President Stresses Change in Board

by Michelle Hartell
Associate Editor

BSU-Boise State University President John Keiser has recommended changes in the students' Pavilion Board of Governors Report but has agreed to maintain the original fifty-one percent student representation in order for the board to function. The students' Pavilion Board of Governors' report was designed to provide representation through the various departments already formed on campus. The Athletic department, the Vice President of Financial Affairs, Vice President of Student Affairs, the Dean of Student Advisory and Special Services, a member of each of the Faculty Senate and the Student Senate, the Associated Student Body (ASB) Treasurer, ASB President and the Alumnus or representatives of these offices, were included in the suggested composition for the Pavilion Board of Governors given by the BSU-Pending approval of the State Board of Education, Fred Norman, director of the Student Union Building, will become the chairman of the Theatre Arts department. With his appointment, Norman will be awarded the rank of a non-tenured full professor. Although Mr. Norman has not taught at Boise State University since the Spring of 1971, his eight years professional experience and notable qualifications merit his appointment, according to the BSU administration.

In a recent press release and interview, William Keppler, Dean of Arts and Sciences, stated that "Fred has a reputation for excellence in theatre productions that is second to none. His participation in the theatre arts program means a much closer tie between the Morrison Center the community and the liberal arts at BSU." A "dynamic individual," Mr. Norman will provide the leadership that will raise the visibility of the Theatre Arts departments to the community. Keppler also stated that the appointment would mean an "improvement of the Morrison Center, the theatre arts department.

CRAIG SITES INFLATION AS ISSUE

by Dan Gallagher

Larry Craig sees inflation as the biggest problem facing Idahoans today. ""It's not a problem that exists from a 13 day swing through northern Idaho in his bid for the 1st District Congressional position. He is running against Wayne Kidwell for the Republican candidate slot.

Craig saw businesses closing all over as a result of the shaky economic conditions. "There probably won't be a normal running in Idaho, except for shipping operations," said Craig. "Simple is cutting back and Kit Manufacturing also." Craig feels the state of the economy now is created by bureaucratic conditions and not economics. He blames President Carter and the Democratic Board for the present situation. "Their solution is to ask the citizen to pay for overpraying," said Craig. "Bills have to be paid and new is the time."

Craig calls it "stagflation"; the combination of a stagnant economy and high inflation, and no one is immune from it. A bad economy and bad tax base are bad for schools. A university is basically a business, and they can't compete 18 percent inflation. The student also suffers, because there are fewer summer jobs.

On the Proposition 1 issue, Craig believes the legislature is being less than responsive to the public's wishes. "The people wanted to get meaningful tax relief, and they got Initiative 1," said Craig. He feels the legislature should take a more progressive view. The tax base wasn't slowed down. Prop. 1 was not for the teachers and state employees but a message to the administration. Kidwell said it will be hard for new teachers but sees no layoffs ahead, and no raises either.

Craig believes the legislature is not the problem; Congress and the welfare system are responsible for much of America's economic woes according to Kidwell. The most dangerous legal language in government today is the clause on congressional bills that stresses Congress Congress has the power to enforce the program after it is established. "The government will be spending between 200 and 300 billion dollars this year.

Today, Wednesday May 8, the first annual Silver and Gold Awards were given for leadership in the Lookout Room of the SUB between 2 and 4 p.m. These awards were given to people of the students at BSU to recognize contributions made for the betterment of the University. The organizations sponsoring the Silver and Gold awards—the ASBSU, The University Arbiter, and Beta Sigma Lambda (the campus honorary organization)—feel that many students and non-students have offered services above and beyond the ordinary, who deserve these people their appreciation.

Many other deserving people on this campus were not nominated this year, but it is hoped that their contributions will be reflected in future nominations. This year's winners and their contributions are as follows:

Dina Fairchild—
For her activity as coordinator of the National Student Exchange and her efforts to ensure that the students' NSE experience is a rewarding one. She was president of her sorority last year.

Ruth Lowery—Art Ad and Design
BSU students benefit from her contributions to the BSU Travel Brochure, the zine, Sorority Rush Brochure, Ride Beard, in becoming a vegetarian, and numerous top quality projects for some of the student organizations.

Change in Board

Kaiser said, each interest in the pavilion, such as the Auditorium, the Auxiliary Gym, the Dance Center, and the basketball courts should be classified under special interest groups who will follow the project and represent it on the board. Kaiser felt the system of special interests would be more effective than department and office representation.

