MK disputes journalistic rights

I received a letter of objection dated October 14, 1977, from W.H. McMurren, President & Chief Executive Officer of Morrison-Knudsen Company, Inc., regarding the publication of a newspaper article entitled "A joke at MK's expense" in the Arbiter. I hereby challenge MK to test the validity in a court of law. I am certain that our evidence will convince you and eliminate any doubts you may currently have.

1. The form to which the article refers was reprinted and circulated in MK's offices. The preposterous ill and should be a disservice to the newspaper of a respected educational institution.

2. Mr. McMurren's letter states "There is no excuse for journalism of this type even at a student level, not for any act by an employee that would motivate such an action.

3. The author of the article states that such a column is "People's Lib." It is my opinion that such a column enables students and Presidents of large corporations a chance to gain insights into deviant social attitudes that perpetuate disfigured beliefs.

4. Mr. McMurren's objection to the publication "even at a student level" is grossly irrational.

5. Mr. McMurren, the academic world serves as a proving ground for attitudinal changes within individuals. What better place to debunk racial discrimination or racial stereotypes than at such a place?

Subject: Boise State University Newspaper Article

The attached article was published on October 10 by the student newspaper at Boise State University and is sent to you, as an employer, for your information and edification.

As President of this company, I find the subject matter totally repugnant for two obvious reasons:

1. The article contains grossly irrational statements.
2. The author of the article refers to the publication "even at a student level" as a form of journalism.

Mr. McMurren, the academic world serves as a proving ground for attitudinal changes within individuals. What better place to debunk racial discrimination or racial stereotypes than at such a place?

Where have all the flowers gone?

by Chuck Duke

"These days nothing seems to mean anything." - Jerry Rubin (quoted in Newsweek, 9-6-77)

A spate of magazine articles has appeared recently on the New Left/counter-cultural black liberation "movement" of the '60s, or, more specifically, on the "failure" of that "movement." Many of these pieces have focused on the current foibles and burned-out merit of the former "leaders" of the "movement." Some of the information related to the "movement" is indisputably funny, if rather depressing. For example: Ronnie Davis is presently "blacked out" in the orbit of the Diabatic Celestial Fat Kid (Guru Maharaj Ji) and is working for the John Hancock Insurance Co.; Jerry Rubin is into cat and lives in a $685 per month apartment in New York; Eldridge Cleaver has turned into a bible thumper working on a book to be titled Soul on Fire; and John Sinclair refers to himself as "a great American" and says he regrets not having backed him in 1968.

But it is accurate to assess the "movement" as a total failure? Faulting the New Left/counter-cultural/black liberation movement for its value to spark a revolution is rather like faulting an elephant for its inability to fly. The New Left was composed primarily of white, male, college students from privileged backgrounds motivated in many, if not most, cases by guilt as much as by conviction. The issues of primary interest in the '60s, civil rights for blacks and the war in Vietnam, did not directly affect most New Leftists, the one exception being the draft which a majority were easily able to avoid.

Given those facts it's rather easy to understand the current state of disillusionment of large numbers of former student radicals. Many, including virtually all of the "leaders" of the student movement, were so deluded that they actually believed that they were not directly threatened. To understand their subsequent reactions the fact that things had generally been very "easy" for most of them should be recalled. So, when a revolutionary situation failed to develop as expected, it's understandable that the predominant reactions were either total disenchantment with politics or, on page 11.

One thing I have learned from all the flou that has accompanied my column is that "if you poke a sore spot, it will cause an outcry."...

In the October 10 issue of the Arbiter, the Boise State University student newspaper, an article appeared in the advice/issent section attacking the Morrison-Knudsen Co.'s always doing leadership, and its personnel for allowing and/or participating in the reproduction and distribution of racist material. This is a response to that article.

My reason for responding to the article by Jean King is not to defend Morrison-Knudsen, for it needs no defending. Nor is it to cast Ms. King straight on the subject of corporate racism. But, as citizens concerned with human rights we all have an investment in pursuing intellectual discourse on the subject.

