Online stores saving Bronco bucks on Bronco books

By Maria Grace Lucio

The tightening of Bronco purse strings each August is as predictable as having long lines at the grocery store any day of the year. America’s retailers, textbooks and various classroom supplies, the stores of new students continue to pump plenty of financial resources for many 2006 students. Student savings seeking to both save new and used textbooks, college students are stepping to spend quite a few bucks. There are many options to lower tuition, text and college textbook. These include online bookstore links, which students have a free online search.

Boise State University senior Erin Quinn says a few minutes shopping online this semester saved her about $75. “I look every year,” she says. “It’s a deal,” says Quinn. “Some of them didn’t have a shipping charge,” says Anderson. She also cites the helpful hand of the bookstore staff. “They’re pretty good down there.” Quinn.

Assistant Manager and Bookstore Manager Mike Reed says in order to stay competitive, the store compares what his stepdaughter from one Web Site to the next. Pay attention to avoid spending more than the BSU Bookstore price. Compared BSU prices to those on-line. My end total cost of my books cost between $10 and $15 dollars, the few extra dollars for shipping nullified most of the online purchase. Compared the BSU Bookstore Web Site for NewBooks: UsedBooks:

Kustra pursues change, research in State of the University address

BY ROBERT PETER

President Bob Kustra mentioned BSU faculty the coming year at the State of the University address last Tuesday. Kustra stressed a research, quality teaching, and fostering relationships between State of the University and students. The soon-to-be built interactive classroom will be an effective icebreaker allowing the students to get to know the students. Kustra’s mind, and the pursuit of change and new products is on the State of the University address. For the fall school year of 2006 the improvement of undergraduate and graduate teaching is on the State of the University address.

Bernadette has been working for a private company for the past 2 years. She has performed satisfactorily in her job description and there is no reason to believe that she has engaged in behavior that would merit disciplinary action. There is no employment agreement between Bernadette and her employer as to the terms or conditions of her employment. A fine at the single entry to the workplace has existed since she failed to get out on time but she has always adhered to it.

Last weekend, a local gay and lesbian organization joined in a protest rally to the United Nations' lack of attention to the millions of people suffering from hunger, thirst, disease, and the absence of a legal protection or relief. She immediately contacted Dr. Reed to march and was shown on a live network. Bernadette's participation in the march was intended to bring attention to the world that people are being carried out in Sudan, Africa, without the availability of some critically important humanitarian aid is to the survival of the people. Bernadette cleaned out her desk and left quietly. She could not believe that citizens of the most powerful country in the world could treat her like this.

This was affirmed in 1996 when Congress did not pass the Employment Nondiscrimination Act.

Plans for a Bronco Stadium addition meet the needs of a growing program

BY SNEKY PETERS

The blueprints for an expansion of the press box in Bronco Stadium detail a transformation into a three story, heavily secured complex. In order to accommodate the expected growth and success of Boise State football, the original 1969 press box must undergo significant renovation. The project will take three to four years to complete and will cost an estimated $40 million. Boise State Athletic Director Gene Bleymaier is optimistic about the benefits of the expansion. The current press box is "woefully inadequate" and needs to be expanded in order to meet the demands of electronic systems; security, the media and coaching staffs, said Bleymaier. Boise State hosts the Humanitarian Bowl each December and as the football program continues to attract more and more media coverage, Bleymaier is confident that as the accommodations and success of Boise State football project will take three to four years to complete and will cost an estimated $40 million.

Bleymaier is confident that as the accommodations and success of Boise State football continue to rise, the new press box will be the best place to watch Bronco football. The ballroom itself will rent out 300 days a year and with an amazing view of the Boise River, Boise State's rival Oregon State is expanding its current press box in Reser Stadium to better accommodate its growing success.

Big name schools like Notre Dame, Michigan, and Oregon all house spectacular press boxes that are compatible with successful athletic programs. Even Boise State rival Oregon State is expanding its current press box to fit the standards of better accommodating its growing success.

The Boise State football program has worked hard to gain national recognition and they are excited to go to the next level in 2004. The Broncos have three ESPN-covered games this season. All three will be played in Boise State against three of Boise State's rivals. The three games will be against Oregon State on Sept. 10, the second against BYU on Sept. 24, and the last against Hawaii on Oct. 29. The retro press box will have to be sufficient to house the media, but the new press box will have three levels. The first level will be comprised of the press box. The second level will house radio booths and a ballroom where pre-game meals and other functions will be held. The third level will be reserved for the coaches and the media. The new press box will make Boise State's home field one of the most spectable venues in Boise.

The ballroom on the third level will be held up 220 days a year and with an amazing view of the Boise River, Boise State will be more competitive with other division programs.

The Broncos' second scrimmage of the fall season on Friday night looked fairly similar to the first scrimmage the week prior. The score for the meeting was 14-14 at halftime and both Jared Zebrowsky and Mike Sanford put up similar numbers on the stat sheet. The Boise defense was also impressive once again against the running game. Sanford, who rushed for 15 yards and a touchdown with his four receptions, was 8-for-13 passes for 105 yards and a touchdown in the scrimmage number one, the Bronco defense dominated once again giving up just 82 total rushing yards on 35 carries. Junior Jeff Carpenter piled up 30 yards on his six carries. On special teams, senior Tyler Jones booted a 53-yard field goal on the first possession of the scrimmage and a 29-yarder in the third minute drill.