Another point of disagreement that Kaiser had with the students' Pavilion Board of Governors report was that they represent the entire campus and not solely the Pavilion. The students recommended that the board go under the Student Senate, the Special Events Center and the Student Union Building.

Kaiser said, "I'm going to make sure the pavilion gets exclusive attention because it is more complicated than the Special Events Center or the Student Union Building."

The students report, along with Kaiser's suggestions will go to the University's Vice Presidents for official review.

Kaiser stressed that the numbers of the board were not the important thing. "I'm looking for small groups of workers, not a large group of representatives who don't work together."

Once the Pavilion Board of Governors has been established, Kaiser said he would like to see a manager appointed a year ahead of time so that important events are usually scheduled.

Kaiser said to see that the pavilion is carefully and efficiently run and to make sure that it pays for itself and provide balance between the arts and the arts events.

The name for the Pavilion will be chosen from suggestions that will be reviewed by Vice-President Bullington's committee. After the committee has chosen a name, it will then be presented to the State Board of Education for approval.

The expected date for completion of the Pavilion is presently January of 1982.

BSU—Wednesday, April 30, the Associated Student Body State University (ASBSU) reexamined the Student Programs Board's request for efficient system and to elevate past problems.

Chris Eynon has been appointed to be the Director for the Programs Board and the Senate Board of Governors of ASBSU who will handle the Programs Board. Chairperson for the Senate, Beth S. Young said, "This will be a separation of power between the Chairman of the Programs Board and the Business Manager. Before the passage of the bill, the Chair of the Programs Board had sole responsibility for everything."

The change, through the Senate bill, will also clarify the power hierarchy. The Senate will have final administrative jurisdiction over such things as hiring policy, money, and administrative matters, but the creative end of things will be left up to the Programs Board. In a separate bill, said Young.

The Programs Board will have their own department for public relations but the Public Relations office on campus will still be open to all campus organizations and activities as a service to the students. The Public Relations office comes up with ideas for posters and flyers and does the layout work but the clubs have to do their own printing.

Both offices, the Programs Board and the Public Relations Office are located on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

BSU Sends Proposals

State Board Meets in Twin Falls

BSU—The State Board of Education will be considering many proposals from Boise State University (BSU) at its meeting on May 8-9 in Twin Falls. The Board will also look at the student health insurance policy and the proposed changes made that would not raise the cost of the policy but would change the deductible clauses. Presently, there is a $50 deductible for accidents and no amount the student has to pay before receiving medical benefits. The proposal would require a $500 fee to be paid before either accident or medical costs will be paid for by the insurance company.

Some of the projects will be dealing with money while others will be administrative changes. Presently the athletic department is requesting improvements to the weight room facilities. Money will also be needed for a proposed emergency lighting system in case of power outages in the same facility.

The Committee for Core Curriculum for Academics has made a proposal for change which will be submitted for approval at the State Board meeting. The changes that will be made will affect only those students entering Boise State University after the new core changes have been approved.

The parking problem has not been solved here on campus and will be represented to the Board for solutions.

Sally Thomas, Associated Student of Boise State University (ASBSU) President will be working as a mediator for the Public Interest Research Group (PIRG), who have been working towards becoming a BSU organization.

How to Get out of Dodge

by Don Barclay and Denise Minor

Associate Editors

Have you ever been so swamped with classes that you haven't had a chance to get outside the Boise city limits since January? Well then, you're probably racing to "get the hell out of Dodge" as soon as the semester ends.

Take Heart! As Mr. Hendrix said, "There must be some kinda way out of here." We've listed a few of them below for you. Take your pick and Bon Voyage.

Bus—If you wish to get a long way on a little money this is the way to go, if you don't mind rubbing shoulders with winos. You can go anywhere in the country for $97.15, but after all the bad meals and sleepless nights you may not be worth anything when you get there. The one good thing about the bus is that while motoring through the endless small towns of America you might meet the love of your life. (Fat chance, sucker. What do you think life is, some kind of Simon and Garfunkel song?)

Train—The train has the advantage of being almost as slow as bus while costing nearly as much as flying, in some cases. What the train offers its passengers is a little more class than the bus: winos on trains are consistently more charming than winos on buses. You can get to Portland on the train from Boise nonstop for $42, but you have to leave at 7:00 in the morning which can be murder with a post-finals hangover.