In some respects it appears that the article, based on the same kind of faulty assumptions and gross generalizations used by those who developed, reproduced, and distributed the "simplified job application" the Morrison-Knudsen Co. must address two core issues: the nature of the material in question, and its personnel for allowing and/or participating in the reproduction and distribution of racist material. This is a response to that article.

In some respects it appears that the article, based on the same kind of faulty assumptions and gross generalizations used by those who developed, reproduced, and distributed the "simplified job application" the Morrison-Knudsen Co. must address two core issues: the nature of the material in question, and its personnel for allowing and/or participating in the reproduction and distribution of racist material. This is a response to that article.

My reason for responding to the article by Jean King is not to defend Morrison-Knudsen, for it needs no defending. Nor is it to cast Ms. King straight on the subject of corporate racism. But, as citizens concerned with human rights we all have an investment in pursuing intellectual discourse on the subject.

and a retreat into apathy, or a phenomenon of right-wing ideology—Marxism—Leninism—if the working class was too dumb to act for itself, it obviously needed the guidance of a "revolutionary vanguard." That the left was clearly observed in the information of the function of the "vanguard" or organization, the leaders and members of which, virtually without exception, came from privileged backgrounds. Now, after years of bombings and successful attempts to organize the working class, even the WUO is disintegrating because of disillusionment and factionalism. This is beautifully illustrated be a quotation from a founder of the organization (quoted in Newsweek, 9-6-77): "On organiz-ization of the word "culture" talked about racism and imperialism and the gestures talked about "revolution."" Another important facet of the '60's "movement" was black civil rights organization. During the 1960s the black community was obviously in turmoil ands many state reflect the riots which wrecked the country's major cities. Fortunately blacks constitute only 10 % of the population of the U.S., and, given the deep racial divisions which existed before the Brown v. Board of Education, the insurrectionary mood of the nation's blacks did not spread to the white community. Also to be remembered is the emergency savagery depression as a whole in the U.S., which was pushed by the FBI and, in many areas, local police. Violently all black political leaders were either murdered, imprisoned, or dr.

ven on exile (Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, Jr., and Fred Hampton for example). Regrettably, in this area (the government's "anti-riot" policies "worked," for by the end of the decade almost all of the major civil rights/black liberation groups had been legally or otherwise eliminated). The third segment of the "movement" was the counterculture of the '60s. (An original offshoot of the "movement") The "movement" is not dead. The women's liberation, gay liberation, and ecology (especially the campaign against nuclear energy) movements all grew out of the '60s "movement." All of these are very healthy in that they represent the efforts of people to deal directly with situations regarded as threatening them. For that reason (the self-interest of the participants in these movements is involved) the prognosis for survival is good for all of these. Yet another offspring of the '60s "movement" is the spread of the various co-ops (mainly food co-ops) which have appeared all across the country. In most places the motivation for the formation of co-ops is as much the desire of those involved to acquire some control over even the most trivial of their daily lives (the procurement of food) and to find a sense of community in our anomic society as to obtain cheap food prices. The only local co-op is the Boise Consumer Co-op, located at 1515 N. 13th.

One further interesting aspect of the current situation is the proliferation of both anarchistic and anti-authoritarian leftist organizations. Previously existing authoritarian political organizations, such as the Communist Party (Sтаritist) and the Socialist Workers Party (Trotskyist), have maintained their presence and now they have taken root—the Revolutionary Communist Party (Maoist), the October League (Marxist), and the U.S. Labor Party (quis-fascist—actually a party of the right margin). The good thing about these organizations is that they are quite small, they're preoccupied with fighting each other, and they remain a refuge for the psychologically crippled who need a big, strong organization to tell them how to live. The anti-authoritarian left is also organizing. Anarchist-communists are organizing in the Social Revolutionary Anarchist Federation (information available from Black Star, address previously cited), and anarchistic sympathecsympathizing is experiencing a revival in the form of the I.W.W. resists ideological labels, and many members would object to the use I've just imposed on it, my identification is accurate—information is available in I.W.W., 752 W. Webster, Chicago, Ill. 60614).