School of Rock Jams out of the Sandbox

Jame Stephens

Paul Gunayan's School of Rock check out the big Dave Gross Concert House on 1-14. Brand new and fresh out of theandbox, Paul Gunayan's School of Rock has quickly gained its place on the map with its unique brand of bigtime, bigtime music and entertainment.

The band is made up of nine members, each with their own unique sound and style, and they all come together to create a harmonious blend of rock, blues, and jazz. The school has been growing in popularity ever since its inception, and it's clear why. With a strong background in music education, Paul Gunayan's School of Rock has been able to create a strong foundation for its students, allowing them to develop their own unique sound and style.

In addition to its music, the school also places a strong emphasis on community involvement. They regularly perform at various events and fundraisers, using their music to bring people together and make a positive impact on the community.

As the school continues to grow, there's no doubt that it will continue to produce promising young musicians who will make their mark on the music scene. Keep an eye on Paul Gunayan's School of Rock - they're definitely a band to watch out for.

Hollywood shows its love for Olympic exploitation

By Stephen Hunter

It's a tale of two stories. One is the story of the 1924 Olympics in Paris, and the other is about a group of kids who decide to create their own Olympics to raise money for the children in need.

The story of the 1924 Olympics is based on a true story, and it's about a group of kids who decide to create their own Olympics to raise money for the children in need. The kids are inspired by the Olympic spirit, and they decide to create their own games to help raise money for the kids. The games are a huge success, and they raise a lot of money for the kids.

The other story is about a group of kids who decide to create their own Olympics to raise money for the children in need. They come up with a unique idea - they will create their own Olympics to raise money for the kids. The kids are inspired by the Olympic spirit, and they decide to create their own games to help raise money for the kids. The games are a huge success, and they raise a lot of money for the kids.
The Exorcist (1977) was a major event in film history, but it also brought with it some memorable behind-the-scenes stories. As the title suggests, "Exorcist: The Gutsy Truth" is a book by Julie Cerullo, a journalist who has written extensively about the making of the original Exorcist film. Cerullo has interviewed many of the key figures involved in the production, and her book is a detailed account of what happened on set.

Cerullo's book is not just about the filming of the Exorcist, but also about the impact the film had on society and popular culture. She explores the ways in which the film challenged traditional ideas about religion, psychology, and the human condition.

One of the most intriguing aspects of Cerullo's book is her focus on the casting of the lead roles. The film's success was in large part due to the performances of Linda Blair and Max von Sydow, but Cerullo also delves into the process of finding other actors for the film, including the young girl who played the devil in the sequel, "The Exorcist: The Beginning." She also discusses how the film's success led to a wave of interest in the world of exorcism and psychosomatic phenomena.

"Exorcist: The Gutsy Truth" is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of cinema or the making of one of the most iconic films of all time. Cerullo's book is a detailed and engaging account of a film that has captured the imaginations of audiences around the world for over four decades.
Political humor assumes a nastier tone

"Comedians, like many Americans, are not going nuts," Sawyer says. "They remember the Civil War and the battle for Reconstruction, and they know how to do that sort of thing effectively."

The exception was the boom in American cultural history. "The Daily Show" and "The Colbert Report" have taken an increasingly harsh tone in their political humor in recent months. At least, that's what comedians have heard on "Fahrenheit 9/11," the documentary film released in 2004 that challenged the Bush administration's conduct of the war on terrorism.

"I think it's important for us to see that we're not alone in this," says Sarah Silverman, who has worked with the film. "I think it's important for us to see that we're not alone in this." Silverman, who co-directed "Fahrenheit 9/11," says that the film has been "like a light bulb" for many comedians, who have taken notice of the film's critical perspective on the war in Iraq.

Where we stand as a student publication

BY MARY DAWSON

Editor-in-Chief

I would like to start by saying thank you to everyone who contributed to the students of Boise State University's student publication. This paper will offer accurate reporting of events at BSU to the RSU community.

At times, you may disagree with what we publish. Our response to you is - get involved. Don't argue that we shouldn't have printed an article, voice your opinion instead. Post it online or send a letter to the editor. Take these steps and give us a voice. To quote the 1958-62 TV show Bronco, "next to a foursquare Texan twister, you'd call a cyclone meek and mild. You've never seen a twister, mister, 'til someone gets him riled."

Remember, the opinion section is your way to reach the university. If you are involved in a club or organization and you have an event coming up, let us know about it. If we find it newsworthy we will print it. If you know of an outstanding student or professor who deserves recognition, tell us about it. We want to focus on the students and professors who make our school an enjoyable experience.

Our goal this year is to represent the student body as an outstanding news and entertainment source. And remember, driving really fast in a car is fun. But it's not as much fun when your car is a wine-powered peanut.