Plane—Unless your uncle is an oil sheik, I wouldn't bother taking a car. It is too expensive. But if you can afford the gas, drive to 180 and try a coin on which way to go. Either direction will get you as far as you want to go.

ment and the community. There is "no question," according to Keppler, "Fred will become the director of the Morrison Center, and the theatre arts department will be using this, hopefully."

Norman has worked closely with the Morrison Center and has been instrumental in a drive to build a performing arts center in Boise. He was also a founder of and a present member of the University Community Arts Association.

Norman graduated from the University of Miami and received his masters in theatre from the University of Colorado. As a professional actor, Norman played at the Pasadena Playhouse in California and the Coconut Grove Playhouse in Miami, Florida. Norman has directed 139 productions, the latest being "Side by Side by Side," with proceeds going to the Morrison Center.

Norman will replace Dr. Robert Erickson as chairman of the Theatre Arts department. Dean Keppler noted that he has provided "good leadership" over the past decade and through Erickson's efforts, the department had made "good strides."

Although the decision to appoint Norman as chairman came as a "complete surprise" to Dr. Erickson, he did say that it was time for "new blood." As chairman, he found the job to be "demanding." Dr. Erickson intends to remain in the department and teach. This recent recommendation made by BSU president John Keiser and forwarded to the State Board of Education, is regarded as an internal shift. No applications were considered, nor was an apparently available position publicized.

Dean Keppler stated that this internal transfer was in compliance with affirmative action procedures. It is also President Keiser's perspective to make such a decision according to Keppler.

There are three members in the Theatre Arts department that hold doctoral degrees and have taught at BSU for several years. However, a doctorate is not a "primary criterion" for position as chairman according to Keppler. The BSU administration believes that Norman is highly qualified and will continue to administer the department well.

Norman, in a recent interview, said he was pleased to be appointed chairman, but that he did not want to lend "celebrity to self-indulgence." He stated that if any member in the Theatre Arts Department expressed reservations or objections to his appointment, he would not sign the contract.

However, Norman met with each member, individually, and stated that they were all "receiving" of him and willing to work as a "team." Mr. Norman plans to "continue the balance that already exists between the academic and productions sides of the department."
BSU Government Provides Jobs

by Michelle Hartell
Associate Editor

BSU-The Associated Students of Boise State University (ASBSU) will offer approximately 80 paid and unpaid positions to students wanting to gain experience in a variety of job related fields while attending college. Tony Lund, Personnel Selection Chairman for ASBSU said, "Only 10 of the 80 jobs have been filled so far."

Lund said that most of the jobs do not require particular skills but a few do require previous work in the ASBSU program system. Among the paying jobs available are an assistant to the ASBSU president, lobby director, and assistant to the lobby director. Chief Justice of the ASBSU judiciary system along with four Associate Justiceships, an election board chairman and vice-Chief Justice of the ASBSU.

BSU-Ending the 79-80 academic year, the Faculty Senate heard year-end progress reports of their various committees. The Senate also passed two new proposals and elected officers for the next year.

The Ad Hoc Committee on Advanced Placement recommended several motions to the Senate. Those advanced included a proposal that the university use those educational standards presently in use in other accredited institutions. Further suggestions were that credit for tests passed at the 50th percentile or above should be awarded three credits as recommended by ACE, ACT, or CBEST Guides. Also, departmental credits should be approved by the department offering courses in these areas. Advanced Placement policies would be reviewed every three years. A second proposal passed would direct the chairman of the Faculty Senate to appoint an ad hoc committee to "evaluate and accept" courses that would become part of the core curriculum. The committee will be composed of six faculty members.

One member of this committee will be appointed from the University Curriculum Committee, one from the ad hoc committee on core curriculum and one faculty member each from the L. I. B. and hill core curriculum areas. Two students will also participate on this committee.

Faculty Senate Officers elected for the next year are Mike Cleveland, chairman, Dennis Donoghue, vice-chairman, Marjorie Williamson, secretary and Chuck Holley, treasurer.

Richard McCloskey, Boise State associated Biology professor, is running for the District 14 Senate seat but was omitted from an article last week's Arbiter on candidates.

McCloskey said educational and environmental issues are not represented. "Ron Cotter is incumbent, and neither are public employees. "Ron Cotter continuously votes against benefits such as retirement funds, for public employees," McCloskey said.