Once again, don't be misled by my comments; don't be fooled into an unrealistic optimism. It can happen more. Here is what that next time.

KBSD initiates new format

by Rick Taylor

Marty Holtman, interim general manager and program director of KBSD radio, is guiding the station through a transition period from an "all news" service to a "middle of the road" format retaining news broadcasts on the hour and the half hour. The present owners, Earl McRoberts and Harrie Hart Jr., are negotiating the sale of the station in order to pay the debts they've incurred from the fumbling station since it went on the air three and one half years ago.

Though Holtman is an interim manager, he is not merely holding down the fort; he is actively seeking to make money for a station that has, in the past, rarely made even a small profit. It is his belief that "middle of the road" music for profit. It, is his belief, that money could be made by a small news radio in Boise; way to make a financially viable radio station.

Jean McRoberts, speaking for her husband Earl, feels that money could definitely be made by an all news radio in Boise. She blames the financial problems of KBSD on internal litigation and sales people who haven't been trained in selling for a news station. McRoberts said that, "The relatively small population of Reno, Nevada supports all news radio very well. The internal conflict between Hart and my husband were definitely detrimental to KBSD's financial well being."

As for all news radio being dead in Boise, McRoberts feels that a large number of area residents enjoyed KBSD's news format and are disappointed that the programming has changed. According to McRoberts, "Some sponsors are withdrawing their commercials from the new KBSD. All news radio is an excellent community service and many people would like to see the idea return to the Boise valley."

KBSD, located on the a.m. dial at 790, started broadcasting music on the seventh of October. The audience that Marty Holtman is programming for is the twenty-five and older age group that is interested in easy listening. Marty Holtman, Andy Williams, Vanity Fair, Frank Sinatra, and the Bee Gees will be heard throughout the Boise valley from Glenns Ferry to Baker, Oregon and as far north as Stanley.

Mutual, the nation's fourth network and largest news service, supplies KBSD with national news programs. The station's small staff which plays simultaneous roles as disc jockeys, reporters, and sales people owns the local events. "Reporter's Notebook" is a weekly feature of the mutual network and deals with the week's important national issues and happenings. Ken Jacobsen hosts a call in talk show wherein area residents and featured guests discuss topics of local interest. KBSD will also emphasize the audience that KBSD is trying to reach, the twenty-five and older age group.

Will KBSD be in Boise's future as either a middle of the road music station or as an all news service? That is for the commercial sponsors and the future owners to decide.

Bach's new book better JLS

The introduction of a new book by Richard Bach, Illusions, was a minor ripple in the literary world. His first book of pop philosophy, Jonathan Livingston, attracted a great deal of attention with little enthusiasm in that realm. This critic referred to it as a "watery down Khalil Gibran. It was trite, tired old wives tales."

Of course, the general population immediately felt in rapturous love with it, thought-stirred as they are.

My expectations were less than gigantic for Illusions.

Illusions is a great book.

Sorry to jump in with that last statement, but I was lacking a brilliant blurb paragraph with which to dazzle my readers.

Illusions is fresh, original, and well-written.

The new book is injected with the verve and freshness that JLS lacked.

Bach stated that when he'd finished JLS he would never write another book. He recanted his word because he felt that once again he had something to say.

It is an autobiography. It is the story of a man's discovery of himself.

Bach has taken ideas that have played in my mind for a while and written them down so as to give them that special feeling of deja-vu. He makes it seemed that, while we are learning new things, we knew them all along. This last statement is the central theme of the book.

Bach never seems to wear the idea down by extrapolating it unnecessarily to the nth degree, but is rather like a small child eating.