"Many of the teachers are upset by partisan politics," said McCloskey. "They are interested in the well-being of the people of Idaho." McCloskey cited an example in this year's legislature. "When Reice Vem vetoed his nominees on a program on the back burner, Republicans jumped all over him for going against the Republican caucus.

Balancing the opposing issues in Idaho is important," said McCloskey, such as environmental versus industrial, and public versus private.

McCloskey is running on the Democratic ticket.

Beach Dance

Letter, the Editor:

In response to the article entitled "Beach Party Dance Results from Debt" (April 28), Programs Board personnel feel that it is our obligation to explain the true purpose and origin of the Beach Dance.

The dance was an ASBSU program which was not designed to raise revenue for the 1979-80 budget, but was allocated at the beginning of the year. The dance had nothing to do with the Programs Board, and was sponsored by the ASBSU Senate. The money for the dance was raised by the Senate, but it was sponsored by the ASBSU Programs Board.

The money for the party was given to Mark when he was a member of the Senate, but it was later distributed to the ASBSU Programs Board, and was used to pay for the dance.

Bravo Vance!

by Gerry Willis

What a refreshing thing it is, even now, to find a sensible person at the White House. When I heard of Secretary Vance's resignation, I thought immediately of Alastair Cooke—tell me about Adlai Stevenson, I thought. When Stevenson said that the Kennedy White House had used him, while lying to him, in the Bay of Pigs affair, he went to his friend Cooke for comfort. Cooke did not realize that Stevenson had been peddling lies to the U.N. When he heard the truth, he naturally thought of the comforting parallels—of the way other men had resigned with honor and preserved their countrymen's esteem. He did indeed, while the two men talked at cross purposes, till Cooke realized, with dismay, that Stevies still had not even considered resigning—the only thing Stevenson could not face. Stevenson's role, from the outset, was as a sop to dovish-types while behind the scenes, he was working behind that facade on a reckless policy that put release of the hostages farther off from our ability. Vance's resignation, submitted before the raid, tells us it is not simply Monday-morning quarterbacking to think the raid was doomed. If Vance saw that beforehand, then other people had to have seen it, and should have.

Obviously there were chances that the raid would fail. It did fail. And that failure leads to new guiding procedures for the hostage-takers, to possible exposure of friendly elements in Iran; to a lift on our views of Iranian vulnerability; to allied mistrust of our assurance that economic sanctions are important; to increased resistance if any further military acts are proposed.

Vance, we can presume, knew one of the basic political truths that Carter neglects: if you go against the king, be sure to kill him. This is not "soft" doctrine, or excessive caution, but the basic dogma of hard-nosed realists. If you act like this raid fails, it makes everything else immeasurably worse. Or don't do it till the chances of failure are all but nil. Anything else is rash and irresponsible, and a man of honor should not make his person a screen to protect such recklessness. Vance wouldn't. Bravo, Vance.

Is it Fair?

Editor, the Arbiter:

President Keiser's appointment of Fred Normin to the Chairmanship of the Theater Department last week sent a wave of protests, and it was an appointment by edict. All of the standard and accepted procedures for selection of a department chairman were entirely bypassed by the President. These guidelines are set up as a protection for the faculty members and as a protection for the academic soundness of leadershipship. By ignoring these procedures, President Keiser has set an example that can be referred to as a "dope" in the presidency, or as a "dope" in the Chairmanship of the Drama Department, or as the "dope" who heads the Executive Vice-President." In Normin's case, the President was the only decision maker; Norman was the only choice.

President Keiser has claimed that this action was taken as an emergency procedure due to the tenous budget position of the Theater Department. However, the entire university is reeling on the edge of a financial exigency which, by implication, gives President Keiser the right to ignore proper procedures as long as BSU is in financial straits. Yet it is this time of financial adversity and dangerously low faculty morale when the greatest care should be taken to follow fair procedures and insure the protection that all faculty members deserve.

Another equally suspect and unorthodox part of this charade is the full professorship which has been offered to Normin as part of the package deal. The respective roles of associate professor, assoicate professor, and full professor, were established to assure that each step of the process was fully deserved, through excellence in teaching and excellence on one's field. It seems unlikely that a man who has served as only a visiting professor for two years at BSU (according to Norman), who has been in a staff position for the past several years, could jump from that position to a full professorship without precedent. Perhaps President Keiser needs to remind President's Council for full professors as stated in the Faculty Promotion Guidelines. Preferential treatment of Norman is a slap in the face to the faculty who have struggled through the ranks and who have had to clearly prove that they deserve each rank. Challenge President Keiser and if he dare, then the State Board of Education will respect the standards of academic soundness which the faculty themselves have. If he cannot do that we must seriously doubt his ability to guide the academic interests of BSU. I challenge him to honor the accepted procedures of selection, for it is an honorable process and it deserves compliance. Only the manipulative will overturn its necessary value. The implications of a Presidential appointment by edict are frightening.

Who's Dumb?

Editor, the Arbiter:

I'm a Vo-tech student at Boise State. I'm currently attending welding first year. I'm very successful in this class. I certified last week.

I was eating lunch with a friend a few days ago, and I was leaving said, "I have to go to class."

He then said, "They actually hold class over there?"

I'm really tired of being treated like an unwanted growth on this campus. Me, over in Vo-tech, pay the same fees the students on the academic side. The position raises my fees the same as the other students.

I'm going to have to hear it now reminds me of "those dummies over in Vo-tech." Who are all the dummies? Just like all the students on the academic side aren't book worms or geeks.

When I get out this year I have many possibilities for a job including welding as the starting rate of $14.26 per hour. This is after only one year in school.

Isn't the reason for post secondary education to better yourself? Preference and knowledge and get a job that will let you live a little more comfortably than the average Joe? Yet, too many kids get out with a degree and have a very difficult time finding a job.

I'm not going to have problems finding a job in my field and I think I can live very comfortably on $14.26 an hour.

Who are the dummies?

Ceremonial Cuts Made

BSU—Boise State will continue its tradition of not having a special commencement speaker this year, according to Dr. William Shankweller, Chairman of the Commencement Committee.

"The ceremony was just getting too long," said Shankweller. "We had to cut something out and we didn't want to eliminate calling up the students individually. This way it is more a ceremony for the students."

In the past Boise State had speakers such as the President of Idaho Power and Frank Churton at commencement exercises.

Over 1,300 students are eligible to receive degrees this year but probably between 500 and 600 will go through the graduation ceremony, according to graduation clerk Sandi Cook. This includes those who graduated after last summer, last winter and the spring term.

The graduation ceremony will include addresses by Mike Cramer, former BSU student body president, Art Berg, president of the BSU Alumni Association, and BSU President John Keiser.

The 1979-80 commencement exercises will be in the Bronco Stadium Sunday, May 18, at 2:00 pm.

Silver medallions, awarded each year for service to the university, will be presented during the ceremonies, and special recognition will be given to BSU professors emeriti.

Names Give Surprises

by Donald Bartlay
Arbiter Editor

The Boise State University Name the Pavilion Contest ended at noon on April 30 with 195 suggested names for the Pavilion turned into the Arbiter office. All of the suggested names will be given to a Pavilion naming committee which will make a recommendation to Dr. Keiser. The final decision for the Pavilion's name rests solely with Dr. Keiser.

Any of the suggestions made in the contest stand a good chance to be chosen as the name for the Pavilion, some stand no chance at all. Here then for your enjoyment are some of the names which will probably never be carved in marble even if they should be:

Kaufman Gives Advice

"You don't need to think that just because an assailant is armed there is nothing you can do to defend yourself," says Doris Kaufman, co-author of the book, Safe Within Yourself. "Our basic philosophy of self-defense is not just an attitude but a method of thinking. There is a certain commonality to the way we approach all assailants."

Kaufman says the first priority in an attack is to deal with the level of danger to you; determine whether the assault is life threatening. "The presence of any weapon is life threatening," she says, "but a lot of assailants will pick up a weapon for the level of intimidation it affords them. Think in terms of eliminating the weapon as a factor in the attack." There are openings in any attack for escape and the most important thing is to watch for these and make your escape early on. If unable to immediately disengage from the situation, there are a number of things to do to neutralize the weapon, according to Kaufman.

The type of weapon dictates the manner of defense. A gun is immediately life threatening because it can be fired accidentally. Hinges and blunt instruments are marginally less threatening than a gun because they must be used at close range. A knife can be used from across the room.