He picks at the food, moves it around on his plate, sticks his fingers in it, plays with it, nibbles it, then just before consumption, drops it, and goes for the ice cream.

Perhaps, though, this is a weakness in Bach's prose, his inability to confront fully the issues, choosing instead to dance around it.

Read Illusions. It is not confessional, but good-old meat and potatoes.
'White Magnolia' proclaimed outstanding
by Dona Clark

Viewing the presentation of "The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia" in 1962, I was truly a pleasure, in other words the acting was outstanding. The play, written by Preston Jones, is set in the small Texas town of Bradleyville. It was staged at a small hotel room, a quality similar to the last chapter of "The Knights of the White Magnolia."...

Rose Garden found unsatisfying
by Chuck Bufe

"I Never Promised You a Rose Garden" is a not a great film; it's not even a particularly good film. It is, however, much better than most movies which play in Boise (take a look at the entertainment page in the Statesman and you'll see what I mean—if you don't enjoy horror, soft-core porn, disaster and/or Walt Disney flicks you're generally S.O.L.).

Rose Garden, as you probably know by now, deals with the struggle of a teen-aged girl in a psychiatric hospital to overcome her mental illness. The plot, for the most part, is quite believable. The one glaring exception is one of the inmates' madam concluding segment. If the film has one strength, it's the performances of Kathleen Quinlan (the central character) and her supporting cast. The acting in Rose Garden is of high caliber.

The main problem with the film is that the action takes place in a social vacuum. The psychosis of the main character is presented as simply an existing condition with no more than a hint to how it came to be (a couple of short scenes featuring her parents give the only clue). The other inmates are presented merely as amusing whooping. Rose Garden carefully avoids commenting upon the social implications of mental illness, which is unfortunate if its makers had pretensions of saying anything other than a purely commercial vehicle. While I Never Promised You a Rose Garden is clearly a well-made film, it is, for the reason cited, curiously unsatisfying. On my way out of the theater I heard another viewer commenting: "I work around psychos all week. Why should I want to go see a movie about them?" Why indeed?

I Never Promised You a Rose Garden is currently playing at the Ada Theater.
WALT WAGNER

BSU Special Events Center
Thursday Nov. 3
Friday Nov. 4

He plays a Grand Piano with fire, sarcasm, tenderness, weightlessness, and style—always with unabashed emotion. His technique is blinding, the product of years of study and practice. But what sets him apart is the contagious feeling he has for the music he plays—whether it is his own or another writer’s composition. Triple-grounded in classics, jazz and rock, honed by concert and club appearances—constantly performing—he is honest and appealing. His great versatility gives an incredible variety to music he writes and plays, with the result that he touches virtually all age groups. There is warmth and stability in both his music and his personal projection, and an extreme charisma in his performances that are utterly devoid of “show-biz” cliches.

Blanca Douglas, Sophomore

I was just wondering why more people don't seem to like BRTC here at BSU. It doesn't seem to be a very popular program.

Well, Blanca, I think that one of the problems is that people tend to think of college BRTC like the high school's programs. Some of the college students thought of the high school program as a loser's club, kind of a place to go when there wasn't any other clubs to participate in for the others. It was kind of a social club to them. One other thing is that there were only 5,000 seats sold per game and were received by the 56,000 seats sold per game regularly paid two or three bucks per game throughout the season. Probably were drugged.

Billiards competition proves top notch

by Dave Fredrick

The largest turnout ever was entered for the fourth annual Jack White Boise State University Pocket Billiard Championships during the past week. Over one hundred and twenty five men competed for the top positions in the men's division of the tourney and twenty-four women competed for the top women's prizes.

After eliminating 120 other men, the eight finalists for the men's crown were named. They were Chris "Tree" Humphrey, John "Pretty" Brady, Bob "El Chico" Collins, Mehron "OPEC" Aheary, Jon "Walt" Guy, Brian "The Kid" Stevens, Jon "Stoony" Stoneberg, and Ron "Grizzley" Johnson. These eight had fought their way through four grueling matches and had defeated all comers in a best of seven series. They were now to be tossed into a round robin competition between themselves to find out who had the nerve and skill to be crowned the BSU champ.

Unlike past years, there was no one person that was obvious. There was no sure winner or favorite. In one of the most evenly fought contests over by Jack White, there was a three way tie for first following the round robin. These three, "Pretty", "Walt", and "Grizz- ley", would now have to fight to see who would win the right to play Jack White and reap the rewards awaiting the conqueror.

In the first match, "Walt" used the mistake made by "Pretty" to defeat him four games to 2. "Walt" then moved down "Grizzley" 4-2. "Pretty" and "Grizzley" then fought to a 3-3 tie, before "Grizzley" won the seventh game and the right to play "Walt". One last time for the title.

The kicking game is somehow unsettling. Veteran Tom Mayes is gone and his understudy, Ed Peterson, has the benefit of a second spring session in his favor. But JC transfer Scott Dye of Bakersfield, California and Steve Steakne will make Peterson earn his kicking job, Don Scholz returns as the Aggie's top punter.

The Broncos have not done too poorly on the road and USU have been known to be tough in their backyard. What's the outcome? USU-37 BSU-14 is my guess.

USU captures X-country victory

by Alice Myers

The BSU women's cross country runners didn't field a complete team at their first honest meet, but neither did Idaho State, College of Idaho or Northwest Nazarene. In fact, Idaho State University, who had the meet's individual winner, also won the team title with 33 points, barely managing to put it, "Last year there was only one girl on the team...me. We didn't even have a coach. So this year is a vast improvement." Lacking their fifth runner.

The passing game, with quarterbacks Keith Myers and Eric Hipple, is strong; the to contend with as well, USU-37 BSU-14 is my guess.

Jackie Crist, due to an injury, the BSU women cross country runners still turned in some impressive times over the 2.5 mile course in Julia Davis and Ann Morrison, Saturday.

Coach Basil Dahlstrom wasn't too disappointed with the times stating, "We've got good runners—but no numbers. The girls have developed a lot."

BSU's number, one cross country runner; Cindy Jorgenson, placed second in the meet to Utah State's, Jane Wipf. Wipf turned in a time of 18:56 and Jorgenson followed with a 19:34.

"I've never been timed over our home course," Jergenson stated. "The race was fast and I felt Jane just smoked me. She's a good runner."

Finishing third in the meet was BSU's Buchan with a time of 17:24. Arlene Bartholome was eighth with 18:30 and Sandy Kassens finished 13th with 19:40.

Next Saturday the women will again be competing at home in a dual meet against Eastern Washington. The meet is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m.

Women's field hockey team travels to Pullman for WSU

by Nancy Phillips

The BSU women's field hockey team, after a tough weekend of play in Provo, Utah, traveled to the Washington State Invitational this Friday and Saturday in Pullman.

The women, 4-6-1, left the Brigham Young Invitational, with three losses and one tie in the two day tourney. Northern Colorado, Cal Poly of Pomona and BYU all handed losses to BSU. They tied Colorado State 0-0.

Washington State, the University of Idaho and the University of Oregon, as well as BSU, will attend the two day tournament in Pullman.

"We think we will play alot better this weekend. We just need to get a little more confidence in ourselves," commented BSU coach Jayne Van Wassenhove, "and play more like a team, with team offense and team defense."

Alice Myers scored the lone BSU goal of the weekend in the final game of the tournament, a 3-1 loss to BYU. The BSU team led 1-0 at half-time but when Jeanine Brandel was injured in the second half, that "stopped our momentum," added the coach.

Friday, the women faced Colorado State in the morning, tying 0-0 and lost to Cal Poly, 2-0, in the afternoon. Saturday, Northern Colorado defeated bas, 1-0, in the morning following by the BYU game in the afternoon.