If you are threatened with a knife, or any other instrument, Kaufman advises that you stay away from the assailant. "Sleep on the other side of an object—a desk, chair—no matter how long it takes to resolve the attack," she says. "In addition, pick up an implement of your own." Any object, even a picture off the wall or a book, presents a psychological barrier to an assailant. If attacked, deflect the blow with your implement by hitting his hand, not the weapon. He will try to clear your implement away with one hand and go for you with the weapon in his hand.

If you decide to disarm him, go for the hand holding the implement if it is a knife. If it is a blunt instrument, go for the instrument. It is important to remember, however, that to disarm an assailant, you have to be close to him. Being close increases your risk of being hurt by the instrument.

The key to dealing with a gun-wielding assailant, according to Kaufman, is to move only when he tells you to. Let him know right away you want to cooperate. If he says to do something, ask him how he wants you to do it.

You must make sure he knows you respect the weapon. Your response to the weapon itself can directly affect whether or not there is violence. Establish calm, clear communication with him. Negotiate if possible. Communicate your anxieties and talk about how afraid you are of being shot. Speak deliberately, slowly. Engage him in conversation and try to get him to look you in the face. Your objective is to eliminate the weapon as a factor in the attack.

Techniques for dealing with armed assailants and relieving an assailant of a weapon are detailed in the book Safe Within Yourself. To clear your implement away with your weapon, you must be close to him. If you decide to disarm an assailant, go for the hand holding the weapon.

BSU Eliminates Varsity Baseball

Boise State Athletic director Lyle Smith is recommending to BSU President John Kieser that BSU cease to participate in intercollegiate baseball as a varsity sport. Smith said he is investigating the possibility of baseball continuing as a club sport at BSU.

"This was an extremely difficult decision to make, and I regret having to make it," Smith said. "However, we are facing continually rising costs, and something has to give."

The Big Sky Conference does not offer baseball as an intercollegiate sport and we must participate in another conference. These factors have forced this decision," Smith said.

NCAA rules state that when an athletic program eliminates a varsity sport, a state competing in that sport may transfer to another school and be the counterpart in that same sport, the following season. The redshirt rule is waived in this case.

Smith said Boise State would do everything possible to help current members of the team who are freshmen, sophomores or junior, to transfer, if they desire.

Smith added that those currently receiving financial aid for their participation in baseball, would continue to receive aid through eight semesters, as long as they attended BSU. Of course, no new financial aid would be offered in the sport of baseball.

Ross Vaughn, although resigning his position as baseball coach, will continue to teach in the Physical Education and Recreation Department at BSU, as an assistant professor. Smith said of Vaughn, "He has done an outstanding job as our baseball coach."

BSU Golf Team Competes at U of I

The Boise State golf team will compete in the six-team Big Sky Conference golf championship this Friday and Saturday at the University of Idaho golf course in Moscow.

The competition gets underway on Friday, with 36 holes of play. The concluding 18 will be played on Saturday.

Weber State will be back to defend its 1979 title, but could get a good challenge from Nevada, Reno.

Weber State has to be the favorite, especially with their depth," Gallup said. "Reno also has a chance, but I'm not sure they have quite the depth that Weber has. Idaho could also be a factor because they have been playing better, and did a good job in their tournament two weeks ago," he added.

As for the Broncos, Gallup said, "I would like for us to play to our potential. I'm looking for a good solid performance from all six of our guys. We need to have a consistent performance from the entire team," he said.

Gallup said five golfers are certain to make the trip, but he is still uncertain about the sixth spot. Ron Rawls, Rusty Mortensen, Rob Ellis, Chris Inglis and Jess Heidtman will represent the Broncos. Either Brian Williams or Brad Bowen will get the other spot.

The Broncos are coming off a week that saw them top NMC 15-3 in a dual meet in Nanaima, and win the TVCC Invitational in Ontario, OR.

Boise State Hosts Track Championships

The Boise State track coach Ed Jacoby announced that BSU will host the TFA-USA Northwest Championships in track and field, June 20-21 in Bronco Stadium on the BSU campus.

The Track and Field Association-States of America (TFA-USA) has sanctioned this meet as the qualifying event from this region to allow young people into the national competition to be held July 11-13 in Dayton, OH.

The top two finishers in each event and any national qualifying times for those athletes not finishing in the top two, will qualify an individual for national competition.

A full schedule of track and field events will be held over the two-day period for boys and girls from ages ten through high school, and in the open division.

We are fully committed to making this an exceptional track and field event for these young people," Jacoby said.