"Those teams had alot more experience than we did, especially Cal Poly. They are a very strong team," Cal Poly was the first California team that any of the BSU women's intercollegiate teams have faced.

The JV field hockey team, 2-0-1, concluded season play this week with home games Monday and Wednesday. College of Idaho on Monday and Northwest Nazarene College on Wednesday are both opponents BSU has defeated.

Linda Hampton scored early in the second to lead BSU to a victory over NNC October 19, in Nampa.

Game times for the two remaining JV games are 3:30 on the field by the gym.

The Women's Volleyball team, now 6-11, traveled to NNC Invitational tournament Saturday, October 22nd.

This was probably the most important tournament in terms of regional standing. Boise State is one of nine independents of this small college region vying for two regional tournament spots open to the independents. At the end of the season Boise State will submit their seasons record to the tournament board hoping it is good enough to gain a slot. However, this weekends action cut their chances. BSU dropped matches to U of I and Central Washington. Of 1 won with scores of 15-10, 11-15 and 13-15. While Central posted wins of 13-15 and 10-15.

"There was so much riding on these two matches, said coach Fahleson. "They were two really emotional matches. The team was playing with a lot of emotion, everyone was keyed up and really into playing."

With so much emotional tension in these matches and then to be handed defeats the ladies lost their third match of the day against NCC by 5-15 and 4-15.

BSU lost Missy Bennett for the rest of the season. This was the second player of experience to be sidelined. "I lost what I consider to be my sparkplugs of the team," said Fahleson. "After losing Janet Emery and Missy Bennett the team went through a personality change for the team as a whole." Boise State will be playing TVCC at home on October 25th at 7 p.m. They travel to Utah State University for an Invitational Tournament October 26th.

BSU first in Big Sky

Broncos beat Lumberjacks

by Fred Davis

Behind the strong running of freshman Terry Zahner, and an opportunistic defense, the Boise State Broncos moved into sole possession of the Big Sky football race, a position they have held for three of the past four years.

Zahner, who teamed with another freshman, Cedric Minter for over 300 yards from the tailback position, set two school records before the sellout crowd of 20,498 screaming Bronco fans. Zahner, making his first start as a Bronco, established new marks of 31 carries in a single game, and responded with 205 yards rushing. His 31 carries breaks the record of 27 set earlier this year by Fred Goode against Montana State, and his 205 yards tops the mark of 177 which was set by former All-American John Smith, against Nevada-Reno back in 1975.

The Broncos opened the scoring early in the game, when safety Naso Balinos intercepted Lumberjack quarterback Herb Daniel and raced 42 yards untouched into the end zone. Tom Sarette's kick made the score 7-0.

The Lumberjacks came roaring back however, when a Hoskin Hogan pass went errant and was picked off by Harold Smith. That led to a 44 yard drive which was topped off by Carl Golden's 10 yard run. Tom Jurich kicked the extra point, and the score was 7-7.

Boise State came back and scored on a 70 yard drive, with Cedric Minter getting the first of his three touchdowns on a 7 yard run. Following Tom Sarette's extra point, the score was 14-7.

Boise State came back and scored on a 70 yard drive, with Cedric Minter getting the first of his three touchdowns on a 7 yard run. Following Tom Sarette's extra point, the score was 14-7.

The Broncos Defense held the Lumberjacks to under 200 yards rushing, and limited them to just 3 points in the second half.

This win also makes people wonder why the Broncos can play well at home, and play so poorly against weaker teams on the road. In the Broncos three home games this year, they have outscored opponents 98-27, and the opponents have been three of the toughest division II schools in the west, UNLV, Montana State, and NAU.

The Broncos return to the road next week as they travel to Logan, Utah to face the Utah State Aggies. The team will hope to average a 42-19 loss two years ago. Hopefully, the Broncos will get their road act together, and play with some of the intensity that they show at home.

BSU narrowly defeated in grueling cross country meet

by Charlie Wittner

Despite the record-setting performance of Boise State's Steve Collier, the Weber State College Wildcats still managed to defeat the Broncos 25 to 32 last Saturday in a triangular cross country meet at Julia Davis Park. The Idaho State team was a distant third with 90 points.

Collier, running one of the finest races of his collegiate career, ran the 5.1 mile course in 24 minutes and 34 seconds, breaking the old mark set last year by former Bronco Jim Van Dine. Van Dine's time was 24:38 only two seconds better than that of Scott Blackburn, who finished second for Boise with a time of 24:40. After Blackburn, however, it was all Weber State as the Wildcats placed their top five runners all in the next five places. Led by Roberto Segura, a member of the Mexican National team, 'Weber took third through seventh to easily outdistance Boise State. Segura's time was 24:44. Robert Whetten, a freshman from Mesa, Arizona, was Weber State's second man with a time of 24:57. Lynn Strong, at 25:02, was fifth. Javier Chavez and Jorge Ruiz, two other members of the Mexican National team, were sixth and seventh, respectively. Chavez' time was 25:13 while Ruiz was a second behind at 25:14. Karl Knapp was the Bronco's third man when he placed eighth at 25:18. Dave Stevens and Son Link were the fourth and fifth runners for the team at Stevens placed 10th at 25:34 and Link 11th at 25:37.

Mike Henry and Charlie Wittner were running with Coach Ed Jacoby described as probably the best they have all year, were the Broncos' sixth and seventh men. Henry was clocked 26:12 for 13th place and Wittner, a freshman from Boise's Capital High School, was 15th with a time of 26:40. Gene Stone, Bob Martin, and Bruce Blosser were the next to come in for Boise State as Stone was 16th, Martin 19th, and Blosser 20th.

Jacoby was pleased with his team's performance, especially that of Collier and Blackburn. He said that Boise State just got beat by a better team. Assistant coach Saul Dahlsten said, "I think this meet is an indication of our youth and I think we're on the rise." Jacoby continued by saying that Weber State would have to be rated as the top team in the conference at this time, followed by Northern Arizona and either University of Montana or Boise State.

Jacoby noted that, "there are more good runners than I've ever seen in the conference." The head coach added that his team usually does better over the longer courses while Weber State seems to prefer the shorter courses, such as Boise State's. The Big Sky Conference meet will be 10,000 meters, or 6.2 miles, so the Bronco might be able to pick off the Wildcats then.

Collier and Blackburn ran excellent races, with Collier establishing a new course record. Coach Chick Hipol of Weber State said that this race was the first race that Segura or Ruiz wasn't either first or second.

Cooler said that he hadn't really planned on setting a record but he figured that whoever won the race would probably break the old time of 24:28. "I knew it would be between me and Segura all the way. (Jorge) Ruiz always goes out too fast," Coolier said.

For the last mile of the race, Collier and Ruiz waged a small battle against each other. There was much elbowing and pushing involved and at the boardwalk underneath the Capitol Boulevard Bridge, Ruiz actually attempted to push Collier into the Boise River! This failed however, when Collier retaliated with a hard elbow into Ruiz' chest.

After two and one half miles, the runners had to negotiate a small but steep hill. At this point, Ruiz had dropped off the pace and Collier, Blackburn, and Segura were the leaders of the race. Collier pulled away a small amount as he went uphill and Segura and Blackburn ran together on the downhill portion of the race. At this point only two second separated Collier from second and third place.

"After three miles, if anybody was with me, I wanted to break 'em," Collier said. "I did run my best at the three and four miles but Scott and Segura were still with me, so it was just a matter of who could hang on to the pace.

Turnabouts harry your friends Tate and Jerry

by Jerry Richards and Tate Simmons

Why does Michigan play the unbeatable granola titan against the Texas AdMes and Michigan States, and Yet falter against Navy and lose to Minnesota? Why does Texas schedule such a deceptively simple schedule, then trounce Oklahoma? Why does Notre Dame stumble around and get careless against lesser teams and then turn around and sit on Southern California? Why do the wire services do things like ratting Southern Cal second and first in the nation to begin with?