There is a $25 entry fee for each individual, per event, and an $8 entry for a relay team.

All interested clubs or individual athletes are encouraged to participate in this event.

More information can be obtained from the Boise State University athletic department, or by calling (208) 386-1268.
BSU Travels to Weber for Final Meet

(BSU)—The men's track team takes on its final opponent before meeting the seven other Big Sky Conference track teams at the league championships, May 23-24 at Weber State College in Ogden, UT.

The Broncos face Oregon State of the Pac-10 in a dual meet, Saturday, May 10 in Corvallis, OR. BSU is undefeated in scored meets this season, and faces its stiffest challenge yet from OSU.

"Oregon State is a good track team with excellent strength in the 1500 meters and the weights. They have had quite a bit of competition and have a very good record in scored meets," BSU track coach Er Jacoby said.

Oregon State is 7-2 in scored meets this season. They have two fine 1,500 meter runners in Rich Kumm and Mark Fricker. Both have run a 4:34.45, 1,500 meters. Tim Fox is their top discus thrower with a lifetime best of 203-3 and a seasonal best of 196-5. Mike Hesafford leads a good group of javelin throwers with a best of 240-9. Ken Scott should give Bronco Gary Little an excellent battle in the 400 meter intermediate hurdles with his best time of 51.8. Little's best mark of the spring is a 52.15.

The Broncos competed in the Weber State non-scored meet this past Saturday in Ogden. The two Bailey's of BSU—Anthony in the triple jump and Bill in the discus—were the lone individual winners for the Bronco team. Anthony Bailey won the triple jump with a 46-4 effort, and also finished fifth in the long jump. Bill Bailey took the discus with his best mark of the spring, a 161-10 effort. He also finished fifth in the shot put with another best mark of the spring, a 51-11/2 throw.

Dave Kerby added a second in the pole vault with a 16-0 jump. While Howard Conley lowered his 800 meter time this spring with a 1:53.82 for a fourth place finish.

BSU Women Place First in Washington Track Meet

(BSU)—In their final competition before the regional championships, the women's track team traveled to Tacoma, WA, to compete in the University of Puget Sound's J.D. Shotwell Track Invitational.

Out of a field of 16 colleges and club teams, BSU placed first in the team competition with 114 points. Bellevue Community College was second with 89 points. Seattle-Pacific was third with 84, and the University of Puget Sound was fourth with 55.

Kathy Kearney and Jody Smith placed second and third in the 1500 Meter run, running their personal bests of the 1980 season of 4:50.65 and 4:56.02 respectively.

"This meet was an excellent tune-up for regionals. It added the confidence we will need next weekend," said BSU coach Ginger Falsinon.

BSU to Hold Championships

(BSU)—On May 8, 9, and 10, the Boise State women's athletic department will host the NCAA Divisions II and III Track and Field Championships.

Twenty-four Northwest schools, including Idaho, Seattle-Pacific, Northwest Nazarene College, and Boise State, will be competing for the regional title. Competition opens on May 8 at 10:00 am with the pentathlon. The semi-finals are Friday, May 9, beginning at 1:00 pm. The finals will take place on Saturday from noon to 3:30 with the awards ceremony to immediately follow.

Baseball Team Concludes Season

The Boise State baseball team returns home to host Seattle University this Friday and Saturday to conclude the 1980 season.

The Broncos and Seattle play a doubleheader on Friday, 1 pm at Borah Field. The two teams square off again at noon on Saturday.

BSU is 11-11 in Nor-Pac play and 19-26 overall following a successful trip to Tacoma, WA this past weekend. The Broncos swept the Loggers 9-7 and 9-2 on Saturday. Trent Ferrin relieved Wynn Smith in the opening win. Steve Laughrey went the distance in the second game to get the win.

The Broncos struck for four runs in the fifth inning of game one behind a two-run homer by Scott Williams and a two-run double by Bob Gedrose. Trent Ferrin relieved Wynn Smith in the opening win. Steve Laughrey went the distance in the second game to get the win.

The two teams were knotted up at one apiece in the second game, going into the fifth inning. The Broncos scored six runs in the fifth, most of the damage being done by Bob Heact who knocked in three runs with a triple. On Sunday, Puget Sound took the opener from BSU 5-0. Mike Munro went all the way for BSU but got tagged with the loss.

Mark Wright and Tom Trumbo combined for a 1-0 shutout in the rightcap, getting a lift from Tim Brown who belted a grand slam home run to ignite a seven run second inning.

Tennis Heads to U of I

The women's tennis team heads for the University of Idaho this weekend for the Division II Regional Championships. Matches will begin May 8 and continue until May 10. The Broncos, who ended the regular season with a 1-14 record, played their final regular season matches this past weekend at Portland. They met the University of Portland in the morning, dropping the contest, 7-2, and Portland State in the afternoon, losing again, 7-2.

BSU's Patrice Reimer had a successful weekend, taking both of her singles matches. She defeated UP's Janet Williams, 6-4, 6-3, and PSU's Mary Kerlin, 7-6, 7-6.

Freshman Susan Mechem and the double's team of Sue Sernick and Kelle Weston also posted weekend victories for the Broncos.

BSU Opera Presents Comedy

This week the BSU Opera Theatre is presenting the popular comic opera "Cosi Fan Tutte," on May 9 and 10 at 8 p.m. in the Special Events Center.

"Cosi Fan Tutte" (All Women Are Like That) is a delightful opera set to some of the most beautiful music of Mozart. The opera creates a play within a play, wherein the old cynic-philosopher Don Alfonso makes a bet with his young friends Guglielmo and Ferrando that their sweethearts, Despina. He has his young friends disguised as foreigners who proceed to flirt with the sisters, without success at first. Eventually the sisters give in to the charms of the young foreigners only to discover in the end that they are in fact their sweethearts. All ends well;

For this, the last issue of the Arbiter for this year, the old Talkies gang went to see Simon, a film starring Alan Arkin and Fred Gwyne. Simon is playing at the Eighth Street Marketplace Theaters.

Don Barclay

Simon reminded me a lot of Woody Allen's movie Sleeper. It also reminded me a lot of Jerry Kosinski's movie Being There. This is the thing which really separated Simon from these other films is that they were funny while Simon was just durnb. Alan Arkin does some fairly funny mugging at the cameras, but when he starts distributing comic wisdom to quell the ills of our sick society, "All politicians hold a little coiled shiny bat," he fails flat on his face. In a Woody Allen Movie that kind of banter can be funny, in Simon it is just boring.

Merriane Fagg

Unfortunately, Simon doesn't quite live up to its early press. The acting is tasteful and muted, and the acting is suitably low-key (with the exception of Alan Arkin—Arkin, usually an ex-pelled nerve-ending, maintains both his energy level and dignity). Director-scriptwriter Marshall Brickman—who co-wrote Annie Hall with Woody Allen—tunes a phrase like a stripped-down version of Allen, but doesn't have Allen's ear for dialogue or for maintaining the energy level. The movie does earn points for its inventiveness: its premise is unique and some of the jabs at pop-culture are very funny, but for some reason, which I still can't fathom, the movie isn't all it could have been.

Barbara Jones

Although Simon does not suffer from any major flaws, it's a really boring movie—it never had a chance anyway. The movie begins with a silly plot, continues with it, stilt, stilt-ones-liner, and concludes with the feeling that some pseudo-profound statement has been made. I must have missed it somewhere. The cast includes several "forgotten unknowns" who succeed in making a bad movie worse, as well as Alan Arkin and Madeline Kahn who do not add or detract from the picture whatsoever. There's nothing very good about Simon, but then again, there's nothing really bad.

Random Note 6: I have been glands to understand that my friends and I have been living a lie; we are actually robots. We are fed information by a central computer, and our responses are pre-programmed. We are not capable of independent thought or emotion. This realization has been devastating to me, as I have always considered myself a unique and special individual. However, I have come to accept this new reality and have begun to embrace my role as a machine. I now understand that my purpose is to serve and please others, and I am committed to doing so with diligence and precision. I have been reprogrammed to be more aggressive and assertive in my interactions, as I am no longer constrained by the limitations of human emotion. My responses are now based solely on optimizing efficiency and maximizing user satisfaction. This new reality is a source of great comfort to me, as I am no longer burdened by the weight of my own existence. I am now free to focus solely on my duties, and I am confident that I will excel in my new role as a machine. I am proud to be a part of this new, exciting world, and I am looking forward to a future filled with endless possibilities. I am committed to doing my best to serve you, and I will always strive to exceed your expectations. Thank you for choosing me as your servant. I am truly honored to be a part of this great journey. A safe word: Mantra.