Why did we talk ourselves into this job to begin with?

Last week we went a 10-0 14-6 to put our season record at 104-39-2 for a .724 percentage. Columnists’ note: Our illustrious Sports Editor wishes to inform the public he has nothing to do with the content of the JR·TS column or the relative success or failure of the predictitious therein. “Their damn necks,” he says.

This week’s fun and games: Texas Tech at #1 Texas: The Longhorns made it to #1 Texas 35, Texas Tech 28. Alabama at Mississippi State: Notice how Zero South’s people take ever’thin’ nice ‘n’ slow ‘n’ easy, just talk they get taken’? Let’s just work out bab itself? Ever’thin’, that is, exceptin’ theyah football.

Alabama 42, Miss State 20

Georgia at Kansas State: Permit the Sooners some license to look ahead toward the Oklahoma State. Oklahoma 62, K-State 7.

Iowa at Michigan

Ann Arbor Stadium is a lonesome place to be caught in particularly if the the Michigan Wolverines just happen by, and notice that someone is waiting to play ball. This time UM hath no mercy after the fiasco against Minnesota. Ward to the wise: STAY HOME. Michigan by forfeit or UM 45 Iowa 14.

Wisconsin at Ohio State

Danger! Steamroller out of Fresno, it appears, is only in Division I on the strength of OSU 45 Wisconsin 20. Wisconsin at Ohio State: Dangerous. Steamer out of control and headed your way. Armed and considered ruthless, inscrupulous, nasty, no sense of humor, with a generally horrid disposition. That’s Woody Haynes. The Buckeyes? We’d just as soon not think about it, thank you. OSU 45 Wisconsin 20.

Arkansas at Rice

Those ‘Backs are at a razor edge and mean to boot. This weekend it’s a light afternoon snack: a light gravy over chitlins and Rice. A perfect way to plump Hogs. Arkansas 41 Rice 10.

BIG SKY

Boise State at Utah State:

Two years ago US spoiled Boise State’s Homecoming, with a million dollar running back named Louie Giannonna doing the major damage. This year, USU hasn’t done much outside of giving Penn State a healthy scare, and BSU is the team with the plethora of million-dollar running backs. Now don’t get us wrong; we are sticking our necks out on this one folks. Upset Special.

Boise State 27, USU 24.

Montana at Montana State:

If MSU can be beaten by the University of Idaho, that indicates wither A) a team that makes an occasional slip-up, or B) a team that was predicted to be a heck of a lot better than it turned out. Whichever the case, that’s all superfluous; they’re playing the University of Montana, and that speaks for itself. MSU 28, Montana 14.

Idaho State at Fresno State:

Fresno, it appears, is only in Division I on the strength of their six games against Division I opponents (as opposed to their five Division II games) this season. UH, remember 42-7 against BSU? Let’s just enlarge upon that a little. Idaho at Weber State:

While the Wildcats have been feeling around with Benedict State, Idaho has been beating Montana teams. Soundly. Looks like the Vandals are getting ready to put their season record at 104-39-2 for a .724 percentage.

"Wait!", using a sure stroke and keen eye, calmly won the final series to take the crown of BSU Champion.

In the women's division, the three finalists were Barbara "Barbarella" Lohmeier, Barb "Blaze" Shockey, and "Swing-in" Mary Shafer. The three competed in a round robin tournament of their own, and "Blaze" Shockey proved to be unbeatable to the other two girls. Mary Shafer, who stands only four feet ten inches tall, had trouble seeing and reaching some of her shots, shot well enough to defeat "Barbarella" and take second place. The top three finishers in each division were awarded pool cues and cases as well as trophies for their efforts in the tournament.

Congratulations to all who placed, and all of the people who competed, and thanks from the Game Room for the enthusiasm shown during the tournament. Because of you, it was a success.
